HEALEY BALKS; 'MUST GO' IS EDICT

PLAN TO END POWER HELD BY SOLID SOUTH

Republicans Want Congress to Change the Election Laws.

BY ARTHUR SEARS HENNING.

Washington, D. C., Dec. 9.—[Special.]—Before congress concludes its consideration of the pending corrupt practices bill a good deal of light is destined to be shed upon the part played by the solid south in the election of our presidents.

The Republicans expect to demonstrate that had it not been for the disfranchisement of the Negroes, who are Republican, and for the unduly large representation of the south in the electoral college, President Wilson would have been defeated.

To curb the disfranchisement of the Negroes the Republicans are advocating federal control of national elections along the line of the famous "force" bill of more than two decades ago.

The Republicans also will urge enforcement of the constitutional provision for the reduction of the congressional representation of states disfranchising voters, which if carried out would automatically reduce the representation of such states in the electoral college.

MAY DROP ELECTORS.

A score of bills to abolish the electoral college and base the election of the president entirely on the popular vote have been introduced, one of the most notable of these measures having been offered by Senator Shafroth of Colorado, a Democrat.

Hughes carried the eastern states by a plurality of 388,000, the middle western states by 227,000, a total excess over Wilson of 613,000. Wilson carried the far west by a plurality of 374,000.

The country outside of the solid south, where the voting is perfunctory and the result predetermined, preferred Hughes to Wilson by a majority of 118 electoral votes and a plurality of 239,000 popular votes. This was the verdict of 15,000,000 voters, yet it could not stand against the foreordained judgment of 2,000,000 voters in the south yielding Mr. Wilson 139 electoral votes and a plurality of 771,000 popular votes.

MILLIONS OF VOTES.

There are 1,927,000 male Negroes of voting age in the southern states, 75 per cent of whom, according to the Republicans, have been disfranchised by state laws. Even if only 1,000,000 have been disfranchised it would appear that several of these states were won by the democrats by virtue of such disfranchisement and that in any event the division of the popular vote would have been much closer had the Negroes been allowed to vote.

The constitution provides that when the right to vote "is denied to any of the male inhabitants of such state, being 21 years of age and citizens of the United States, or in any way abridged, except for participation in rebellion or other crime, the basis of representation therein shall be reduced in the proportion which the number of such male citizens shall bear to the whole number of male citizens 21 years of age in such state."

BIG EFFECT ON CONGRESS.

If this provision were enforced by congress the solid south would lose, it is estimated, from fifty to eighty members of congress and an equal number of votes in the electoral college. The Negroes are counted when it is to the advantage of southern states to get as many representatives in congress as possible and counted out when it would be to their disadvantage to record their Republican votes.

Wilson started in the recent presidential race with an advantage over Hughes consisting of the 139 electoral votes of the solid south. If southern representation had been adjusted to the volume of disfranchisement by the elimination of fifty votes Wilson would have been defeated in the electoral college, though he still would have had a plurality of the popular vote.

HUGHES MIGHT HAVE WON.

Had the Negroes been permitted to vote Hughes probably would have had a plurality of the popular vote, though Wilson might still have been elected by the electoral vote.

The south which cast 2,000,000 votes had 139 votes in the electoral college. The middle west has the same number of electoral votes, but cast 6,000,000 popular votes.

Illinois with twenty-nine electors cast nearly 2,000,000 votes for Hughes and Wilson combined, while Texas with 286,- popular votes cast twenty votes in the electoral college.

ULTIMATUM TO CONSTANTINE; MEANS BREAK?

Allies Demand Release of Venizelists; Think King Will Join Teutons.

PIRAEUS, Greece, via London, Dec. 10.—A peremptory note delivered by the allies to King Constantine today demands immediate release of the 1,600 Venizelos adherents now held prisoner by the Royalist forces.

It is generally believed that King Constantine will refuse to accede to these demands and will retire to the interior of Greece, seeking to effect a juncture with German-Bulgarian forces northward.

CONSTANTINE DEFIANT.

LONDON, Dec. 10, 4:19 a. m.—King Constantine has informed one of the legations at Athens that he would join with Germany if the entente allies break off diplomatic relations with him, according to a dispatch from Piraeus, by way of Syra island, Friday to Lloyd's Weekly News.

20,000 TROOPS IN ATHENS.

News dispatches to the Weekly Dispatch from Syra island, also dated Friday, say that reports from Athens state that troops are arriving there continuously and that twenty thousand have gathered in and around the capital.

The allied ministers, it is added, asked for an explanation of this concentration, and Premier Lambros replied that it was for the preservation of order. The government press in Athens, the reports continue, admit that 1,600 followers of former Premier Venizelos have been seized.

It is added that the mayor of Athens, who is 75 years old, along with 188 others, have been committed to prison on charges of high treason and intent to commit murder.

GREECE WARNS ENTENTE.

AMSTERDAM, Dec. 9.—Greece has notified the entente powers that it will make no further concessions to them and that the government will regard any further demands as a cause of war, according to the Budapest newspaper Azest. The newspaper published this information as a message from Sofia, Bulgaria.

GREECE BLAMES ALLIES.

Washington, D. C., Dec. 9.—A statement regarding the clash at Athens following the allied demand that Greece give up arms and ammunition to the allies was presented to the state department today by the Greek legation. It declared full responsibility for the incident rested on the allied commanders, and charged that the Anglo-French fleet continued its bombardment of the city after an armistice had been decided on.

The statement, handed to the department for its information, was a copy of a cablegram from Athens instructing the Greek minister at London to call the facts to the attention of the British foreign office. It is signed by Foreign Minister Zalocostas.

TEXT OF THE CABLEGRAM.

The text of the cablegram follows:

"Reuter's agency has brought the news that 'Lord Cecil,' answering in the house of commons Mr. Dalzieli's question, said that, in spite of the reiterated express assurances given by the king and his government that no troubles would occur, one of the most treacherous attacks was brought against the detachments of allied contingents which were landed on Admiral du Fournet's order last Friday.'

"Please bring to the knowledge of the secretary of state for foreign affairs that the royal government with two letters and several oral declarations had informed the French admiral that it was impossible to deliver the war material they were summoned to give away.

THE WARNING IGNORED.

"Despite these warnings, the admiral decided to land a certain number of detachments which in several columns proceeded from Piraeus to the capital which was under military control. The detachments occupied some of the outskirts and repulsed the royal army, which only at this moment decided to defend themselves without any orders.

"After the morning skirmishes between the allied detachments and our troops a truce was decided upon, at the request of the admiral. Despite the armistice, though, and after firing had ceased, the allied ships bombarded several spots of the town and shot not less than thirty-eight shells, seven of which were directed against the royal palace.

"There can under such conditions be no question of treachery or of a nonprovoked attack."

Wife Murdered After Elopement; Man Confesses

A man walked into the detective bureau last night and made this statement:

"My name is Howard De Weese. I am a burglar. On Sept. 20 in Salt Lake City my wife was murdered. Her diamonds, valued at $10,000, were stolen. I fled because I was afraid, with my record, I would be accused of the murder. I want to clear myself."

Eloped to Reno.

He claimed to have eloped to Reno from New York with the wife of Harry W. Fisher, a haberdasher. Reports from New York said he and the woman eloped from New York in the fall of 1915 and went to Reno, where she obtained a divorce. They were married and traveled about, De Weese committing burglaries during the trip. He declared the $10,000 worth of jewelry represented his thefts during that time. He said he gave the gems to his wife. They were stolen, he said, by her slayers.

The man's story in part is proved true by a telegram from Salt Lake. A woman named "Mrs. D. C. Robbin" was murdered in Salt Lake. Who she was has always remained a mystery.

Wants to Clear Name.

"I want to go back to Salt Lake City and clear up the mystery," said De Weese. "I am innocent of the murder and I think I will be able to prove it.

"Mrs. Fannie Fisher, the woman with whom I eloped from New York City, was the wife of Harry W. Fisher, a haberdasher at 150 Second avenue. I became acquainted with her by going into the store and making purchases. She was about 33 years old when I met her. Her husband was several years older. They had a son, Max Fisher, who is 17 years old. He is employed by Cluett, Peabody & Co., in New York.

Gems Won Friendship.

"I made presents of diamonds to Mrs. Fisher and won her friendship. After an acquaintance of about seven months we eloped. We went to Reno, Nev., where Mrs. Fisher took up a residence for the purpose of getting a divorce. During the time of granting the decree she kept a boarding a house in Sierra street. I was out on the road most of the time on 'business.' I traveled up and down between Los Angeles and Seattle.

"Mrs. Fisher was granted a divorce in August of this year. We were married the same month at Reno by Judge Stoddard. Chief of Police Hillhouse and Deputy Sheriff Woods were witnesses to the marriage.

"We left Reno and went to San Francisco. I found 'business' very good in Frisco and we remained there about a month. We then went to Salt Lake City. I think it was Sept. 18 we arrived.

Got Rooms Near Jail.

"We rented apartments two doors from the county jail. I gave the landlady the name of C. D. Robbins.

"The second night we were there we went to the Orpheum theater to see Ruth St. Denis. We went directly home from the theater and my wife retired. I remained in the room until she went to bed. I kissed her good night and went out on 'business.'

"I can prove I made a 'professional call' by the woman whom I awoke and with whom I carried on a conversation.

Finds His Wife Dead.

"After attending to my 'business' I returned to the room and found my wife dead. She had been murdered for the purpose of robbery. Her diamonds, most of which I had given her, were gone. They were worth $10,000. I had picked them up while on 'business' in different parts of the country.

"Before I left the room that night I arranged with my wife to leave the door open so that I would make no noise on entering. We always had that sort of an arrangement whenever I went out at night.

"I entered the room and struck a light. My wife was lying in the bed

CHIEF TO QUIT ONLY ON MAYOR'S DIRECT DEMAND

Maj. Gen. Barry, U. S. A., or Schuettler May Be His Successor.

Mayor William Hale Thompson yielded to the pleas of his advisers yesterday afternoon and announced that he believed Charles C. Healey would resign the position of chief of police, which he has held through two stormy years.

The mayor took reporters and the public into his confidence, but said nothing to the one man whom the mayor is given credit with having personally selected to adorn his cabinet—Healey himself.

The chief waited in his office in the city hall until 6 o'clock in the evening to hear personally from the mayor on this subject. But Mr. Thompson never went near him. The mayor had previously torn up several formal letters demanding the chief's resignation which had been prepared by his advisers.

GOES TO HIS HOME.

At 6 the chief left for home. He said he had been asked to relieve the administration of his presence by the newest recruit to Thompson's cabinet, Corporation Counsel Samuel Ettelson. But he declined to accede to Ettelson's wishes.

"I decline to be the goat," was his comment. "If I go they will have to force me out."

Later he changed his mind on this subject. He said that Mayor Thompson had been his friend, sticking to him loyally through the repeated reports of his resignation that have been anonymously issued in the last two years. Consequently he was disposed to go the mayor fifty-fifty.

WON'T QUIT UNDER FIRE.

"I don't intend to quit under fire," said the chief with deliberate finality. "I shall retire only in a way that shall be self-respecting to myself, my office, and my service in the department. I am not afraid of any charges that can be brought against me. And I don't propose to be squeezed out in any manner that will make me appear on the run.

"I have never done a dishonorable thing in my career on the force, never accepted one dollar that was not lawfully earned, and I have given service always. It is not my purpose to criticize the causes or forces that seek my removal.

WANTS OFFICIAL REQUEST.

"Thus far the mayor has not asked me to resign. If he asks me officially to resign I will do so. But I shall not receive his request to retire in any roundabout fashion, but through the regular channels provided for such correspondence.

"Concerning the violation of ordinances charged against me in State's Attorney Hoyne's indictments, I will admit that I have disregarded some of them technically. When an ordinance was too clumsy for application I have disregarded it for the public good—never for my own. In order to facilitate the public business, I have technically violated some ordinances, but never have I done so from wrong purposes or for personal or political ends."

And perhaps on Monday the mayor will accept Chief Healey's proposal to send in a letter saying he had resigned "by request."

MAY NAME GEN. BARRY.

Two men stand out as possible successors to the chief. They are First Deputy Herman Schuettler and Maj. Gen. Thomas H. Barry, U. S. A., commander of the central department, Chicago. Last night the current was strongly in favor of Schuettler, and it is believed he will be named for the place.

Chief Healey, his friends say, becomes the sacrifice for the Thompson-Hoyne imbroglio. He is the "goat," they declare, for the defeat of Harry B. Miller. With the elimination of Healey and William H. Luthardt, his secretary, the city hall is free to enter into peace negotiations with State's Attorney Hoyne.

THE INSIDE STORY

Mayor Thompson's decision to oust Chief Healey was the upshot of a campaign against Healey that began almost simultaneously with his appointment.

That campaign, sponsored by a certain faction in the administration ranks, constantly gathered headway until the turning point was reached after the decisive defeat of Harry B. Miller and the reelection of Maclay Hoyne as state's attorney.

The mayor's advisers—those that op-

LIQUOR A PERIL; WETS LAWLESS
—MAYOR THOMPSON

BY HENRY M. HYDE.

"Vastly more important than the mere wet or dry issue is that of law enforcement. On respect for and obedience to the law depends the very life of our republic.

"And the greatest body of lawbreakers in the United States are the liquor interests."

It is Mayor William Hale Thompson talking. As he sits back of the glass topped table in his inner office a bronze medallion of Abraham Lincoln hangs on the wall above his head. In a gold frame to the right is a reproduction of the Lord's prayer embroidered in gold and crimson on a white satin background.

"Not long ago a prominent brewer came in here to call on me. He said: 'We want to obey the law. We intend to conduct our business decently and legally.' I believed him. But the other day in East St. Louis Judge Landis found that this very brewer owned the licenses of sixty saloons which were being conducted in defiance of the law.

"The liquor interests are not sincere in their profession. They cannot be trusted. The big breweries own a great number of liquor licenses. They furnish licenses and furniture and credit—I suppose to ex-convicts and other irresponsibles.

"If the liquor interests were sincere we should have less trouble. But when the big brewery owners intrust the conducting of their saloons to that class of people, we are bound to have 'cheating' on Sunday and all other forms of lawlessness.

"I am going to enforce the laws at whatever cost to my personal or political fortunes. But the mayor's instrument for enforcing the law is the police force, and I find the corrupt hand of the whisky interests reaching out everywhere among the police.

"As I see it, the question is much more vital than whether the individual drinks or does not drink. How many men have ever sat down and seriously asked themselves: 'How long will this republic of ours endure?'

"Unless there is general respect for and obedience to the laws it is certain that no republican form of government can last. Personally I think we are fast drifting—because of the prevailing lawlessness—into a condition of anarchy and civil war. Out of that some form of monarchy or despotism would be likely to come. A people which cannot govern themselves will be presently governed in spite of themselves.

"There can be no doubt that the people of the United States are more and more coming to the conclusion that alcohol—at least as at present dispensed—is a great evil. I repeat it, it is more than the mere question of whether an individual shall or shall not drink. It is a matter which strikes at the very foundation of our government."

"But if saloons were wiped out in Chicago, Mayor Thompson, what would the city do to make up the revenue of $7,000,000 annually which it derives from saloon licenses?"

"It would do as individuals and other cities have done under like circumstances. It would adjust itself to new conditions.

"Such laws are usually passed with a provision that they shall not go into force for a year or more, thus providing a period for adjustment.

"It is undoubtedly true, also, that not so much revenue would be needed. It might not be necessary, perhaps, to make such a large appropriation for police. Less money would be needed for jails, police courts, asylums, and other similar institutions.

"I am intensely in earnest on this matter. It seems to me a question of real and immediate patriotism."

Mayor Thompson picked up from his table a gold mounted sword.

"I happen to have here my father's sword," he said. "He was a lieutenant commander in the United States navy. During the civil war he served on Admiral Farragut's flagship. At the battle of Mobile Bay six of the seven members of his gun crew were instantly killed by a shell. He alone was spared. Before he entered the navy my father made a will in which he left what little property he had to the government of the United States. That is the kind of patriotism I inherited.

"And that is the kind of patriotism which is now largely lacking and which we must revive. A fair and equal enforcement of law is the first necessary step towards that revival."

posed the chief, of whom the most conspicuous were Capt. Percy B. Coffin, president of the civil service commission, and Corporation Counsel Samuel Ettelson—swung the mayor around to their view several weeks ago.

"Message Bearer" Sent.

Ten days ago Corporation Counsel Ettelson went to Chief Healey as an official "message bearer." He told the chief the mayor wished him to resign. The chief refused.

"I have done nothing wrong," Chief Healey retorted. "I've done nothing I'm ashamed of and I don't propose to leave till I'm forced out. I refuse to be the goat."

The situation remained practically at a standstill for several days. The mayor was disinclined to call Chief Healey in and flatly tell him to quit.

His advisers, the anti-Healey faction, prepared a letter for him to send to the chief. But the mayor tore it up. He wanted to find another way to accomplish the result.

Chance for Showdown.

Publication of a story in an afternoon newspaper yesterday gave the mayor an opportunity to declare himself and bring the situation to a showdown. The story said Healey and Luthardt were to be ousted.

Thereupon the mayor authorized this statement:

"In view of the fact that it has proved impossible for Chief of Police Charles C. Healey to secure an immediate trial, which he has demanded repeatedly, it is my opinion that the chief will resign."

Even at that time the mayor had not conveyed this information to the chief, who was in his office hardly forty feet away. President Coffin of the civil service commission was with the mayor at the time. They left shortly afterward by the "secret" stairway down from the fourth floor.

Luthardt May Leave.

As they went out of the building the mayor and Capt. Coffin said they had the "impression" that Luthardt, the chief's secretary, would leave his position at the same time. Luthardt will probably take a leave of absence, as he is a civil service appointee.

After the reporters had taken the mayor's statement to the chief the latter summoned John J. Healy, his attorney in the indictment proceedings started by Hoyne.

Attorney Healy later held a conference with Corporation Counsel Ettelson.

At this conference Attorney Healy is said to have told Mr. Ettelson that the chief wanted to arrange some "agreeable" method of stepping out.

Won't Quit Under Fire.

The proposal conveyed to Mr. Ettelson, it is declared, was to allow the chief to write a letter of resignation in which he would make it clear that he was being forced out. According to the story that leaked out, the chief was represented as being anxious to avoid the appearance of "quitting under fire." He wanted it emphatically understood, on the other hand, that if he quit it was because he was ordered to do so.

The reported proposal of Attorney Healy was said last night to be acceptable to the administration. The mayor's advisers informed him they expected Chief Healey would send in a resignation along these lines tomorrow. Last night, however, the chief said:

I'm going to fight. If I go down I'll go down with my colors flying.

Chief's First Statement.

Earlier in the day—after the mayor had made his announcement—the chief said:

"I have not resigned, and I won't resign unless the mayor requests me to. I have talked to him two or three times today and he has said nothing about it.

"I have done nothing that would lead me to hand in my resignation. My conscience is clear. The hard thing is that after I have done my best to enforce the law, to keep politics out of the department, and to serve the mayor and the community to the utmost of my strength, such a situation should arise.

"Of course, if the mayor tells me to quit, I am ready to go. It would be foolish to do otherwise."

GEN. BARRY FAVORED

Mayor Thompson's choice for Chief Healey's successor lies between First Deputy Herman Schuettler and some man outside the department, probably Thomas H. Barry, major general assigned to Chicago, it was learned last night.

Schuettler's country-wide reputation as an efficient police officer and the probability that he would be acceptable to the city council count heavily in his behalf in the minds of the mayor's advisers.

There is, however, a counter disposition to pick a man—"a big man"—from outside the ranks. Members of the mayor's cabinet have come to distrust the police department as a whole and are urging the introduction of new blood.

In spite of the desire to propitiate State's Attorney Hoyne, the mayor is said to believe that he has gone far enough with the ousting of the chief, and it is declared there is little or no chance of Nicholas Hunt being considered for the place.

Healey a Thompson Man.

The choice of Healey for chief was one of the few "personal" appointments made by the mayor. Prior to his recent reversal of opinion, he had seized every opportunity to praise the chief in emphatic terms.

Up to that he had declared in unmistakable words that he would "stand by" Healey, even though he had been indicted, because he said he was convinced that the chief was the innocent victim of a political maneuver.

But the anti-Healey faction iterated and reiterated these arguments:

"We cannot afford to carry the burden of Chief Healey any longer. The mayor of Chicago cannot afford to have an indicted chief of police in his cabinet. Consider what would happen if the chief were convicted. Would not the mayor be placed in an embarrassing position? Is it up to the mayor to wait and see what a jury will do?"

Hoyne's Favor Wooed.

Coupled with this argument came the intimation, whether authentic or not, that State's Attorney Hoyne would "lay off" the city hall if Healey and Luthardt were dropped. Here was a chance, at least, according to the political view, to make a bid for peace with "the north side"—Hoyne's office.

Moreover, it was represented to the mayor that the defeat of Harry B. Miller was attributable to Chief Healey. Through the activities of State's Attorney Hoyne, the chief had become almost the central issue in the campaign, and the vote of the people was interpreted by the mayor's advisers not as an indorsement of Mr. Hoyne but a slap at Chief Healey.

On top of this were presented other alleged deficiencies of the chief. It was charged that he failed to close the saloons on Sunday, that he had failed to bring before the trial board commanding officers in whose districts violations were found, and that he was forced from the outside to act on the reports of the Citizens' association with respect to slot machines, as well as reports of the Committee of Fifteen with respect to vice.

BATTLE TO SAVE CHIEF

On the other hand, there were stanch supporters of the chief who put up a losing battle. Among them were counted City Smoke Inspector William H. Reid and Deputy Commissioner of Public Works Burkhardt.

But they were not able to save him.

Chief Healey made many enemies of politicians at the outset of his term because of his brusque attitude towards requests for political favors. Last October when the mayor's special train was en route to California the story emanated from the inner circle that Chief Healey and Commissioner of Public Works Moorhouse were to be put out of the cabinet by the resignation route.

Fred Lundin, the political generalissimo of the Thompson forces, it was stated, was unfriendly to Healey, and the growing coolness of James A. Pugh, one of Healey's original sponsors, towards Mayor Thompson was cited by those who predicted the ousting of the chief.

Since then the battle against Healey has continued unabated and numerous stories have been inspired that the chief was about to resign.

With the accession of Corporation Counsel Ettelson to their ranks the anti-Healey faction has been able to carry the day.

Before his appointment Chief Healey was captain of the traffic division. He is now on leave of absence from that position, but his leave does not expire till next April.

Chief Healey intimated that in the event of his retirement as chief he would resume his place in the police department as a captain.

WILL HE STEP OUT?

MILITARY COMMISSION URGED BY FIRST CAVALRY HEAD.

Col. M. J. Foreman Tells Commercial Club Views on Legislation Needed for the Army.

A military commission of army officers, national guard officers, and civilians was advocated by Col. Milton J. Foreman of the First Illinois cavalry in an address before the Commercial club last night at the Blackstone hotel. Col. Foreman said that the commission ought to be appointed by the president to make recommendations for specific legislation when the newly elected congress assembles in December, 1917.

"We have tariff commissions, and currency commissions, and commissions to investigate and control everything imaginable, except the one subject which is most important to our national life and of which we know least," Col. Foreman said. "The recommendation of a commission of brave, patriotic, unselfish men of character will command the respect and confidence of the country and their recommendation will have the support of the people."

Maj. Abel Davis of the First infantry advocated a plan by which each congressional district would be required to furnish its quota to make up a regular army of 500,000 men, the number which the general staff of the army has estimated as necessary for adequate defense. Such a plan, Maj. Davis explained, would require only 500 men each year from each district if the enlistment period were fixed at two years.

OPEN FIGHT IN CALIFORNIA TO LEGALIZE BIRTH CONTROL

San Francisco, Cal., Dec. 9.—With all of its members pledged to secrecy, the Birth Control league of California has opened a campaign to legalize the practice of birth control in this state.

It is proposed to write to every mother in the state urging support for the passage of a law legalizing the purposes of the league.

HOYNE CONTENT TO SEE HEALEY LOSE HIS JOB

Possibility of No Prosecution Develops Following Statement by Mayor.

Friends of State's Attorney Maclay Hoyne see in the shake-up in the police department, with the possible retirement of Chief of Police Healey, the first victory for the public prosecutor over the city hall forces in the clash that began with the indictment of the chief.

Mr. Hoyne last night said he did not consider it a "victory" or a "triumph" but he is merely going ahead with his work of prosecuting wrongdoers wherever he finds them.

No Change in Program.

"The retirement of Mr. Healey will not change my attitude in the least toward police corruption and criminality in general," he said to a TRIBUNE reporter. "I did not know the chief intended to resign. I shall proceed with the program regardless of what develops at the city hall."

As to whether he will proceed with the prosecution of the chief on the indictments for conspiracy and misfeasance in office he would not say. From other sources it was learned the state's attorney probably has two plans in view. One is to place all his evidence against the retiring chief before the public through the newspapers. The other is to proceed with the prosecution.

"I do not attempt to secure an indictment against a person unless I have the evidence," he added. "The mere indictment of a person is sufficient to do him great injury in the community. To indict a man for the mere sake of indicting him is not only wrong, but an offense in itself. Therefore it should be perfectly plain that when the grand jury returned indictments against Mr. Healey it did so on evidence that ought to bring a conviction.

Penalty Already Applied.

"The penalty for conviction of misfeasance is a fine and removal from office. With Mr. Healey retiring from the office the penalty for misfeasance already has, so far as the practical view of the case goes, been inflicted. Mr. Healey, however, is indicted for other things, and there might be other indictments before we are through.

"I have no pipe lines with the city hall, no communication with the mayor at all, have had no conferences or messages with the mayor or the chief, and in no way have had anything to do with the retirement of the chief, except as he may have retired under these charges.

"The point is, I am not dealing with the city hall in any way whatsoever. I am not interested in the identity of the head of the police department, other than that he be an honest official. I have no idea who will succeed Healey, and I don't care, except in that I shall continue my fight to clean Chicago of criminals and the police department of corruptionists. If the head of the police department is an honest man we will get along very well. If he is not, we shall try to protect the people of Chicago against criminals and crooked officials as best we can."

Pursuing Other Inquiries?

Mr. Hoyne was asked concerning a report that he was pursuing two different lines of investigation in the city hall, in no way related to the police department.

"I do not care to discuss what I am doing or what I may do," he said. "However, this should be plain, also: If there is crooked work in the city hall we will go after it just as quickly as in any other place."

Lake Forest Wants Police Dogs.

Lake Forest is considering the use of bloodhounds, German police dogs, or Airedales to assist its police force in corralling burglars. The advisability of purchasing animals to assist Chief Walter McGuire and his men will be placed before the city council tomorrow night by Mayor William Mather Lewis. Chief McGuire favors the Airedales.

HEALEY'S RECORD

Chief Entered Department Under Civil Service as Holdover Lieutenant in 1897.

Chief of Police Charles C. Healey's civil service record is as follows:

Entered civil service as a holdover lieutenant, Jan. 1, 1897. Assigned to Eighteenth precinct. Transferred to Fifth precinct, June 5, 1899; to the Fourteenth precinct, February, 1900; to the Twelfth precinct, March, 1900; to the Seventeenth, February, 1901; to the Twelfth, April, 1901; to the Seventeenth, May, 1901; to the Fourteenth, April, 1902; to the Tenth, March, 1903; to the Sixteenth, February, 1905; to the Sixth, February, 1906; to the First, December, 1906. Transferred to mounted squad as lieutenant in April, 1908; promoted to captain of mounted squad March 27, 1909; appointed general superintendent of police April 27, 1915.

As chief of police Healey is not under civil service. He secured leave of absence for a year from the civil service rolls at the time of his appointment. That has been extended for another year. At the expiration of his present leave of absence, April 26, 1917, he will be restored as a captain of police if there is a vacancy in the department.

with her head crushed. I did not see the instrument with which she was slain. All I know about it is what I read the next day or the day after in a Denver paper.

"After destroying every particle of stuff that might lead to her and my identification I packed a suitcase and quietly left the house. I locked the door and went out unobserved.

Flees to Ogden.

"I caught a train on the Oregon Short Line for Ogden, and from there to Cheyenne. Then to Denver, Omaha, and St. Louis.

"I think it was in Cheyenne I saw a Denver Post with the story of the Salt Lake murder mystery. Later I got hold of some Salt Lake papers and saw where Mr. Robbins, the dead woman's husband, was suspected of the murder.

"She was buried as Mrs. Robbins, and that was all anybody knew of her history.

"Since I jumped away from Salt Lake City I have visited several large cities on 'business.' I have been at Philadelphia, New York, Boston, Cleveland, Pittsburgh, and in and out of Chicago two or three times. I found 'business' very good in all my travels.

"I got into Chicago this morning from St. Louis. The thought that some day I might be picked up and identified as Robbins prompted me to give myself up and beat the police to it. I have nothing to fear, and it will be a great personal satisfaction to clear up the mystery."

De Weese says he is 31 years old. He told Capt. Larkin that he had relatives in Chicago. After telling the captain that he was a college graduate he denied it to reporters.

Salt Lake Interested.

Salt Lake City, Utah, Dec. 9.—Joseph Sharp, city detective in charge of the mysterious murder of a woman calling herself Mrs. D. C. Robbins here in September, said tonight that he had never heard of De Weese, but the police are sending a man to Chicago to investigate the story, which they believe.

The woman's body was found in bed in a rooming house at 455½ Second East street, on the morning of Sept. 24. She had been battered to death with a flat iron wrapped in a rag. On Sept. 20 the woman came to the rooming house with a man. The pair registered as Mr. and Mrs. D. C. Robbins.

Robbins disappeared and was never found. The woman was buried without identification. She wore rings on her fingers valued at about $700. She was apparently about 32 years of age and tradesmen's marks on her shoes indicated that she might have come from San Francisco.

SUNDAY CLOSING PUT UP TO HOYNE IN HEALEY ORDER

Arrests to Be Made Under the State Law and Court Action Rests with Prosecutor.

Enforcement of the state law requiring the closing of saloons in Chicago on Sundays has been practically put up to State's Attorney Hoyne as the result of the action of Chief Healey in ordering police captains to cause the arrest of all violators of the law on view, take them to station houses, and book them.

In effect this means that Mr. Hoyne's prosecutors will be called upon to conduct the prosecutions in the Municipal court.

If violators of the law are "found guilty" the chief will then take under advisement the matter of recommending revocation of the saloon licenses, he explained.

Where violators are found "not guilty" or where the state, in other words, fails to obtain a conviction revocation of licenses will not be recommended, it is said.

Chief Healey held a conference with Mayor Thompson, Corporation Counsel Samuel A. Ettelson, and Assistant Corporation Counsel Chester E. Cleveland in the mayor's office. When he left he went directly to his own office, and the issuance of the order ordering the arrest of Sunday closing law violators "on view" followed.

How Mayor Views It.

"The law is going to be carried out, and if this police department don't do it we will get one that will," asserted Mayor Thompson. "Certain captains, I understand, have claimed that since they have not been clothed with authority to make arrests for Sunday closing violations they should be excused for allowing saloons to operate on the Sabbath.

"We are going to give them power—all the power there is—to clean up their districts. If they don't clean up it will be up to the civil service commission to clean them up."

The mayor was asked what would happen if Mr. Hoyne refused to prosecute.

"I assume the state's attorney will do his duty," he said. "If he don't I'll use my judgment about revoking saloon licenses. The saloons are going to be closed on Sunday, that's all there is to it."

Hoyne's Reply to Order.

"The mayor has the power to close saloons on Sunday if he so wishes," said Mr. Hoyne. "He can close the saloons with his revocation power. The trouble is he has been partial and has discriminated. He has been using his revocation power to build up a political machine.

"No saloonkeeper would jeopardize his business if he knew the mayor was sincere in revoking saloon licenses. As I said before, they can't pass the buck to me.

"I will designate any corporation counsel to handle Sunday closing cases if it must be. We have tried this kind of cases in the courts before and they have resulted disastrously."

O'BRIEN CASE MAY BE ENDED

Plea That No Case Has Been Proved Will Be Considered.

Immediately after the prosecution announced the close of its case against Capt. O'Brien, on trial under charges preferred by Chief of Police Healey, Attorney Fletcher B. Dobyns yesterday asked the civil service commission to restore O'Brien to his command in the Cottage Grove district.

Not Against Reform.

"I am not against reform organizations," said Mr. Dobyns, "but they expect a police official to transform a vice district into paradise over night. Mr. Thrasher is a critic of these conditions. He could not do as well as Capt. O'Brien has. Contrary to protecting vice, as charged here, Capt. O'Brien proved the most diligent commander in cleaning up the district that ever held the post.

"It is the most difficult district, probably in the world, to keep clean. If you will look at the records you will find that Capt. O'Brien has prosecuted over 90 per cent of the places listed by the reform organizations. Capt. O'Brien was suspended as the scapegoat at a time when certain officials became panic stricken during a heated campaign."

Decision on Monday.

The commission announced that it would give its decision on Monday on Attorney Dobyns' motion that Capt. O'Brien be restored to command of the Cottage Grove avenue district. Mr. Dobyns intimated that if the decision were unfavorable he would ask ten days in which to prepare his defense.

W. L. Bourland was the last prosecuting witness. He was the stenographer who took the testimony in the hearing against Chief of Police Healey before Judge Olson. He was called to prove that Capt. O'Brien testified at that hearing that he removed certain records from his station in violation of the police department rules.

Prosecutor Frank S. Righeimer asked the civil service board not to let Attorney Dobyns draw word pictures for them to supplant evidence.

NO ONE HELD FOR WRECK.

Mayor Thompson's Staff Prepares to Withstand Siege of Automobile Catalogues.

As a result of the four cornered automobile accident Friday night, in which Mayor Thompson's machine was wrecked, preparations were made yesterday by the mayor's staff to withstand a siege of automobile catalogues. Harry Reynolds of 4443 Hazel avenue, who is blamed for the accident, was questioned by the police, but was not held. He denied the charge he had been drinking.

MAYOR TO KEEP HANDS OFF NEXT COUNCIL RACE

Thompson Says He'll Devote Time to Completing Big Improvements.

Mayor Thompson yesterday came out with a signed statement warning the public of what he describes as the machinations of his foes. He reviews the high spots of his nineteen months in office and seeks the coöperation of the public in upholding his policies during the next two years.

But the most "newsy" feature of the statment is his announcement that he will not take part in the aldermanic campaign next spring either for or against any candidates.

Here's the Statement.

The mayor's statement follows:

"The exploitation of municipal issues for partisan purposes and for personal aggrandizement has been for years and is now the scourge of the city government of Chicago.

"Since my inauguration as mayor, nineteen months ago, every principle, every policy, every constructive undertaking by me, and even the plain enforcement of the law, has been gauged by certain newspapers and my political enemies, not by the rule of right or wrong, but by the insidious test of the lowest politics.

"Politics has been played by certain newspapers as evidenced by an uninterrupted licentiousness. Politics has been played by certain civic organizations, the United Societies, certain public officials, committees, leagues, and liquor dealers, until the common citizen is bewildered 'midst the multiplicity of complications which grip the lawful governing agencies of the community.

Sees "Extreme Danger."

"Do the people of Chicago understand that this condition forbodes extreme danger Do the citizens appreciate that every situation which arises in the course of municipal administration is a signal for political maneuvering by some club, faction, league, or individual to satisfy an inordinate craving for notoriety?

"Does the public remember that during the last year the self-destroyed body of an unfortunate public official was paraded in the political arena to appease the lust of elements contending for public and private advantage?

"I deem it my duty as mayor of this city to sound a warning as to these conditions, because during the next two and one-half years it is my duty to continue to protect the interests of the taxpayers and citizens of Chicago and to preserve as far as I can the rights and properties of all the people.

Labor Peril, Too.

"During the last campaign the righteous principle of arbitration both in Chicago and at Washington has been prostituted to political necessity. This means that the public is to be deprived of knowledge or misled as to facts in differences between capital and labor, thereby inviting serious danger or disaster in future disputes where arbitration might step in and insure concord.

"The all important matter of providing adequate transportation facilities for the people of Chicago has been in politics for twenty years. Settled and unsettled from time to time and from year to year, the ultimate desire of the people for everything that is modern, rapid, and best in transportation facilities is still throttled by selfish, grasping political interests.

"The impartial enforcement of the law, the real foundation of personal liberty, has been designedly used by the political freebooters so prevalent in this community to promote their personal campaigns and further their individual ambitions so as to injure the cause to which they falsely proclaim allegiance.

Sees Facts Twisted.

"Through the craftiness of publicity and the hypocrisy of agencies of pretended reform, graft, and corruption, when brought to light by my administration in an endeavor to exterminate same, are painted as examples of virtue and honesty, and sincere honesty and virtue are pictured as depraved and corrupt by the mere twisting of facts and paralysis of truth before the public.

"The completion of the great Twelfth street widening project is fast approaching despite the cunning of the political obstructionists who have stood hidden in its path.

"Sinister political manipulation is now secretly at work to impede the progress of the Michigan boulevard link connection and there is danger to the progress of this great and needed improvement if the opposition succeeds.

"In the year now closing there have been national, state, county, and municipal elections. As Republican national committeeman for the state of Illinois I have no further duties to perform until the next general election.

Hands Off Aldermen.

"I shall not under any circumstances take any part whatsoever in any contest in the primary or election in any ward for seats in the city council to be filled next spring. My position on political questions has been made sufficiently clear during the last year, so that the people of Chicago know where I stand on those matters. I invite the coöperation of all who are interested in the city's welfare. It is my sole ambition to push to completion the many great projects now under way, or contemplated, in which the people of Chicago are vitally concerned.

"I shall insist on the strict enforcement of the laws of the state and the ordinances of the city. City employés must comply with every requirement of the law in executing the work intrusted to them."

MORE FARMERS SEEKING WIVES

Six Jolly Dakota Bachelors Hurl Hats Into Chicago Ring.

The seven North Dakota bachelor farmers who declared Thursday that they wanted Chicago wives started a snowball rolling. The snowball is now an avalanche.

"Northwestward Ho!" seems to be the slogan of the bachelor girls of Chicago. Their matrimonial motto seems to be the motto of Chicago itself: "We Will." So great has been the response that offices will be established in the eastern and western parts of the state of North Dakota to take care of Chicago inquiries for the brawny-thewed tillers of the land.

Bert Green of Sherwood will represent the western and slope parts of the state, and A. G. Sorlie will take care of the eastern and valley districts.

Shy Ones No Longer Shy.

The shy contingent capitulated yesterday and called en masse at the offices of THE TRIBUNE.

"We refuse to let the other fellows hog the show,' said Ray Law, speaking for the delegation. "We're just as good looking as the rest of the gang, and We Want Wives!"

Epistolary Pleas.

Eloquent and earnest are some of the epistolary pleas of the mateless misses:

"I am of medium height and considered sweet natured and loving, also good looking and pleasantly plump. Nineteen years and 10 months. I can cook and keep house."

"I am a trained nurse and have saved enough money to buy a small farm, but, of course, to have a regular farm and a real farmer would be the loveliest thing in all the world to me. I have a lovable disposition and all my life I have wanted to marry a farmer."

"Please save one of those westerners for me, as I am sick and tired of a big city. I am a young widow and have some money of my own. All I want is some one I can take care of and that can take care of me."

"Don't forget to bring the license when you call. I am very charming. You can see from the endearing names my friends have given me that I am all there."

TEACHERS' FEDERATION WANTS ITS AIMS KNOWN.

Meeting Resolves to Start Publicity Campaign on Anniversary of Death of Catherine Goggin.

A publicity campaign will be begun by the Chicago Teachers' federation the first week in January to acquaint the people of Chicago with the purposes of the federation, according to a decision reached at a meeting in Corinthian hall, Masonic temple, yesterday. The board of directors of the federation will manage the campaign.

"There has been too much 'errorizing' in reports spread about the city concerning the federation," said Miss Margaret A. Haley, business representative of the federation.

The campaign will be begun Jan. 4, 1917, the anniversary of Miss Catherine Goggin's death. Miss Goggin organized the federation in 1894.

ENGLISH HEIR SOUGHT SERVING CHICAGO DRINKS.

Lawyers Advertise in Hope of Locating Charles Chermside, Reported Working Here.

PERSONAL—IF CHARLES CHERMSIDE will communicate with the undersigned he may hear something to his advantage. Any information regarding him would be appreciated. BULKLEY, MORE & TALLMADGE, 518 Home Insurance building, Chicago.

Somewhere in Chicago there is a well groomed heir to an English estate serving drinks and holding out an empty palm. This is the information given yesterday by a gay cabareter to Bulkley, More & Tallmadge, solicitors for an English law firm of Manchester.

Several months ago a death occurred in the Chermside family in England. The estate became involved and Charles, who came to this country on an adventure several years ago, was sought. His only address known to his family was "special delivery, Chicago."

Several attempts on the part of the Chicago solicitors of the English law firm to locate young Chermside by mail proved unsuccessful. An "ad" was then decided on.

Theodore Hewes shot this question to the h. c. of l. reporter last night.

Then Mr. Hewes, who is much interested in the poultry show to be held at the Coliseum on Dec. 13 to 18, went on to show why it is not necessary to boycott the egg trust or pay its prices either.

"Get twenty thoroughbred hens, which have been hatched between the months of February and May, and keep them in your back yard," he said. "If properly cared for they will lay during the months that the cold storage men are asking their high prices. They will live on scraps from the table.

"Come to the poultry show and we will show you how to put the egg trust out of business."

UTILITIES BODY ACTS ON PRICES

May Limit Time Provisions May Be Kept in Warehouses.

William L. O'Connell, chairman of the state public utilities commission, conferred with United States District Attorney Clyne yesterday on the subject of cold storage warehouse methods. Mr. O'Connell told the district attorney some inside secrets of the cold storage business, and also told reporters of a plan of his own for lowering the high cost of living.

"The warehousing question will come up for a hearing before the commission Monday or Tuesday," said Mr. O'Connell. "We are given the power to regulate this business and it is now time that we took some effective action.

No Limit on Time.

"To my mind the most important thing is to limit the time that foodstuffs may be held in cold storage. Aside from a council order there is virtually no limitation now. The length of storage should not depend on the keeping qualities of the article but on the public need.

"We found in one hearing that the only limit to the storage of poultry was deterioration. Chickens were kept until they began to sweat and show pimples.

"Cold storage houses are an absolute necessity, but they should not be used for speculative purposes. They should be employed only to keep food in good condition so that the public may have it in those months when the normal production does not equal the demand.

"Just what these limits should be is a matter to be decided in the case of each article."

One Method Disclosed.

One of the cold storage methods disclosed to the federal prosecutor by Mr. O'Connell was that of the habit of "reserving space." It was brought out in a hearing of a St. Joseph, Mo., firm against the Monarch Refrigerating company.

Space in the houses, instead of being awarded to first comers, as the law specifies, was said to be reserved for favored speculators. The St. Joseph company complained that it was told that it could have space temporarily and was forced to sign an agreement to move its stock out on a set date. Failing to move it on that date, the company complained that the refrigerating company had sold the provisions on a falling market to make room for the supplies of others.

When the federal grand jury convenes again tomorrow it will continue its food corner inquiries.

Letters from wholesale grocers advising retailers to hold out for high prices will be submitted as evidence.

FEDERAL, STATE CONTROL ON FOOD URGED BY DR. WILEY.

Former Government Official Says People Must Act to Prevent Manipulation by Speculators.

Washington, D. C., Dec. 9.—Dr. Harvey W. Wiley, "the man who purified the American table," came out today with a plan to save it from the clutches of the food speculator. He wants municipal and state control of all food supplies.

"The people must take this thing into their own hands," Dr. Wiley declared. "Federal control has failed so far to answer the purpose. Food supply is too vital a matter to be bandied about by unscrupulous food speculators and laxity of federal administration.

"The total disregard by food dealers of the existing cold storage and other federal food laws and the criminal laxity in administering these laws indicates the people must look to other measures for their protection."

Dr. Wiley's plan, which he "would submit to congress except they know I can tell them too much," contemplates the taking over by municipal authorities of all food supplies and the dispensing of them to the consumer at reasonable prices.

"Each community," he explained, "would provide itself with a sort of clearing house for its daily food. The price manipulator would not have a look in. And, it's coming to just this thing."

CAT RIDES THE FLY WHEEL 24 HOURS AT POWER HOUSE.

Engineer Estimates Pussy Traveled 500 Miles at 150 Revolutions Per Minute.

Vineland, N. J., Dec. 9.—[Special.]—When the big engine at the borough electric power house was stopped this morning there flopped from the fly wheel what appeared to be a ball of oil waste, but it was alive, and the engineer finally identified it as the plant's pet cat.

Kitty must have perched upon the wheel for a nap while the engine was idle temporarily yesterday, and when it started up nobody noticed her. All of yesterday and last night she clung to the wheel, which makes 150 revolutions a minute, and must have had some trouble in holding on.

The engineer estimated that pussy had traveled at least 500 miles in her giddy whirl.

WOMAN SKIPS; $1,600 LODGE FUND IS GONE

Mrs. Theresa Marchment of South Chicago Isabellas Confesses in Letter.

Mrs. Theresa Marchment, former treasurer of the Santa Maria circle of the Daughters of Isabella in South Chicago, has disappeared.

At the same time, the officers of the Santa Maria circle discovered about $1,600 was missing from the mortuary fund of the circle, which had been kept on deposit in a South Chicago bank.

The first news reaching the officers of the circle was contained in a letter received from the missing woman postmarked Valparaiso, Ind. The letter was sealed in an envelope inclosed in another envelope addressed to Miss Helen Malanphy, secretary of the circle. The inner envelope was addressed to Mrs. H. J. O'Neill, Seventy-first street and Calumet avenue, regent, and the other officers of the circle.

Letter a Confession.

The letter was read at the regular meeting of the Santa Maria circle in Bacon's hall, at Ninety-second street and Houston avenue, last Thursday night. It read in this way, according to the memory of one of the members who heard it read:

"I took the money by dribs and drabs. I always intended to pay it back. I became deeply involved before I realized it. My husband knew nothing about it. I am now about to become a mother. I want the forgiveness of the circle. I will make full restitution, dollar for dollar, if given a chance. If the officers of the circle will put an advertisement in the 'Personal' column of THE TRIBUNE saying I will not be prosecuted, I will return and pay back the money as soon as possible."

Her Relatives Swoon.

Several of Mrs. Marchment's relatives were present. To them the letter was a surprise. When they heard it read three of them swooned. The other members of the circle worked over them for a quarter of an hour before they were restored.

Mrs. Marchment had been treasurer of the circle for two terms of a year each. She is 30 years old. She was married last spring. It is hinted some of the money may have gone to pay for her trousseau. Both she and her husband have been employed by the Chicago Telephone company in its South Chicago offices. Mrs. Marchment, it is said, was cashier in the offices. Both she and her husband disappeared at the same time. Neither, it is said, drew what money was coming to them from the telephone company.

New Treasurer Elected.

After the letter had been read the circle's annual election was held. Every one had expected Mrs. Marchment would be reëlected to the treasurership. When the members awoke to the fact Mrs. Marchment was missing they elected Miss Nellie Lackland in her stead, with Mrs. Rose McDonald as recorder.

"I do not believe Mrs. Marchment is in Valparaiso," said a member of the circle. "Her letter was mailed from there, but I think she arranged that as a ruse. Perhaps she drove to Valparaiso in an automobile and mailed the letter. The circle received a bank statement of her accounts today. The work of checking up has been complicated by the fact that she has the books of the circle with her."

The Daughters of Isabella is a Catholic order which has several hundred thousand members throughout the United States and Canada.

NINETY-SIX HYDROAIRPLANES TO AID U. S. COAST DEFENSE.

Contracts Let for Many High Powered Machines for Use of the Artillery Forces.

Washington, D. C., Dec. 9.—Contracts for ninety-six high power hydro-airplanes for the coast artillery stations in the United States, Hawaii, Philippines, and the Panama Canal Zone were let today by the war department.

Immediate construction is to be begun on the ninety-six machines and contracts soon will be let for fifty-two more.

OUR MURDER RECORD

Happenings in Chicago During Last Eight Days.

Here is Chicago's murder record for last eight days. One was a Black Hand affair—the twenty-eighth of the year—which, as usual, has not been solved.

Dec. 2—Frank Nicatera, 35 years, shot and killed by Joseph Brocatta in the latter's home at 624 South May street during a dispute over $200.

Dec. 4—Policeman Bruno H. Fredericks of the West Chicago avenue police station, died at St. Elizabeth's hospital from gun wounds inflicted by Italian gunmen at a dance on Thanksgiving night.

Dec. 6—George Poslucha, 1770 Milwaukee avenue, found shot and killed at 1401 West Chicago avenue.

Dec. 7—Joseph Forelli, found shot through the eye at Polk and Clinton streets. Died shortly after at county hospital. Suspected Black Hand murder.

CHICAGO ELKS TO GIVE 2,000 CHRISTMAS BASKETS.

Lodge Seeks Names of Worthy Poor Immediately to Permit of Investigation by Committee.

Ten thousand Chicago poor persons will be the guests of Chicago lodge No. 4, B. P. O. E., at Christmas dinners in their own homes. This is the annual gift of the lodge—2,000 baskets to as many families, each basket with sufficient foodstuffs to feed ten in each family.

Dr. Robert A. Smith, chairman of the Christmas basket committee, announced yesterday that the distribution this year will be on a much larger scale than at any previous year.

What is wanted now by the lodge is the names of those to whom baskets may be sent. It is suggested that worthy poor families who desire Christmas baskets send in their names without delay, so their requests may be investigated by the committee.

The distribution of the Christmas baskets is entirely separate from the newsboys' Christmas dinner, which is planned by the Big Brother association.

WANTS HIGH COST OF LIVING INVESTIGATED BY SCIENTISTS

Lenroot of Wisconsin Plans to Ask Congress to Institute Cost Accounting System for Products.

Washington, D. C., Dec. 9.—[Special.]—Representative Lenroot of Wisconsin has a plan for an investigation into the high cost of living by scientists rather than by theorists or men with propaganda. He expects to work out a resolution on which he will ask for quick action.

"What I want to see done," Mr. Lenroot said, "is a scientific analysis of the movement of about a dozen commodities from the raw state down to the moment they are placed in the home of the consumer. I think congress would have to conduct this investigation."

WORTHINGTON IN AGAIN; CITE STOLEN BONDS

"Banker" Jailed on Charge of Cashing Coupons from Purloined Securities.

John W. Worthington, has stepped into the spotlight again.

Worthington was arrested yesterday by Detective Sergeants Louis Bock and Thomas McFarland of the detective bureau at his "real estate and brokerage" office, 505 Courtland building.

Sometime between closing time on Saturday, July 10, and opening time on Monday, July 12, cracksmen entered the offices of the Metropolitan Life Insurance company in Pittsburgh, and blew the safe. Among the loot were two one thousand dollar bonds of the Jones & Laughlin Steel company of Pittsburgh.

Coupons Cashed.

Early in November an individual appeared at the Union Trust company of Chicago and cashed two Jones & Laughlin bond coupons dated November. A short time later the same individual appeared and cashed the May coupons, and received a total of $100.

The firm refused to honor the coupons. The Chicago police were communicated with. Brock and McFarland were assigned to the case, and Capt. Charles L. Larkin of the detective bureau checked up with the chief of police in Pittsburgh.

Denies His Guilt.

When Worthington was arrested yesterday he denied that the bonds were his. He stated that he had collected on the coupons for a client of his, a retired dentist of Springfield, Ill., named G. W. Gray. So unconventional was the retired dentist that he did not even give Worthington an address except "General Delivery," Springfield. He was booked on a charge of having stolen property in his possession. Bond of $10,000 was furnished by Richard Curran, 4417 Drexel boulevard, labor organizer and contractor, who listed property valued at $300,000.

Now John W. Worthington, who gave his address as 4943 Calumet avenue, is out on bail. It is not the first time he has had the experience. He has always been blessed with a remarkable facility for getting out on bail, excepting in 1898, when he spent some time at Sing Sing.

Always Cautious.

In his operations he played his game for small stakes and large stakes. He exercised the same caution when on Oct. 28, 1897, he and a confederate swindled a New York grocer of $1,400 as when in the early part of March, 1914, nearly twenty years later, he was involved in the wrecking of the half million dollar American Banking association of Chicago.

An investigation is being conducted of the alleged client in Springfield. Worthington will be given a preliminary hearing tomorrow morning.

CONCESSIONS ON DEPORTATION OF BELGIUM'S IDLE?

Berlin to Maintain Right to Make Certain Seizures—Will Try to Meet U. S.

BERLIN, Dec. 8, via London, Dec. 9.—The latest representations by the United States regarding the Belgian labor problem were presented by Joseph C. Grew, secretary of the American embassy, in an interview with Chancellor von Bethmann-Hollweg Tuesday, and the German reply is expected to be delivered tomorrow or Monday.

Like the chancellor's reply to Secretary Grew's first representations, it will be couched in the friendliest terms, going, it is understood, as far as possible toward meeting American wishes and recognizing the interest the United States naturally takes in this question as the power chiefly concerned in the work of Belgian relief.

Way Germany Views Case.

In official quarters Germany's position is reflected to the correspondent of the Associated Press as follows:

Over and over again it has been reiterated here that the United States and the neutral world in general seem to have a distorted picture of the Belgian deportation question, basing their views on information from enemy sources, generalizing from blunders which are admitted to have occurred, and ignoring the spirit in which, as the chancellor's reply contends, the German government is determined to apply the measure.

Reference also is made to the military aspects of the question. It is said there is the ever present possibility of an attempt at the landing of a military force in Belgium, in which case a dangerous menace to the German troops would be presented by the presence in the field of operations and the immediate rear of the German defenses of a large assemblage of able bodied adults who already have shown a disposition to make trouble.

Not Forced to War Labor.

As to the allegation that deported workmen would be forced to labor on munitions work, it is asserted in official quarters that there is not the slightest foundation therefor.

It is said that all the earlier comers to Germany are satisfied with their conditions of employment and their high pay, and Belgians who still remain in their own country are quoted as declaring that the measure is desirable in the interests of the unemployed workmen and the remaining population.

U. S. HAS GONE LIMIT.

Washington, D. C., Dec. 9.—With publication of the American protest to Germany on the deportations of Belgians, state department officials disclosed today, the United States government has exhausted its means of diplomacy, and has laid the case before American public opinion, from which it will expect to draw guidance for the next steps, if any be taken.

No actual reply in the form of a note has been received from Germany, but no doubt has been left by the chancellor that the protest of the United States will not be heeded.

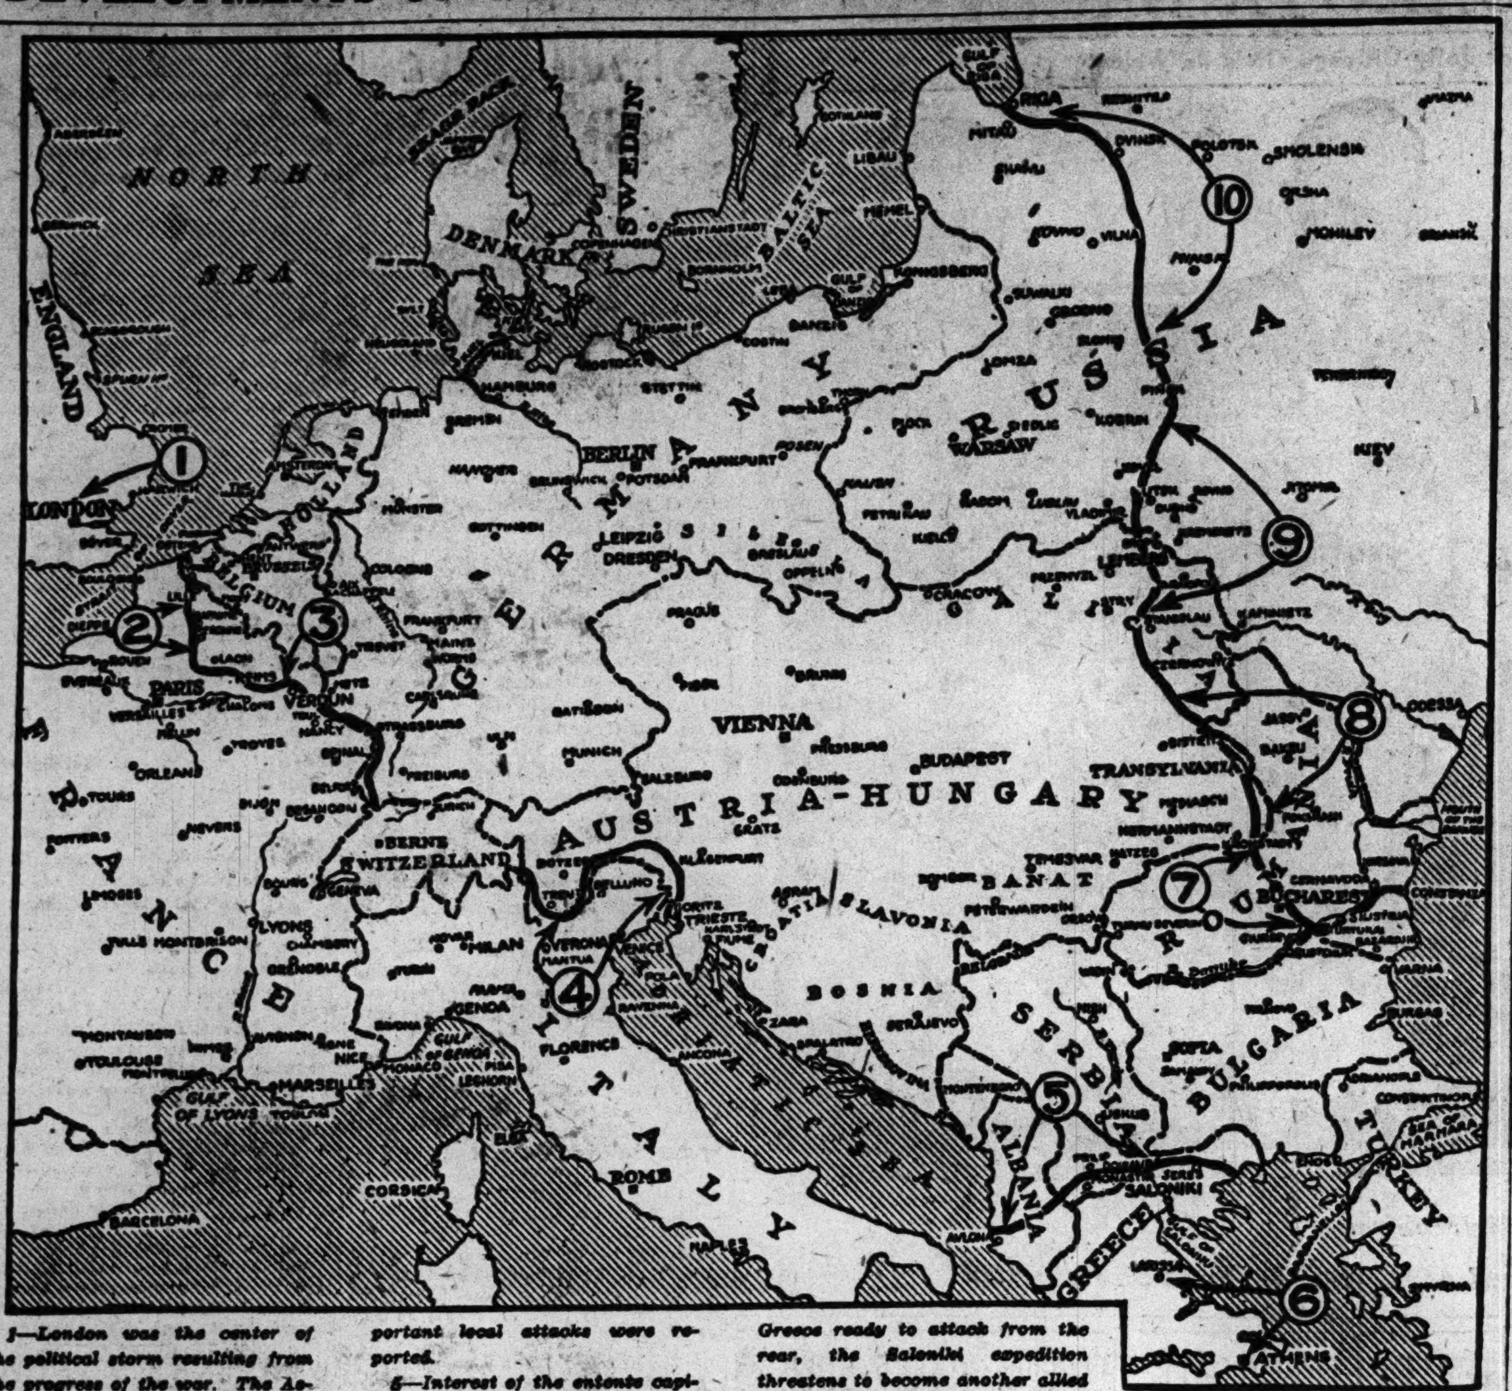
Publication of the protest was disclosed at the state department today to be for the purpose of placing the case before American public opinion. It was also revealed that publication of the document might be interpreted as unfriendly, but that this contingency had been taken into consideration before it was given out.

No indication has been given as to when the official German reply will be received, or even if one will be sent, but it is understood that if one does come it will readily by made public.

VOTE CONFIDENCE IN ITALY.

PARIS, Dec. 9.—A Havas dispatch from Rome says that the debate in the chamber of deputies on the government's declarations regarding the war, which lasted four days, ended with a vote of confidence in the government, 376 to 45.

DEVELOPMENTS OF WEEK ALONG EUROPEAN BATTLE FRONTS



1—London was the center of the political storm resulting from the progress of the war. The Asquith ministry crumpled under the adverse criticism hurled at it from the opposition led by David Lloyd-George. Failure to prosecute the war successfully was laid at its doors. The demand for younger men and more concentrated and undivided authority and responsibility in the war councils was too insistent to be longer denied. The cabinet members resigned and the king requested A. Bonar Law to form a new ministry. This offer was declined and Lloyd-George was called to the helm. He accepted the premiership and the announcement of the new ministry is expected early this week. The final military authority is to be vested in a war council of five members of the cabinet. According to latest reports it will be made up of the premier, A. Bonar Law, Lord Curzon, Lord Milner, and Arthur Henderson.

2—Artillery duels and trench raids were the only activities reported from the western front during the week. No important infantry actions were developed.

3—The Verdun sector figured in the reports from the western front during the week when, by a sudden attack the Germans took the crest of Hill 304 from the French.

4—Bad weather conditions prevailed along both the Trentino and Julian fronts of the Austro-Italian battle lines. Only bombardments, air raids, and unimportant local attacks were reported.

5—Interest of the entente capitals is being centered on the Macedonian front now that the Roumanian campaign has collapsed. Reports of heavy reinforcements arriving for the armies confronting the allies in Serbia and northern Greece, joined with the disquieting developments at Athens, are causing grave apprehension in London and Paris.

Early in the week Serbian successes were reported in the Cerna river bend northeast of Monastir. As the week closed the Bulgars, reinforced by Germans, delivered three counter attacks.

6—From Athens comes the report that King Constantine is mobilizing secretly a force of between 125,000 and 160,000 men. Thus it appears the danger that has lurked in the Saloniki-Macedonian situation from the first is soon to become a reality—Greece is to attack the allied Macedonian forces in the rear. Threats of a blockade, the landing of marines at Piraeus, the occupation of Saloniki and Macedonia all seem to have failed against King Constantine. With Von Mackensen able to rush a large army into Macedonia without seriously weakening his lines in Roumania and Greece ready to attack from the rear, the Saloniki expedition threatens to become another allied disaster in the Balkans.

7-8—The fall of Bucharest was the one outstanding military event in the war during the last week. With the army of Archduke Joseph holding firm on the north end of the great Teuton net spread to take the Roumanian capital and Von Mackensen's Dobrudja army anchored to the south of the Danube, the Austro-German forces swept across the Argechu river to their goal.

Early in the week a desperate effort was made to save Bucharest. The Russian offensive in the wooded Carpathians was continued and Russian reinforcements rushed to the Bucharest region. Only a temporary halt of the invaders resulted, and Wednesday came the announcement that the German flag was floating over the Roumanian capital. The city was abandoned before the heavy Teuton guns were brought to bear.

It was the breaking of the Roumanian defense west and northwest of Bucharest that doomed the city.

The week closed with the Russians on the offensive along the wooded Carpathians and the passes from Galicia, Bukowina, and Moldavia into Hungary and Transylvania.

Berlin estimated the losses of the Roumanians from the Danube to the Transylvanian mountains since Dec. 1 at 70,000 prisoners, 184 cannon, and 120 machine guns.

9—In the Tarnopol and Lutsk sectors on the eastern front artillery and trench fighting was reported. No important actions developed.

10—Farther to the north winter conditions have settled down along the Russian front.

WORK OUT PLAN OF GOVERNMENT FOR THE POLES

Teutons to Establish a State Council Pending Holding of Elections.

BERLIN, Dec. 9—[By wireless to Sayville.]—The Polish state council, which is to be established in the Polish territory occupied by German and Austro-Hungarian troops, will be a provisional body, to remain in office until elections have been held and a permanent administration has been set up, says the Overseas News agency. Of the twenty-five members of the council fifteen will be appointed from the territory organized by the Germans and ten from that held by the Austrians.

The council will hold its sessions in Warsaw, using the Polish language. It will elect a presiding officer, to be called the crown marshal. It is to give advice in regard to all legislative affairs and coöperate in the creation of state institutions, and will be intrusted with the drafting of all orders relating to general representation of both parts of the new kingdom.

Will Reconstruct Country.

The council also will have the right to reach decisions in regard to the economic reconstruction of the country. Funds will be placed to its credit by the German and Austrian administrations and the council will have the power of levying additional direct taxes and of contracting loans, subject to the approval of the military authorities.

Dr. Haas, a member of the reichstag and an officer of the civil administration of the government of Warsaw, explained today the purposes of the organization recently established to represent the Jews of the occupied Polish territory. Dr. Haas is one of the leading members of the progressive people's party and has long been prominent in Jewish organization work.

Self-Government for Jews.

"The foundation of the supreme council will, I trust, mark the beginning of a new and better era for the Jews of Poland," he said. "Conditions among the Jewish communities were terrible, and it was essential to abolish them. Under the new régime we shall have well organized communities, with the right of self-government and taxation. The self-governing bodies not only will do constructive work among themselves, but will represent the Jews in their intercourse with other groups.

"Furthermore, all doubt is removed as to the status of the Jewish religion. The new order guarantees liberty of conscience to all, and in every community associations for divine service may be formed."

Man Falls Into River.

GERMANS SEIZE 70,000 CAPTIVES FROM ROUMANIA

Keep Up Vigorous Pursuit of Defeated Enemy, Whose Armies Are Divided.

BULLETIN.

AMSTERDAM, Dec. 9.—It is reported Lieut. Gen. von Heinrich has been appointed governor of Bucharest. Field Marshal von Mackensen with his staff has taken up quarters at the royal palace in Bucharest, says a dispatch from Sofia to the Koelnische Volks Zeitung.

BY ARTHUR S. DRAPER.

(By Cable to The Chicago Tribune.)

LONDON, Dec. 9.—The Germanic allies are sweeping on in Roumania to the conquest of more and more territory. Everywhere on the 200 mile front in Eastern Wallachia, King Ferdinand's troops are in retreat.

In the last week 70,000 prisoners have fallen into the hands of Gen. Mackensen and Gen. Falkenhayn.

"The losses in dead and wounded are in proportion," the statement adds.

The same period has given the Teutons 184 cannon and 120 machine guns. The booty taken is incalculable.

"The size of these figures," says the Berlin announcement, "permits of a plain conclusion being drawn as to the importance of the success obtained by the Teutonic troops and shows to what a degree the Roumanian army is demoralized."

Trap Forces in North.

Several thousand Roumanian soldiers were trapped yesterday when the ninth German army, under Gen. Delminsingen, routed divisions which tried to escape from the Predeal sector toward the southeast. The swift retreat of the Roumanians has compelled the Russians to abandon positions they held in this region.

The absence of any statement to the contrary from Teutonic quarters leads to the conclusion that the main Roumanian army is still beyond the grasp of the enemy and probably is taking its station near the line of the Sereth, where it will make the final bid for Moldavia.

There is no cessation in the attacks of the Russians against the enemy's lines in the wooded Carpathians and in eastern Transylvania. In the Putna valley the Teutons were driven from two heights, losing 500 prisoners and nine guns. On both sides of the Tchedenich river the czar's troops continued their advance, while ground was gained north of Dornavatra.

These successes for Russian arms were only local, however, and to match them the enemy smashed forward at other points on these fronts.

Get Orders of Enemy.

BERLIN (via Sayville Wireless), Dec. 9.—Victory at the battle of the Argesu which made certain the fall of Bucharest, was in a measure made possible by the Germans accidentally discovering battle orders of the Roumanian general army staff before the orders had reached the Roumanian officers.

It was the second time during the Roumanian campaign that the Germans had thus obtained—in advance of delivery to the Roumanian officers—copies of the general staff's general orders. At the beginning of Gen. von Falkenhayn's offensive, when the Germans threatened the Roumanian first army at the Red Tower pass, the Roumanians sent a French aeroplane from Predeal pass, carrying orders to this first army and notifying them that the second Roumanian army was marching to its assistance. The aeroplane was shot down and the orders captured. From Kronstadt, Gen. Falkenhayn then checkmated the Roumanian relief scheme by attacking the enemy in the rear.

BACON AIDS WAR WOUNDED.

New York, Dec. 9.—Passengers on the St. Louis, which sailed today, included Robert Bacon, former ambassador to France, on a mission connected with the American ambulance service in that country, and Sir Edgar Bowring, head of the Red Cross line of steamships. Mr. Bacon said $400,000 had been subscribed in the United States toward the ambulance fund and that much more is needed.

CHARITY BALL STAR

Screen Actress Who Will Lead Grand March at Benefit for Theatrical Hospital.

Miss Nell Craig
LEWIS SMITH PHOTO

The second annual charity ball for the benefit of the American Theatrical Hospital association will be held at the First Regiment armory, Sixteenth street and Michigan avenue, next Saturday evening. The proceeds will go to the support of the new and completely equipped hospital now nearing completion at 850 Irving Park boulevard, just west of Broadway. Later it is planned to add a nurses' home and diagnostic and research laboratory. The hospital section is expected to be ready for occupancy by Jan. 1.

The American Theatrical Hospital association is a charitable organization. It is the only theatrical hospital in the world.

Among the features of the ball will be a midwinter circus with elephants, horse, dogs, and monkeys, tumbling and acrobatic feats. There will be a scene showing the actual making of a moving picture film. The grand march will be led by the Essanay movie stars, Miss Nell Craig and Bryant Washburn. There will be special society and fancy dancing acts between dances. Late in the evening a "theatrical revel" is on the cards. This will be attended by most of the actresses and actors engaged in Chicago at that date.

The committee on ticket sales, among the most active members of which are Mrs. Charles N. Goodnow, chairman, and Mrs. Jay F. Pitts, report large advance sales of tickets. Many of the boxes arranged for also have been sold.

DEBATE BY TAFT AND BRYAN ON INSURANCE FOR PEACE.

Newspapers in All Neutral Countries and Some at War Will Carry Their Arguments.

New York, Dec. 9.—A joint debate between ex-President William Howard Taft and William Jennings Bryan on the question of how to insure the world against war was announced tonight. The debate will be carried on through the newspapers of the United States, South America, Australia, New Zealand, and certain European countries. The first articles will appear New Year's day.

Former President Taft will argue the affirmative of the following three propositions:

"Is the platform of the league to enforce peace feasible?"

"Does it furnish the most practical plan for securing permanent peace after the end of the present war?"

"Should the United States become a signatory to the league to enforce peace?"

Mr. Taft is the official head of the league and in accepting the invitation to debate, Bryan wrote:

"No one is better qualified by ability and high purpose to present the merits of the plan."

NO MORE SHELL CONTRACTS FROM BRITAIN FOR AMERICA.

Purchase Will Be Discontinued at End of Six Months—Will Need Raw Material, However.

Toronto, Ont., Dec. 9.—English shell contracts in the United States virtually all run out within six months, and most of them within three months, after the first of the year, and will not be renewed, it was announced here today by J. W. Flavelle, chairman of the imperial munitions board for Canada.

This would increase Canada's responsibilities in the future and Canadian munitions manufacturers will be expected to fulfill their contracts for 1917, he said.

"Of course Britain will still continue to purchase copper, brass, steel, and other raw materials from the States," he said, "but it will not purchase any more of the finished shells."

'OLD GUARD' OF GREAT BRITAIN SHORN OF POWER

Lord Northcliffe Says Empire Has Passed Through Greatest Revolt Since 1642.

BULLETIN.

LONDON, Dec. 10, 3 a. m.—Lord Northcliffe's organ, the Weekly Dispatch, says that Premier Lloyd-George's war program comprises the following:

First—The arming of merchantmen in order to fight the submarine peril.

Second—The preparation for the spring offensive.

Third—The mobilization of the civil population between the ages of 16 and 60.

Fourth—The making effective of the blockade.

Sixth—The increasing of the home food production.

Seventh—The banning of work immaterial to the war.

Eighth—Enforcing of the prohibition of luxuries.

Ninth—The instituting of meatless days.

BY JAMES M. TUOHY.

[Copyright: 1916: By Press Publishing Company (New York World).]

LONDON, Dec. 9.—Lord Northcliffe, who has been the largest influence behind the new prime minister in bringing about the British ministerial crisis and who wields a power hardly second to that of David Lloyd-George himself in forming and guiding public opinion in this country, gave today the following statement on what the cabinet crisis means and what the new government intends to do.

"We have been through the biggest revolution in England, this week, since the passing of the Reform bill in 1832 which so greatly extended the franchise," he said. "This week's revolution will have far wider consequences than that—consequences almost as great as those of our civil war which began in 1642.

Labor Well Represented.

"We have smashed our previous conceptions of government by calling in the help of five representatives of labor. We have taken the power from the hands of our party politicians and given it to our ministers without respect to party. We have gathered in the help of the best business brains in the empire.

"Two of our new ministers are well known in America—Sir Albert Stanley, who received twelve years' training in railway organizations in the United States, and H. S. Lever Head, perhaps the chief among the English accounting firms so largely employed in the United States.

"Another business brain is that of Lord Devonport, who as head of the large grocery stores, eventually controlled the port of London.

Blow Crushes Politicians.

"We have taken the ruling of the navy out of the hands of the septuagenarian philosopher, Balfour, and put it into those of Sir Edward Carson, who abandoned the government last year because it would not wage war as war should have been waged.

"But I shall not weary you with a list of changes. They have come as a crushing blow to our politicians and ward heelers.

"On top of the whole edifice we have placed David Lloyd-George, who is of so revolutionary a turn of mind that the late J. P. Morgan described him as an anarchist.

War Plans in Few Hands.

"The running of the war is in the hands of a tiny committee of men of energy, with Sir William Robertson, chief of the imperial military staff, and Admiral Sir John Jellicoe sitting with them. They will meet daily and devote whole time to war, nothing but war. They will have, I believe, absolute control of the foreign office and other offices, and from the point of view of the United States, I am glad of that fact.

"The head of the new combination, David Lloyd-George, is one of the few men in our political life who comprehends what the United States stands for.

"American business visitors here, who do not know England well, seem to be afraid we are approaching something like a state of socialism and that liberalism and radicalism have run wild. That is not the case.

"What is happening is that with the pressure of war comes the hard necessity for national efficiency, and our new prime minister in his search for that efficiency has called to his councils working men, business men, and scientists, without regard to class or party. The old Liberal group of dawdlers, who for two and a half years were playing at war, are shaking their heads at this tremendous change in the democratic governance.

Workmen Real Energy of War.

"I have had the honor to assist in what has taken place, and am absolutely confident of the result. The British workingman of 1916 as often as not is better educated than the bourgeoise of twenty-five years ago. Nine of ten wooden crosses that mark the graves of British soldiers in France are on the graves of workmen. Ninety per cent of the energy put into the war was the energy of workingmen.

"They have every right, therefore, to join Lloyd-George's government, and so entirely has the war broken down class distinctions in this country that their advent is welcomed in political circles hitherto rigidly exclusive.

"I do not imagine the millennium has or will ever come. What has arrived is the triumph of the principles of democratic government as observed in the United States, Great Britain, and France.

May Settle Irish Question.

"You will have noticed that Lloyd-George, who is an advanced home ruler, has now associated with him Sir Edward Carson, the Ulster leader. A few months ago Lloyd-George, with the coöperation of Carson and Devlin, together with a few humble efforts of my own, almost secured home rule for Ireland on a basis that satisfied every one, except a few Tory landlords and some extreme Sinn Feiners.

"I am one of those who believe that the daily association of Lloyd-George and Carson will result in the settling of that Irish problem, which is not nearly so difficult as hack politicians think.

"I believe that a man like Lord Shaughnessy, president of the Canadian Pacific railway, could at an imperial conference, aided by Irish members of all factions, evolve a settlement that would please 95 per cent of the Irish people.

English Resources Untouched.

"The war will now be conducted on different lines from those of the last two and a half years. Already, as I can tell from dispatches I am getting through from the United States, the censorship is easier. Our people will know more of the truth about the war, and will fight it with all the greater determination on that account.

"We are not at present using more than 55 per cent of our national and imperial energy in our conduct of the war. Some millions more men will be called to the army, and there are more millions of women asking to be called into some form of national service. In man power and money power our resources are practically untouched.

"Hitherto, ridiculous as it may seem, the biggest English speaking army in the world has had only one American correspondent regularly accredited to it —Frederick Palmer, a good writer, but a like position is now accorded to Phillip Sims of the United Press and similar facilities are to be extended as need arises.

"The threatened German submarine warfare looks to me as being just as great a menace to you as to us and it is being accompanied, as you will observe from German newspapers, by an extra special 'Gott strafe Amerika' campaign.

"We are going to arm our merchant ships and put the guns where they can get the submarines. But ruthless submarine warfare means the sinking of neutral vessels, including yours as well as the belligerents'. I don't suppose American sailormen will take this U-boat work lying down, any more than ours. That, however, is a domestic question for yourselves.

Can Fight Own War.

"It has been suggested by some German-American newspapers that we have asked or desire coöperation with the United States in this and other matters. We feel, so far as this country is concerned, that we can look after ourselves. We are glad to have the sympathy of the pro-ally Americans.

"Lloyd-George will win the war, as far as we are concerned, and that's why the German papers are squealing over our avowed determination to take no notice of their peace trickery."

THOUSAND PERSONS KILLED BY A MUNITIONS EXPLOSION.

Russian Factory Blows Up and Kills All Workers—Cause Is Still in Doubt.

BERLIN [via Sayville wireless], Dec. 9.—One thousand persons are believed to have perished when an explosion took place in an ammunition factory at La Satannaya, the Russian paper Rech reports, according to the semi-official news agency today.

"The Russian newspaper Rech reports that a new explosion took place in an ammunition factory at La Satannaya," the agency says. "The cause is unknown. At the moment of the catastrophe about 1,000 persons were working in the factory, all of whom evidently perished. The factory was completely destroyed."

Big Explosion in Italy.

TURIN, Dec. 8 [via Paris, Dec. 9.]—An explosion has occurred in the Alexandria explosives plant. It is feared that more than fifty people have been killed. The cause of the disaster has not been established.

GERMANS CLAIM ARMORED AUTOS SURPASS 'TANKS'

Feats of Their New Engines of War in Roumanian Battles Are Described.

GEN. VON FALKENHAYN'S HEADQUARTERS IN ROUMANIA, Dec. 9, via London.—One of the most interesting features of the Roumanian campaign, from a German standpoint, has been the spectacular work of the new armored automobiles evolved soon after the advent of the British "tanks" on the Somme front but which the developments in Roumania have shown to be a vast improvement in efficiency over the British machines.

Even in the brief tests it has had since the Germans crossed the mountains into the Roumanian plains the new German armored car has shown itself an efficient auxiliary to the cavalry in patrol work, as it frequently can inflict infinitely more damage than a whole squadron and is more difficult to destroy than the English invention. Its achievements so far include an attack on Roumanian infantry in which 300 men were killed.

Carries Crew of Ten Men.

The cars are twenty-five feet in length with wheels a foot wide and encased in solid rubber. They carry a crew of ten men, including the machine gun operators, the chauffeur and one substitute, and one officer. The machine guns can be operated in almost any direction through narrow slits. At one end, under the customary hood, is a 100 horse power motor, and at the other end, under a similar hood, is the gasoline tank.

Each man in the crew is an expert mechanic and chauffeur.

The automobile engine is both air and water cooled. The car shell is impervious to machine gun and rifle fire.

Take Village by Surprise.

There have been many odd experiences with these automobiles in Roumania. On one of the first trips a car entered a village not yet captured, where the officer and his crew were taken for Russians because the Germans were not supposed to have armored cars. Just as the crew was being enthusiastically greeted three Roumanian locomotive drivers tried to get their engines away, but the automobile was too swift for them. It raced ahead, the crew destroyed a portion of the track, and the automobile received the engines with a withering fire, which forced their surrender after they had been disabled.

The chief advantage of the new automobile, in contrast with the British machine, is that it can run at an average speed of twenty-five miles an hour, as contrasted with the snaillike pace of the entente cars."

ONE NEUTRAL, THREE BRITISH SHIPS SUNK, LLOYDS' REPORT

Germans Seize Two Craft with Cargoes of Cotton—Case Similar to Marina Sinking Is Cited.

LONDON, Dec. 9.—Lloyds' reports the sinking of three British and one neutral ship. The probable loss of the Norwegian steamers Saga and Rakiura was also announced. The known victims were:

SIGURD [Danish]; fate of crew unknown.

AVRISTAN [British]; fate of crew unknown.

CONCH [British]; two of crew landed; fate of others unknown.

TANFIELD [British]; fate of crew unknown.

TWO AMERICANS IN CREW.

Portland, Me., Dec. 9.—The British steamship Avristan, reported by Lloyds as having been sunk, left here on Nov. 20 for a port in the United Kingdom with 176,000 bushels of wheat. Its crew included two Americans, F. Murray of New Haven, Conn., and Tony [illegible]orris of New Bedford, Mass.

CREAM OF RICE is a blend of two of the most widely used of all human foods. The addition of a body-building food, like milk, to a great energy-giving food, like rice, gives an almost perfect or balanced whole.

Cream of Rice Muffins

Take one cup CREAM OF RICE, one-half teaspoon salt, one tablespoon flour, and cook as for Breakfast Food. Let cool, then add three eggs well beaten, one pint of milk, two tablespoons melted butter and heaping teaspoon baking powder. Bake in muffin pans about twenty minutes.

OFFICIAL REPORTS ON RESULTS OF EUROPEAN BATTLES

ROUMANIAN FRONT

GERMAN

BERLIN, Dec. 9.—The general army headquarters tonight issued the following report on Roumanian operations:

Front of Arch Duke Joseph: Between the Kirlibaba and Bistritza valleys, the Russians yesterday launched strong attacks. The majority of them failed with heavy losses under our fire. North of Dorna Watra, ground that was lost was dearly paid for by the aggressor. Likewise in attacks south of the Trotus valley, which virtually failed, the Russians obtained only a minor local success while wasting considerable forces.

Army group of Field Marshal von Mackensen: The left wing of the ninth army routed Roumanian divisions, which tried to make their way towards the southeast from the passes northeast of Sinaia. Several thousand men were made prisoner and many cannon captured. The enemy is in retreat all along the line before the right wing of this army, and before the rapidly advancing Danube army.

Since Dec. 1 as far as appears at present from a superficial clearing up of the battlefields around Bucharest, the Roumanians have lost to these two armies more than 70,000 men, 184 cannon, and 120 machine guns. The size of these figures permits of a plain conclusion being drawn as to the importance of the success obtained by the allied (Teutonic) troops and shows to what a degree the Roumanian army is demoralized. The losses in dead and wounded are in proportion to the number of prisoners. The booty, war material, and field material taken is incalculable.

RUSSIAN

PETROGRAD, Dec. 9.—The official statement dealing with operations in Roumania says:

West and south of Putna valley, where the enemy was dislodged from two heights, we captured 500 prisoners, including ten officers, and six machine guns, one cannon, and two bomb mortars.

Southwest of the village of Sultaenly by repeated attacks the enemy obliged us to abandon the height which we occupied yesterday.

On both banks of the River Tchedenich our advance continues.

In Wallachia the Roumanian troops, under unceasing hostile pressure, continue to retire to the eastward. In consequence of this our troops who are on the left flank of the Roumanians also are retiring.

In the wooded Carpathians the struggle for the height five versts to the south of Javornika died down. Our troops retired to their own trenches.

RUSSIAN FRONT

RUSSIAN

PETROGRAD, Dec. 9.—The official report regarding the western Russian front says:

At the village of Pelikana, which is south of Lake Drisviaty, a German airplane was brought down by our machine gun fire. The pilot and observer were made prisoners.

South of Ponorjan, in the region of the village of Koniukhi, our scouts broke through the enemy's barbed wire entanglements and captured the enemy's ambuscade. Some of the enemy were bayoneted.

In the region of Svistelniki our troops are making reconnaissances.

GERMAN

BERLIN, Dec. 9.—The official report issued by the army headquarters in regard to the Russian front says:

Front of Prince Leopold—North of Lake Narocz and in the Skory narrows several Russian companies after artillery preparations vainly attacked our positions.

MACEDONIAN FRONT

GERMAN

BERLIN, Dec. 9.—Following is the official report of today from the Macedonian front:

The hill positions north of Monastir and northeast of Paralovo were shelled strongly, after which attacks were made in the Cerna bend, which were repulsed easily.

ITALIAN FRONT

ITALIAN

ROME, Dec. 9.—Describing fighting with the Austrians, the official report issued tonight says:

In the Trentino, violent artillery actions occurred in the Adige valley, where our batteries dispersed a long transport column on the northwestern slopes of Col Santo. On the Julian front yesterday there was rather less artillery activity. Bad weather continues in the whole theater of war.

FRENCH FRONT

FRENCH

PARIS, Dec. 9.—The war office issued the following statement on the campaign tonight:

In Champagne we made a successful surprise attack on a German salient in the region of Butte de Mesnil; we penetrated adversary trenches, destroyed mine batteries, and brought back prisoners.

On the left bank of the Meuse a spirited artillery action was maintained in the region of Hill 304. There was an intermittent cannonade on the rest of the front.

German artillery and mine throwers, energetically counter shelled by the Belgian batteries and trench guns, violently bombarded the Yser dike and the sector before Dixmude.

GERMAN

BERLIN, Dec. 9.—The official report in regard to fighting in France says:

Army group of Crown Prince Rupprecht—In the Somme sector a violent artillery duel occurred. Strong patrols advancing during the night against our positions near Le Transloy were repulsed by our fire and in hand to hand fighting a number of Australians remained in our hands.

BRITISH

LONDON, Dec. 9.—The official report from British headquarters in France, issued tonight, reads:

We raided hostile trenches in the neighborhood of Neuville St. Vaast and Souchez, inflicting losses on the enemy and capturing a machine gun. Our trench mortars successfully bombarded the enemy lines north of Ploegsteert and east of Arras.

The hostile artillery was less active today, except in the Ypres and La Bassee areas and west of Le Sars.

FORMER MRS. BLAKENEY SUES FOR ALIENATION.

Covington, Ky., Dec. 9.—Charging that the affections of her husband were alienated, Lelia M. Bayless, who now resides in Ludlow, Ky., filed suit today against Mrs. Sarah Ann Chalmers, Latonia avenue, Latonia, Ky. She asks $25,000 as damages. Miss Bayless is the former wife of Sandford I. Blakeney of Chicago.

Mrs. Chalmers is the former wife of Charles Chalmers, who, she says, is a brother of the Detroit automobile manufacturer.

"This suit is unjustified," said Mrs. Chalmers. "Blakeney met me eleven years ago in Dayton, O., when I went there on a visit to my former husband. Later I met him in Chicago, where he represented himself as having been divorced. He was an expert golf player and offered to teach me the game while I was in Chicago. I didn't know Blakeney was married until Mrs. Blakeney filed suit for divorce."

ASSERTS ALLIES FAILED IN THE WESTERN OFFENSIVE

BERLIN, Dec. 9.—[By Wireless to Sayville.]—"Since the failure of the last great attack on the Ancre, made on Nov. 18, the British and French have carried out serious movements separately," says the Overseas News agency, "but neither surprise attacks, such as that made by the French against St. Pierre Vaast wood nor assaults after strong artillery preparation such as the British undertook east of the Albert-Warlencourt road, brought any success. In both cases they were repulsed with sanguinary losses.

"The French and British are faced with the difficult alternative whether to continue the offensive on the Somme or prepare a new offensive at another place. Reconnoitering operations at other points, such as the Ypres bend, indicate that the latter is their intention, but the German resistance shows there are no weak spots on the German western front."

FORCE DELAY ON BRITISH POLICY

Because of Vacancies Lloyd-George Holds Up Statement on Ministry.

NAMES WAR COUNCIL.

LONDON, Dec. 9.—The announcement of Premier Lloyd-George's cabinet has been postponed until tomorrow, as some of the appointments have not yet been arranged. The latest reports give the constitution of the war council as Mr. Lloyd-George, Andrew Bonar Law, Lord Curzon, Lord Milner, and Arthur Henderson. Lord Milner will be minister without portfolio and Lord Curzon lord privy seal.

A. J. Balfour probably will follow the example of Viscount Grey in taking a title to enable him to be spokesman for the foreign office in the house of lords, while Lord Robert Cecil will continue to repesent the department in the house of commons. None of the Liberal members of Mr. Asquith's cabinet will hold office under the new prime minister.

After the publication of the cabinet, the next official action will be the meeting of parliament on Tuesday, when it is expected that Mr. Lloyd-George will make a speech outlining the policies of his administration and the new ministers will be asked many questions concerning conditions in Greece and on other vital matters.

French Seek Reform.

PARIS, Dec. 9.—A bill the purpose of which is to reorganize and simplify the existing cabinet was introduced in the chamber of deputies today by a group of five deputies.

The proposed measure provides that for the duration of the war the cabinet shall be composed of five members, who shall be the ministers of foreign affairs, finance, interior, war, and marine.

HOOSIERS PRAISE INDIANA GIRL AS THE REAL IDEAL

Centennial Celebration in Chicago Featured by George Ade Sketch.

There was an ex-governor, a Napoleon of politics, a literary Whale, college presidents, judges, and other Unclassified Celebrities at the Indiana society banquet at the Congress hotel last night who didn't even get on The Program. That indicated, according to George Ade, who was Toastmaster, the Quality of Those Present.

About 600 members of the society celebrated the one hundredth anniversary of the state and lived over the last 100 years. There was an Indiana hall of fame, in which the pictures of more than thirty of Indiana's great men were thrown on the screen.

Indiana Girl Shown.

A few courses along the "Indiana Girl" was pictured. Six young women represented the fashion periods of the last 100 years.

There were not many speakers. In opening the toastmaster said his slogan was: "Thank God for Ade: he kept us out of oratory."

"I was triumphantly elected," said Mr. Ade, "because the members knew I had never made a speech more than ten minutes long."

Mr. Ade's Verses.

Mr. Ade's verses, read as one after another type of the "Indiana Girl" appeared, follow:

100 Years Ago.

My great-grandfather came out west—a sturdy pioneer,
When neither you nor I had ever thought of being here;
With strong right arm and spirit bold he faced a savage band
And planted freedom's banner in a rude, primeval land.
When springtime came he sallied forth into the forest grim,
Where mighty trees had interlocked above the shadows dim,
And there where woven sunlight played in many a dancing whirl,

80 Years Ago.

Then came the girl of eighty years ago;
Where once the red man's wigwam stood, a cabin home appeared,
And fields of grain were smiling when the forest had been cleared;
A spinning wheel outside the door—a few old fashioned flowers,
A simple, kindly, humble folk were these grandsires of ours.
The maiden in the doorway was a pleasant sight to see;
She never wore a high heeled shoe, or corset called "C. B.";
She never heard of diamonds and never wore a pearl—

60 Years Ago.

And now behold her sixty years ago;
A strange daguerreotype of one attired like Henry Clay;
With ample stock and high cravat and coat of velveteen.
'Twas he who lived to love and woo and wed the hoop skirt queen.
We speak with patronizing grins of those old fashioned times,
When lovers talked like cavaliers and wrote resounding rhymes;
They courted a fantastic maid of crinoline and curl—
Just sixty years ago she was the Indiana girl.

40 Years Ago.

Forty years ago the bustle bustled in;
About the time this happy land discovered Lillian Russell,
Our native state likewise discovered what is called a bustle;
Poke bonnets then were quite the style and parasols so gay,
And panniers of the brightest hue turned night-time into day.
We sometimes see a tintype quaint of that odd, freakish age,
And possibly you'd wish to see its likeness on the stage;
So for these men of wrinkled brow and temples fringed with snow
I'll introduce to you the maid of forty years ago.

20 Years Ago.

The "Hour Glass" of two decades past:
It has not been for some of you so very many moons
Since almost ev'ry gown you saw had sleeves like twin balloons.
The ladies seemed so straight and tall, and if my mem'ry's right
"The Hour Glass," the style was called, with waist and bodice tight.
Of course each style that came along was welcomed in our state.
A girl might just as well be off the earth as out of date.
So I am adding to my list of maidens you should know,
The sprightly peacherine of only twenty years ago.

All Indiana Girls.

But they are all Indiana girls;
I fear that in our family it's got to be the rage
To love our Indiana girls of each succeeding age,
A victim of heredity, I'm foreordained by fate
To lavish my affections on the girl that's up to date.
For when I look at all the types from 1816 down,
I think my girl is best of all—I rave about her gown.
I swear by eyes that won't behave and teeth as white as pearl,
I'm here to state, she's up to date, the Indiana girl.

The second part took place in the gold room, and here were addresses by Frederick Landis, Harry S. New, Strickland W. Gillilan, and Chase S. Osborn.

The event was very formal, and all those who applied for admittance after the first part were denied and thus annoyances were prevented.

COOK COUNTY BANKERS OPPOSE CITY BANK LAW.

Club Issues Synopsis of Reasons for Objecting to Regulation by Council.

The Cook County Bankers' club has issued the following synopsis of the reasons why the Chicago city council should not pass an ordinance providing for the regulation of private banks:

Questionable constitutionality.

Would provide another excuse for blocking proposed state legislation.

Would not provide for regulation of downstate private banks.

Incorporation under the banking laws of this state is essential to successful modern banking.

Necessity of private banks having to adjust their affairs twice when state enacts law.

Might increase number of private bank failures if not given ample time to convert assets in order that they might comply.

Some existing state banks with $200,000 capital might surrender charters and become "city banks."

COURT TEST FOR TAX AMENDMENT WILL BE PUSHED

80 Cent Rate Fixed as Canvassing Board Holds Proposal Is Passed.

Two steps of vital interest to taxpayers of Illinois were taken in Springfield yesterday. The first was the decision by the state canvassing board that the tax amendment to the constitution voted on at the recent elecion had passed. The other was the fixing of the tax rate for 1917 at 80 cents on the $100.

On the question of passage of the tax amendment all members of the board were agreed, but the understanding was that the question shall be carried to the Supreme court as soon as possible on some minor act passed by the general assembly under the powers conferred by the tax proposal.

The main point at issue is whether a majority of all votes cast is necessary to pass the proposal. If the Supreme court sustains the stand taken by the canvassing board that a majority of votes cast for legislative candidates is sufficient the way is paved for a prompt revision of the archaic tax laws of the state.

Tax Rate 80 Cents.

The fixing of the tax rate at 80 cents by the tax board, consisting of Gov. Dunne, State Auditor Brady, and State Treasurer Russel, was done after consulting Gov. Elect Lowden. The rate is the highest since 1872. It was apportioned as follows:

Public schools—16¼ cents.
University—10 cents.
General revenue—53¾ cents.

In a statement made at the conclusion of the meeting of the tax commission at which the rate was fixed, State Treasurer Russel said:

"Through the tax rate is the highest for many years, it is my opinion, it corresponds with a 50 cent rate five years ago.

Result of Compromise.

"The figure named at the meeting was the result of an agreement. While it is not quite as high as I believed it should be and as low as some other members of the board wanted it, the rate as a whole is satisfactory. The increased price of everything during the last year made it absolutely necessary to fix a high rate in order to run the state government."

LAKE FOREST PROPOSES TO BEAUTIFY ITS WATER FRONT.

Lake Forest is planning extensive improvements of its lake front, including a yacht harbor and a shore drive along the beach, Mayor William Mather Lewis announced last night. Concrete terraces on the eighty foot bluff to provide seats from which the people may view yacht races and other aquatic sports are contemplated.

Four well to do residents of Lake Forest, Mr. Lewis said, are ready to contribute the greater part of the fund necessary to carry out the plan, but he said that he would not reveal their names.

In general, Mr. Lewis said, the plan includes the following:

A yacht harbor.

A beach lake shore drive running from the north to the south limits of the city.

Concrete terraces providing seating space that people may view any aquatic events held off the shore.

A comprehensive playground system.

Evanston and Highland Park also are planning the construction of breakwaters to provide yacht harbors. Evanston already is constructing breakwaters.

MISS DOTY SEES GERMAN TREND FOR DEMOCRACY

Woman Writer Finds Spirit for Peace Growing—War Orphans Well Cared For.

Miss Doty's fifth article on Germany is written in the vein of the German revolutionists. She was looking for things to criticise and was able to find them.

In the face of official censorship it is not possible to obtain full and accurate news from any belligerent country.

All that can be done is to seek for and print all news obtainable.
EDITOR TRIBUNE.

BY MADELEINE Z. DOTY.
[Author of "Marital Misfits."]

I had been in Berlin two weeks. I wanted to see other portions of Germany. I learned there was to be an official tour for journalists. I went to the German press bureau.

"Can I visit some prison camps?" I inquired. "If you allow me and I find they are good I shall be glad to say so."

The young man in charge of the German press is keenly intelligent. He represents the civil authorities—the Von Hollweg group. There is a vast difference between the civil and military authorities. The civil are much more liberal. They are eager to send news to America. I was told of a nine day tour, which included a visit to two prison camps, and was invited to join the expedition.

An intelligent director conducts a group of reporters through the country. All expenses are paid and the journalists feted and feasted. I delayed my departure for a day. It was the moment of the Liebknecht trial, and I wished to be present in case of an uprising. Also by this postponement I avoided the special car assigned to journalists and could pay my own railroad fare to Karlsruhe.

Royalty Mourns Officer.

Berlin had been interesting. I was loathe to leave. As I came back to the Adlon for afternoon tea there was a great crowd around the entrance. A person in much gold braid and military trappings stood in the hallway. A hushed awe pervaded the place. Even the American reporters were standing humbly in corners.

The royal princess was upstairs. She and others of the nobility were on their way to a funeral. A Russian officer who had married into the German nobility had been killed at the front and the relatives were attending his funeral.

Having had tea and readjusted their veils, the royal party descended. The women were in deepest mourning, their veils so thick that no face was visible. A sacred circle surrounded them, into which no one stepped. The crowd was pushed back.

Outside were shining carriages, fat and prancing horses [the only fat horses in Berlin], and spick and span liveried servants. A silent crowd watched the entrance into the coaches. But it pressed up close to this bit of luxury.

Next day was the Liebknecht trial. No paper announced it, but word had been passed to me by the Social Democrats. That day I was up early. I took a taxi and drove round and round the big grim barracks where Liebknecht was said to be imprisoned. But all was still. No crowd gathered.

Bitterly disappointed by the lack of demonstration, I sought out some social intimate friends. I took two taxis and three trams to elude spies. These radicals were as disappointed as I that nothing had occurred. The factory workers were to have made a protest. A large body was to have gone on strike.

A leaflet stating the time and place for the demonstration was to have been distributed, but the leaflet failed to arrive. A big package reached Berlin, but when opened it contained a soldier's uniform. The government had gotten wind of the plot and seized the leaflets, substituting the uniform. No one dared make inquiries.

Munition Workers Strike.

Few people outside of Germany know of the extensive revolt carried on by the radicals. The day of Liebknecht's imprisonment, 5,500 workers in one munition factory alone, just outside Berlin, went on strike for the entire day. There were similar protests throughout the country.

The Liebknecht following grows. The workers more and more flock to his standard to the infinite dissatisfaction of the major wing of the Social Democratic party. The demonstration that caused Liebknecht's arrest will go down in history. Several thousands were gathered in Leipsizerstrasse and Potsdamerplatz. They had come to talk peace. But when Liebknecht appeared a mighty shout went up from a thousand throats. "Hurrah for Liebknecht!"

Liebknecht raised his hand for silence. Then steadily, though knowing the cost, he said: "Do not shout for me, shout rather that we have no more war. We will have peace—now."

Young Women Are Arrested.

Two young women standing near pulled his sleeve. "Don't," they begged, "it means the end for you." But the crowd had taken up the cry. "We will have peace now!" It went echoing down the street in a mighty roar. Police were already at Liebknecht's side.

He smiled at the young women and said: "Never mind, I am the best victim." But he was not the only victim. The two young women who never had met Liebknecht and had taken no part in the demonstration were arrested.

The number in prison is astounding. In Stutgart 400 are serving terms. There are corresponding numbers in all big cities, but I cannot quote accurately. But these victims are not suffering in vain. The military authorities clap every Liebknecht radical behind the bars, but they cannot stop the growing popular demand for peace. They dare not. The major wing of the Social Democratic party has taken advantage of this. Throughout Germany under their auspices peace meetings are being held. Everywhere people are signing a petition for peace on the basis of "status quo" before the war.

Murmer Among People.

As long as the demands are kept to this peace meetings are tolerated. Not to permit them would be fatal. There is a low, ominous murmur rising from the people.

Most of the leaders in Liebknecht groups are in prison, but the followers fight on; no longer openly, because they fear prison, but quietly and insidiously. Gradually they are spreading revolt among the workers. The spirit of freedom is abroad in Germany. It can never again be crushed.

Present among the group of Social Democrats with which I talked was the young daughter of a prominent member. Her father is at the front. He was sent there despite all protest.

"Thank God, I'm nearsighted," he said, "naturally I will never kill any one, and my failure to land a bullet may be mistaken for bad eyesight, in which case I will get back to you." His 16 year old daughter is as vivid and radiant as a spring morning. She is in the thick of the work her father left. Not long ago she and 500 boys and girls between the age of 13 and 20 had a demonstration.

Girls Sing "Marseillaise."

It was a holiday and they went to the country for a day of comradeship. Toward evening they came marching back along the country road singing the "Marseillaise." Over them they bore a banner which read: "We are the young guard of the proletariat." They passed only one policeman on their entry into the city. He was helpless before this indomitable 500. He could make no arrests, but he ordered them to disband.

Many of the girls were clad in gymnasium costume. The policeman was horrified. In factories and subway everywhere women wear bloomers, but this shocked policeman shuddered to see young girls so clad. The young crowd surrounded the officer gayly. Laughter was on their lips, humor shone in their eyes as they gave out wrong names and wrong addresses. For a painful hour with furrowed brow the worried official wrote busily. To this day he is still hunting for those girls.

It was with reluctance I took leave of this little radical group. It was late evening when I reached the Adlon. A spirit of excitement and tenseness pervaded the street. It had all day. Policemen stood on every corner. An unusual number of spies were abroad. It seemed evident the government feared an uprising. But it had planned a judicious stroke.

For some time there had been rumors that the Deutschland was back in Bremen. But if it was the government suppressed the fact. It kept that sugar plum for a psychological moment.

That evening when all thoughts were centered on Liebknecht's fate seemed the needed moment. As I came down the street a news sheet was slipped in my hand. These leaflets were being distributed gratis by the Berliner Morgen Post. In black letters across the page was "U Boat Deutschland eingetroffen —am Bord Alles Wohl." A little thrill coursed through me. It was magnetic and contagious. Life and color came to the eye of the spy, pedestrian, and soldier alike. This was a deed of which all Germany could be proud. It bound all together. Steps grew light and heads went up.

Lusitania News Different.

It was interesting to note the difference in effect produced by this news and that of the sinking of the Lusitania. I was in Berlin a year ago, just after the Lusitania disaster. Then the crowd was excited and angry. But no pride shone from eyes. The Deutschland news was different. It was as though a great gust of self-respect had flooded the nation.

Next morning, hidden in the back sheets of the papers, was a tiny paragraph of six lines announcing Liebknecht had been sentenced to four years' imprisonment at hard labor. But spread over the entire paper in black letters was the Deutschland's story. It was hard to riot against a government that had just done something of which all were proud.

I left in the early morning. I was to make a side trip and visit a home for war orphans before joining the touring expedition. During my entire stay in Berlin I had clamored to see homes for war orphans, without success. Either there were none near Berlin or they were not for inspection. But I was told a model institution had just been established outside Leipsic. This I should see.

After traveling from 7:30 a. m. until 4 p. m., and taking five trains, I saw twenty-five war orphans. My temper, I confess, was ruffled. I had seen hundreds of index cards describing destitute children, and now, after a strenuous day, twenty-five were exhibited. There can be no doubt it was a model institution. It was a farm situated among hills, with well equipped buildings.

The institution served two purposes: it trained hospital nurses, and these women while training cared for the children. The nurses were kindly. It was evident they did their best for their charges. One little group of three sisters had lost a father at the front, and their mother, an actress, had gone insane from grief.

The only criticism I had to make was that the children, regardless of parentage or inclination, were all being trained to be domestic servants. Germany's methods of education are often appalling. I came across one distressing example.

Mothers Assigned to Work.

At the beginning of the war German refugees, mothers, and children in other lands were allowed to return to the fatherland while the fathers were interned in the enemy's country. Frequently these mothers and babies had no money. When this was the case the German government assigned the mothers work in different places and put their children in institutions. Many a mother today is a wreck in a hospital through loss of husband and children.

I protested vigorously at this separation of families, but the authorities assured me it had to be. They said: "When we kept mother and children together the mothers quarreled and it made too much trouble."

The real truth of the matter I fear is that Germany wanted to train the boys in one institution to be soldiers and the girls in another to be domestic servants.

I make this statement advisedly because it is corroborated by another incident. I had seen how the poor suffered for lack of food. I knew if babies with adoring mothers and soldiers with devoted wives went hungry unloved war orphans had no chance in the struggle.

Plans to Aid Children.

The suffering of destitute children haunted me until an idea came. No one in the world could willingly want babies to go hungry. The thing to do was to charter big ocean steamers, gather up hungry children, and bring them to America. In America we could feed and clothe them until the war was over. No nation on earth would dare molest such a shipload. Rich Americans, I felt sure, could be counted on to finance the scheme.

I went to the German Red Cross authorities with my plan. I was praised for my kindly intention, but the authorities were adamant. I told many German workers about my project. As their children slip down hill from want of nourishment they will rise in wrath against a government that refused such aid.

After two hours in the orphans' home I departed. With the aid of two more trains I reached Leipsic. Here I had a solitary dinner in a nearly empty hotel. The dinner consisted of chicken and a baked apple and two almost white rolls presented to me by the orphan asylum.

Change Cars at 1:30 A. M.

At midnight I took the train for Karlsruhe. I had supposed I was boarding a sleeper, but found I had to change cars at 1:30 a. m.

This first train was bound for the western front. It was packed with soldiers. An officer, hearing my bad German, was inclined to question me, but soon desisted. In my compartment were three soldiers and a merchant. Soldiers rarely have the luxury of sleepers. So they lowered the light and crouched down to their corners, prepared to sleep.

It was a weird sensation being flung so closely against this evidence of war. By the tiny gleam of light I could just see the outline of those military figures and the knives sticking in each boot. I wondered how many stabs each knife had given. It was a relief an hour and a half later to change trains and get the sleeper for Karlsruhe.

The next morning, somewhat weary, I arrived at my destination. I had been on nine trains the preceding day to see twenty-five war orphans.

My friends were out when I reached the hotel. They were viewing the monuments of Karlsruhe. It was with relief that I settled down into the attractive room assigned. I foresaw it would be restful to have every act prearranged by others.

I was dressing for lunch when I heard a great commotion. German life is so dull these days that anything causes excitement. There was a great clattering of hoofs. That in itself was unusual. I hurried to the window. Coming down the square was row on row of open victorias. Barefooted children were running beside them. It must be at least the royal ruler of the duchy of Baden, I thought.

Reporters Royally Entertained.

But no, the carriages were stopping in front of the hotel. They were old fashioned affairs, pulled by resurrected white horses. On the boxes sat aged little men in uniforms many sizes too large. Their silk hats came down over their ears. Then I chortled. Yes—it was—our party of nineteen scrubby reporters. All this pomp and ceremony was for us.

I felt like Alice in Wonderland transformed into the Red Queen. The populace stood about, while the reporters alighted with all the dignity they could muster. It was funny and tragic. Germany had no one else to entertain and we were treated like royalty.

Downstairs all was commotion. An elaborate luncheon was being prepared. The Chamber of Commerce was entertaining us. There were two gentlemen to each reporter. These gentlemen had spared no expense. We had seven or eight courses; two or three kinds of wine, including champagne. We ate for over two hours.

Eager to Be Friends.

It seemed cruel when I remembered Germany's poor. That long swaying line of people in the north of Berlin, struggling for potatoes. Yet it was impossible to be angry with the chamber of commerce. These gentlemen were so kindly, so obvious in their desire to be friends with persons from neutral lands.

Gracious speeches were made, which I did not understand. Perhaps it was well I didn't, for every one knew that fact, and so I could clink glasses and drink to unknown toasts. But all the time my heart ached for the hungry people outside and the following questions never ceased to torment me. If the war kept on, wouldn't the radicals at the front and the radicals in prison be killed and starved, while the military leaders and the jingoes, whom the world professed to hate, be kept intact?

But if peace came, if the men came back, if suffering humanity came together, what would happen then? Wouldn't that be death to militarism? Didn't the militarists fear that moment? My mind painted a picture. I saw what would happen. I saw the young guard of the proletariat, indomitable groups of 500, marching from every corner of Germany to the palace gates.

ADVERTISE IN THE TRIBUNE

FUNDS LOST IN LA SALLE BANK BY COURT CLERK

Audit Affairs of McGrath to Trace Money Impounded and Then Deposited.

Trust funds to the amount of $20,000, impounded with the clerk of the Superior court, were lost with the crash of the La Salle Street bank. Clerk Elect John Kjellander has declined to accept custody of these accounts until the affairs of the retiring clerk, Richard J. McGrath, have been aired.

This information became public last night with the news that an accounting, under the supervision of the judges of the Superior court, is in progress. Clerk Kjellander said he would make known the entire state of affairs tomorrow.

Accountants in Trouble.

The accounting is being made to adjust the affairs of the clerk's office in relation to the failure of the Lorimer banks, in which institutions the trust funds were deposited. An endless tangle is said to have been discovered, because of the inability of the accountants to determine which trust funds shall suffer by the failure of the Lorimer bank.

"You can say this much for me," said Mr. Kjellander, "that I only want my salary from this office. That is all I consider myself entitled to. I do not want the interest from any funds intrusted to my care as clerk of the Superior court.

He Blames No One.

"Understand me, there is no one being blamed by me. It is none of my doing—this mixup in the trust funds. I have been elected to office, and I want to have a square start. The public is entitled to know everything about the affairs of my office, and I am going to make a complete showing of everything in my hands.

"I have talked the matter over with the judges and they agree with me that my position is correct. There is nothing to indicate that Mr. McGrath didn't conduct his office in an honorable way.

"Of course, the matter of who is entitled to interest on money held by a public official is much mooted. I cannot say whether it should go to the people or to the person holding office. I only know that so far as I am personally concerned it is not going to me."

Who Will Stand Loss?

"Can you say who will stand good for this loss?"

"I cannot," replied Mr. Kjellander. "I don't think the county will have to stand the loss and I know that I will not. That is the reason I have declined to take over the accounts until they have been thoroughly audited. This is now being done."

Attempts to reach Mr. McGrath last night were unsuccessful.

THE "DYE" WIZARD

Boy Faces Charge of Stealing $10,000 Worth of Platinum.

Henry Arbuttle

This is Henry Clay Arbuttle, the 19 year old "dyemaking wizard," who was brought back to Milwaukee Friday to face trial for the theft of $10,000 worth of platinum and chemicals from the International Dye company. Arbuttle told the police he took the platinum to get money enough so that he could visit his relatives in Granada, West Indies.

While working for the Du Pont Powder company Arbuttle says he came upon the "marvelous dyemaking secret." He took it to William Oesterreich, who promised to pay him $10,000 a year, with a $10,000 bonus to make the dyes.

The dye company, it is said, will give up hope of making dyes and instead will prosecute Arbuttle to the limit.

CHANGE IN POSTAL RATES ASKED BY HOUSE COMMITTEE

One Cent for Local Letters to Be Offset by Increase on Certain Printed Matter.

Washington, D. C., Dec. 9.—One cent postage for local first class mail deliveries and a zone system of rates for second class matter, which is expected greatly to increase the charges for magazines and other periodicals having a nation-wide circulation, are provided for in the annual postoffice appropriation bill as virtually completed today in committee.

The country is divided into eight zones, with rates chargeable ranging from 1 cent for 300 miles to 6 cents for 1,800 miles or more. The bulk of daily newspapers, the committee believes, will not be affected, because they do not circulate beyond a 300 mile radius.

Among other provisions the bill increases rates for mail order catalogues from 2 to 8 cents a pound, making them third class matter instead of parcels post.

WOMAN ADMITS PLAN TO KIDNAP COONLEY CHILD

Mary Hickey, Found Insane at Hearing, Confesses She Sought Revenge.

Mary Hickey, eccentric old woman and specter in the mansions of Lake Forest society, found insane yesterday by a jury in the Lake County court at Waukegan, startled spectators when asked what threats she had made against Prentiss Coonley after he put her out of his home.

"I was going to kidnap his little daughter, Alice," replied Mary.

The question was asked by James G. Welch, state's attorney for Lake county. Miss Hickey refused to amplify her statement. She denied she had ever threatened to poison Mr. Coonley or any member of his family.

Mr. Coonley testified that Mary had ordered him out of "her" basement, which he was wont to claim as part of his home. Mary, he said, collected bottles, rags, and "other junk," which she piled in the basement. Fear of her wrath, Mr. Coonley asserted, prevented anybody from removing Mary's collections.

Children Under Guard.

It was brought out also that the queer old woman had the same intention towards the children of Mrs. E. L. Hasler, who testified against her. Mrs. Hasler's children, Patricia, aged 9; Constance, 3, and Wyndham, 5, have been guarded by private detectives ever since the threat.

Dr. H. I. Davis, former superintendent of the Psychopathic hospital was the first witness. He said he examined Miss Hickey and found she was a paranoiac.

"Persons of this kind are generally considered harmless," said Dr. Davis, "until they take a gun and kill some one."

Mrs. Hasler said she was driving her automobile in Lake Forest three weeks ago when Mary begged to ride with her.

"She stopped me on the street and I took her in the machine," said Mrs. Hasler. "She was hardly inside when she threatened me with all sorts of things. Then she tried to jump out while the car was in motion."

Posed as German Sympathizer.

According to Mrs. Hasler, Mary claimed to be a German sympathizer and an out and out Sinn Feiner. On one occasion, Mrs. Hasler said, she fled to the bathroom, remaining there for two hours until Mary's wrath cooled.

Matilda Ross, housekeeper at the Coonley home, testified of Mary's eccentricities. When any of her chickens died, she said, Mary insisted upon dissecting the fowl to find the cause of death.

Mary has announced that she would rather be "dead than sent to Elgin." Those guarding her are keeping a careful watch lest she attempt to injure herself.

INSULL CALLED AS WITNESS.

Electric Interests Head to Tell McCormick Commission Views on Utilities.

Samuel Insull will be the first witness before the McCormick legislative commission that has been studying public utilities when the commission resumes its hearing at the Hotel La Salle tomorrow. Mr. McCormick, elected to congress on Nov. 7, will continue as head of the legislative committee until the survey of the Illinois field has been completed and the report placed in shape for the next session of the general assembly. Following Mr. Insull Mayor Thompson, B. I. Budd of the elevated lines, and L. A. Busby of the surface lines will voluntarily appear. The principal point to be discussed will be the kind of home rule Chicago is entitled to.

Westminster Guild Meets.

Reports of officers and committees of the work done during 1916 were made at a meeting of the Chicago branch of the Westminster guild in the Hotel La Salle yesterday afternoon. The guild is composed of more than 21,000 young women members of the Presbyterian church in the United States.

WIDOW SHOOTS SELF AS ECHO OF OLD TRAGEDY

Mrs. Clara Blood, After Brooding Years, Ends Life at Kenilworth Inn.

Mrs. Clara Blood, a widow, 56 years old, ended her life by shooting herself yesterday in a bathroom on the third floor of the Kenilworth Inn, at Kenilworth. She was mentally unbalanced from years of resignation to a fixed melancholia, the result of her husband's death by falling from a horse, about the time of her first child's birth.

Mrs. Blood fired two shots. The first went wild and buried itself in the wall. The second entered her head. Mrs. Blood has lived at the Kenilworth Inn for the last four weeks. Not much was known of her, as she did not commingle freely with the other guests, but spent many hours brooding.

Hear Two Shots.

Residents of the inn heard two shots close together in the afternoon. Mrs. F. R. Wetherbee, who keeps the inn, was notified. She went to the third floor and not finding Mrs. Blood tried the bathroom door, which was locked.

Mrs. Wetherbee called Capt. P. J. Murray of the Kenilworth police and the door was forced open. Mrs. Blood's body was found on the floor. In her right hand was a heavy pearl handled revolver. No note or message of any description was left by the woman.

Has One Daughter.

Mrs. Blood has one daughter, Miss Edna Blood, who is an officer of the North Shore Juvenile Protective association. She lives at the inn. Mrs. Blood came to Chicago four months ago from Warren, Pa. She has one son, who is in business in Philadelphia.

Miss Blood on her return several hours later broke down when told of her mother's death and was unable to give a statement.

The body was removed to undertaking rooms in Evanston, where the inquest will be held tomorrow. Burial will be in Warren, Pa.

MILITARY TRAINING OPPOSED BY WOMAN'S PEACE PARTY.

Washington, D. C., Dec. 9.—[Special.]—The Woman's Peace party this afternoon went on record in opposition to military training in any form. The party in addition indorsed the work of the central conference committee in New York urging representatives of the neutral nations to hold an international convention in the interest of peace, and representatives of the belligerent nations to meet and discuss the terms on which a peace might be arranged.

It decided to ask the president to issue on New Year's day an invitation to the great governments of the world to establish a world organization to render "unnecessary the maintenance of competitive armaments."

The executive officers of the party were unanimously reëlected and Mrs. Ella Flagg Young of Chicago was appointed second honorary chairman. The slate for the coming year being as follows: Jane Addams, chairman; Mrs. Carrie Chapman Catt and Mrs. Ella Flagg Young, honorary chairmen; Mrs. Lucia Ames Mead of Boston, secretary; Mrs. Sophronisba Breckenridge, treasurer; and Mrs. Eleanor G. Karsten, also of Chicago, office secretary.

Miss Madeleine Z. Doty described conditions in Germany as she found them on her recent trip.

Movie Benefit for Pupils.

About 1,500 pupils of the Frances Willard school and their parents attended a benefit matinée moving picture show given yesterday at the Twentieth Century theater, Forty-seventh street and Prairie avenue. The event was conducted under the auspices of the Parent Teachers' club of the school, and the proceeds will be devoted to purchasing new shoes, stockings, underwear, and toothbrushes for some of the less fortunate pupils.

Victrola

Can You Think of Anything Else So Delightful for Christmas?

Yet under our original offer a Victrola is the easiest of all worthy presents to acquire. Every home can afford to hear all the world's greatest entertainers.

The Origin of Santa Claus

As depicted in this advertisement, St. Nicholas was supposed to appear at midnight outside the house wherein families and friends were gathered to await the arrival of the saint.

If those congregated were acceptably pious and good—the saint would fling a purse of gold against the door. At the sound of the purse striking the door every one would rush outside—hoping to be rewarded by a sight of the good Saint—always a vain proceeding.

Our Original Offer!

Come to us for a genuine Victrola and for the latest and most popular records. Here you will find the largest and finest Victrola department in the world.

You may enjoy records to your heart's delight with the advantages of the newest machines; newest records; sound-proof rooms and equipment not to be found elsewhere.

Victrolas may be selected now for Christmas delivery. We make a special offer to supply you with a Victrola, provided you purchase a few records. You can begin to pay for the Victrola Feb. 1st. Then monthly installments.

LOWDEN TAKES JOY OUT OF LIFE FOR JOB HUNTERS

Governor Elect Won't Distribute Plums Until New Laws Have Been Passed.

It will be not only a green but a lean Christmas for the 20,000-odd aspirants for jobs under the new state administration.

All the cheer was taken out of the world by Gov. Elect Lowden yesterday. He issued a formal and signed statement announcing that patronage distribution is not to be considered, except for a couple of positions, until after the general assembly has definitely disposed of the consolidation bills.

Holds Patronage Subordinate.

The incoming governor takes the position that patronage is of subordinate importance, and that the reform legislation he stands for should be enacted into law before anything is done at all, except for a few cases, with the distribution of the plums.

It is intimated by close aids of the governor elect that those desiring a piece of the pie some time next summer will stand a better chance if they will respect his views, as embodied in the statement, and not bother him for a while with such matters.

He insists that everybody get together first and put Illinois on a business basis, and then they will divide up what few jobs they have the best way they can.

Col. Lowden's Statement.

Col. Lowden's formal statement follows:

"I have so far tendered appointment to but two men. In view of the fact that these men have not yet accepted I do not feel at liberty to mention their names. I have come to no conclusion with reference to any other appointments, and shall neither make nor consider further appointments at the present time unless some public emergency arises making it necessary to depart from this rule.

"I want to be free to concentrate all my efforts for the present upon the reorganization of the scattered, unrelated, and oftentimes overlapping agencies of the state government into a few departments. This part of our program seems to me a condition precedent to real and rational progress along other lines.

Pleased with Co-operation.

"I have been greatly heartened during the week by the evidences that have been coming to me from the general assembly and all elements of the party of a disposition to coöperate heartily in the carrying out of this program. I am mindful of the fact that it will encounter many obstacles and is no easy thing to accomplish. Our best chances for complete success in this endeavor, however, consist in our concentrating our energies for the present on the subject."

UNDERGROUND CITY

A New Vision of Second Chicago of the Future.

"ANOTHER city under ground" will be necessary to meet the growing demands for the development of Chicago, Frederick Vernon Murphy of Washington, D. C., said yesterday in an address before the Irish Fellowship club at the Hotel La Salle. Mr. Murphy is an instructor in architecture at the Catholic University of America. His trip to speak before the club was his first visit to Chicago since he left twenty years ago.

"Rome was built in layers, the ancient cities being covered up by the more modern improvements," he said. "Chicago is becoming like Rome. Present day civilization no longer exist on the one level established in the early days and must develop lines of communication to relieve congestion.

"You in Chicago will not tear down what already has been done, but will establish in addition another city underground. Shops and other business will be established in the plane with this new development. Hotels, theaters, department stores, and all semi-public buildings will have to provide entrances through which they may be reached directly from the subway level."

In addition, Mr. Murphy said, air travel will provide a third level to relieve congestion.

He was graduated from Chicago Kent College of Law in June and is a member of the Delta Chi fraternity. He resides at 4855 North Irving avenue.

FUNSTON TELLS WHY HE FORBADE CAMP REVIVALS

Commander on Border Replies to Criticisms of Baptist Organizations.

San Antonio, Tex., Dec. 9.—Maj. Gen. Frederick Funston, commanding the department of the south, tonight replied to the Rev. J. B. Gambrell, secretary of the executive board of the Baptist general convention, explaining the general's reason for not permitting revivals in the military camps here and along the border.

Gen. Funston gave out copies of the letter to the press, in which he says:

"This whole disagreeable incident, with all of its annoyance to me, of course arises from the statement made by you after your visit to the headquarters a couple of months ago in which you sought to obtain permission to conduct a series of revivals in the border camps. You stated your business to Col. Barnum, chief of staff.

Usual Services Welcome.

"I told that officer to explain to you fully that while religious services along the usual lines were conducted in the camps by chaplains and other clergymen and were welcome I could not give my consent to the holding of revivals, therein giving the word, as I was justified in doing, its usually accepted meaning.

"I further instructed Col. Barnum to say to you that I did not accept, in fact, resented, the implication that because a man had put on his country's uniform he was necessarily lost, or worse than other men; that I thought there were people who had stayed at home who needed revivals worse than the soldiers did.

Justice to All Men.

"I say frankly that I would not want to take chances on allowing a series of revivals or protracted meetings in these great camps. I am justified in giving the word revival its usually accepted meaning—a series of meetings continuing day and night for an indefinite period with loud exhortation and singing and much emotionalism.

"How about the rights of the men who do not want to attend revivals and who do not wish to be disturbed by them? Are they to be compelled to leave the camp, which is their home, and wander about downtown or through fields to get away from them? Has a man no rights because he is a soldier?

"Soldiers must be protected from imposition by their superior officers, and if these officers from weakness or other reason fail of their duty, their only recourse is submission or riot; and it is a safe guess that the latter is what you would have got with a typical old fashioned revival in any one of the camps."

COURT STOPS FORD'S PLAN FOR A $10,000,000 PLANT.

Dodge Brothers Win Temporary Injunction Against Auto Manufacturer's "Reckless Policy."

Detroit, Mich., Dec. 9.—A temporary injunction, restraining Henry Ford and the Ford Motor company from the erection of a $10,000,000 blast furnace plant in River Rouge was granted on behalf of John F. and Horace E. Dodge by the Wayne county Circuit court in the decision rendered this morning in the suit of Dodge Bros. vs. Henry Ford. The extensions to the Ford plant now in process of construction in Highland Park are not affected by the decision.

Judges Wiest, Hart, and Chester handed down the opinion. They recommended that suit to make the injunction permanent should be brought within sixty days.

The Dodge Bros. as stockholders sued to restrain Ford from expending $52,000,000 surplus profits in extensions to the company. They asserted his policy was reckless, that they feared the loss of their money, and asked that the surplus be divided among the stockholders.

The dispute as to whether capital stock and capital assets should be regarded legally as synonymous was decided in Ford's favor. The judges held that capital stock does not always mean capital.

MOOSE CORRAL TWO NAMES TO CAPTURE REPUBLICANS.

Robins-Pinchot-Ickes Coalition Takes Out Incorporation Papers as First Step in Getting Control.

The Robins-Pinchot-Ickes coalition for the purpose of capturing control of the Republican party four years hence has been incorporated at Springfield under the title of the Progressive Republican League of the United States. Another incorporation paper was taken out with the word "Republican" eliminated, under the shorter name of the Progressive League of the United States.

The incorporation follows as the first step in the general plan decided on at a conference in Chicago the fore part of the week and announced in a general statement to the public.

The new organization is said to have the backing of George W. Perkins and the old Roosevelt following of 1912. It is a part of the general scheme, it is understood, to eliminate the "old guard" forces from an active voice in the party councils when the big fight is staged in the national convention in 1920.

Aged Man Killed by Train.

A Chicago Junction railroad engine yesterday crushed the life of William Tracey, 62 years old, at West Thirty-ninth and Iron streets. His address was not learned. The body is at the county morgue.

RUN OF "HENRY VIII." EXTENDED THROUGH WEEK.

Sir Herbert Beerbohm Tree Will Not Present "Merry Wives" Until Monday, Dec. 18.

Owing to the demand for tickets for Sir Herbert Beerbohm Tree's revival of "Henry VIII." and the fact that hundreds were turned away from the Illinois theater yesterday afternoon and night, "Henry VIII." will be acted all this week, through Saturday matinée and night, Dec. 16. The proposed revival of "The Merry Wives of Windsor" has been postponed from Thursday of this week to Monday night, Dec. 18.

When called before the curtain yesterday afternoon Sir Herbert spoke of the modern way in which Shakespeare dealt with great events and drew a parallel bewteen the fall of Cardinal Wolsey in "Henry VIII." and "the recent momentous upheaval in Great Britain."

He recited Shakespeare's lines from "Richard II." where Richard speaks of the death of kings and the end of monarchies, a thing which Tree expects this war to bring about.

The Jeffery Sedan Owner Rides In Comfort

NOT long ago, the family that motored year-in and year-out must own two cars; an open touring model for late Spring, Summer and early Fall and a heavy enclosed car for blustery weather. Most folks locked the touring car in the garage when Winter came.

But now, if you were forced to choose—if you could only drive six months in the year, you would keep your car for the bleaker days of raw winds and driving snow when a snug closed car brings you comfortable transportation and protection against the elements.

Jeffery Sedan owners are insured against treacherous weather. Cold, snow, rain, winds can never threaten comfort. During the winter with its constant round of parties, balls, theatre and opera, this comfortable closed car bars out the frosty elements and insures a warm dry ride no matter what the weather.

When Springtime comes with rare warm days, the top is quickly dismounted and stored away, leaving a fleet, seven-passenger Jeffery Six touring car ready for Summer service and the open road.

And thus you have two cars in one—both included in the price of one.

MRS. LE DUC, ON WITNESS STAND, TELLS OF KILLING

Chicago Woman, Figure in Triangle Tragedy, Quickly Freed of Charge.

Philadelphia, Pa., Dec. 9.—[Special.]—Even court reporters were caught by the thrill that swept over the room—as it always does at the summoning of the star witness in a murder case when she is a beautiful woman—when Mrs. Joseph C. Le Duc of Chicago took the stand to tell publicly today for the first time the part she played in the triangle tragedy at the Hotel Walton Sept. 28.

In this shooting fray Mrs. Margaret Belmar of New York and Joseph C. Graveur, New York garage owner, were killed and Mrs. Le Duc was seriously wounded.

Three minutes after she had testified a verdict freeing her was rendered.

Mrs. Le Duc's Story.

Mrs. Le Duc's story of the shooting follows:

"Mr. Graveur and I had dinner on the roof garden. When we went to his room on the ninth floor to get my handbag, which I had left there earlier in the evening, Mr. Graveur went inside. I think I had my hand on the doorknob.

"I heard a voice and then I saw a tall woman inside go up to Mr. Graveur. Then I heard a shot and saw him fall. Then there was another shot and I knew I was wounded. I turned and ran up the hall and up the stairway. I don't remember anything else."

Collapses After Ordeal.

When she had completed her testimony Mrs. Le Duc tried to rise from the chair in which she sat. But it was as though she were petrified with fright. Her husband lifted her and took her in a half fainting condition to the side of the courtroom, where it was necessary to sign a witness form.

Her hand shook so she could not steady the pen. Le Duc brought her water. She tried again and accomplished a wabbly signature. She received 25 cents for a witness fee

"No, I couldn't talk or be interviewed," she said as they half carried her out of the court into the coroner's room. "I only want to get home again."

In the coroner's room she collapsed and had to be placed on a couch. Le Duc sat by her side and held her hand. When she had recovered they left for Chicago on the afternoon train.

REMEMBER '71

Has Chicago Forgotten What Europe Did at Time of Great Fire?

Chicago, after the fire of '71 received more than $900,000 from Europe. The city has contributed only $200,000 to aid the starving people of Belgium in their present crisis. This statement is made in the latest appeal of the commission for relief in Belgium.

Food to the value of $173,658,913 has been imported into Belgium, and this has provided only a two-thirds ration. It has been shown that this is enough to sustain life but not to promote growth, and as a result the adult population of the country has become devitalized and school children have developed tuberculosis at an alarming rate.

NEIGHBORS SAVE CHILDREN LOCKED IN BURNING HOUSE.

Boy, Aged 3, and Girl, Aged 11, Play with Matches When Mother Leaves Them Alone.

Locked in their burning home at 4946 South Marshfield avenue, and almost unconscious from smoke, Clara Suchor, 11 years old, and her brother Benjamin, 3 years old, were rescued yesterday by John Sarach, 18 years old, and Mrs. Nellie Struzynberg, neighbors, who broke down the rear door and carried them to the street.

Mrs. Marie Suchor, their mother, left the house and locked the door. They played with matches and ignited a mattress in a bedroom.

TWO CASES SHOW DIVORCE TRAILS HASTY MARRIAGE

Rose Koss Isn't Sure She's Married and Edith Was Deserted.

BY AUDRIE ALSPAUGH CHASE

"Easy come, easy go," works matrimonially as well as financially.

The lightness with which the marriage bond is taken on came vividly into view in at least two cases in Judge Sullivan's court yesterday, where default divorce proceedings held the floor.

There was Rose Koss, a timorous, fearsome young creature, in a dingy black hat and a drab gray coat, nervously fidgeting in the witness chair as the judge probed into the facts of her sordid little past.

She had supposed she was married. Kasimer Koss had brought her from West Hammond in December, 1913, got a license, and taken her to his folks' home, and there they had lived a month. His mother had gone along with them to get the license.

Her Mental Lapse.

It was here that Rose had suffered a mental lapse.

"Did you think you were married while you were living with him?" asked the judge.

She didn't know.

"Well, you remember about getting the license. Don't you remember about getting married? Didn't you go to some other man? Do you remember of taking hold of hands?"

No, she didn't remember taking hold of hands, but she was afraid to go home to her father, and she had supposed she was married, she responded monosyllabically, convulsively twisting her fingers.

Rose's New Husband.

Soon this husband faded away, and in due time Rose took unto herself another husband without mentioning the first, investing this occasion with all the solemnity of a church ceremony. Now, when a baby is about to arrive, up pops husband number one, so complicating things that an annulment of the first affair is sought, the later husband being quite willing to stick to his bargain.

But the difficulty is, is there a marriage to annul. Law is an awkward, complicating things to simple folk, said Judge Sullivan tersely, as he continued the case for further evidence.

Edith Hickey pleaded for divorce on the score of desertion. In February, 1913, she married Thomas Hickey and in August of that year he went away, saying he was going to look for another job that paid better. He hasn't been back since.

During their six months of marriage Mrs. Hickey affirmed that she had been a "dutiful, chaste, and affectionate wife," and a friend testified that she was "always good, very busy, and ambitious." The wife saw "no cause" for her husband's departure, and she had looked all around for him at the places he used to work.

"Why do you think he left?" asked the judge, and to her lack of thought he added, "Didn't you have any suspicion he was going? You don't think he intended to stay away?"

No, she didn't think so, which rather queered the legal game, for the statute has it that desertion must be wilfull without reasonable cause.

"How long did you know this man before you married him?" asked the lawyer. "Four weeks," admitted Mrs. Hickey, with a shamefaced little smile as she stepped down from the stand.

IMPORTER DIVES TO DEATH WHEN TAKEN AS EMBEZZLER.

C. J. Wagner, Head of New York Concern, Leaps from Clubhouse Balcony—Theft Set at $15,000.

New York, Dec. 9.—Christopher J. Wagner, president of the Wagner Trading company, importers, dived to his death from the balcony alongside his richly furnished apartment in the Montauk club in Brooklyn tonight to escape arrest on a charge of misappropriating funds of his firm.

Henry A. Meinberg, vice president of the company, swore out a warrant charging Wagner with misappropriating a check for $1,094. Police say his total peculations amount to $15,000.

MAMMOTH CAVE HOTEL FIRE.

Mammoth Cave, Ky., Dec. 9.—Mammoth Cave hotel and a number of adjoining cottages were destroyed by fire today. The hotel was erected in 1811 and was widely known among tourists.

THE proof of the pudding is in the eating, and the proof of a window ventilator is in the USING. Thousands of window ventilators have been invented, that worked beautifully ON PAPER, but the ONLY ONE that will WORK on YOUR WINDOW is the BERRY VENTILATOR.

The BERRY WINDOW VENTILATOR works in winter as well as in summer. It works night as well as day. It works year in and year out without costing one cent for repairs or maintenance. It is fool proof, sightly, indestructible, easily installed, and can be operated by any child old enough to open the window.

The BERRY WINDOW VENTILATOR admits fresh air, but prevents drafts, and excludes rain, snow, dirt and burglars.

That is why BERRY WINDOW VENTILATORS are being used by the above representative Chicago firms, and by tens of thousands of other firms and individuals in every part of the United States.

During the past two months alone, we have received mail orders for BERRY WINDOW VENTILATORS from four hundred and twenty-four cities and towns, located in thirty-one different states.

PRICES ADVANCE JANUARY 1, 1917

On account of the increased cost of steel and copper we are compelled to raise the price of ventilators from 84 cents to 96 cents per lineal foot on all ventilators not contracted for by January 1, 1917.

How to Take Measurements

To determine size of ventilator needed, close your window and measure (with rule, not tape measure) from window stop to window stop on inside of sill close up to window. The "window stop" is the perpendicular strip that holds the window in place. Any size in this table will fit window openings any part of three inches wider than the length of the ventilator.

MUSIC LOVERS TO GET TWO 10 CENT CONCERTS TODAY

Big brother to grand opera, because it throws the comforting arm of symphony about those who love music and yet are hindered, the popular concerts of the American Symphony orchestra given under the joint auspices of the Civic Music association, the board of education, and THE TRIBUNE will enter upon the second double program this afternoon.

The 10 cent concert—open to everybody—will be heard in the Herzl school. This is at 1433 South Ridgeway avenue.

How to Get There.

If you are not familiar with the location, follow these directions:

Take a Twelfth street car to Lawndale avenue and then go three blocks south.

Or take any east and west car to Crawford avenue and then a Crawford avenue car to Fifteenth street.

There will be a concert at 3 o'clock and another at 4:15. Glenn Dillard Gunn, who was so impressed with the attendance and the eagerness with which the program of last Sunday was received, will conduct at both concerts today.

Mrs. Sorenson to Sing.

There will be a special treat. This will be the appearance of Bertha Lotta Sorenson, contralto. Mrs. Sorenson has entered upon the spirit of the dime concert with vast enthusiasm in the belief that her voice cannot be used to greater effect that in the education of those who love music.

A notable feature of the program, the singnig of "The Star Spangled Banner" by the audience to the accompaniment of the full orchestra, will be enthusiastically directed by Mr. Gunn.

Here is the full program for both concerts:

Overture, "Der Freischuetz"........Weber
Andante from "Unfinished Symphony"
................................Schubert
"My Heart at Thy Sweet Voice" .Saint-Saëns
Mrs. Sorenson.
Suite, "Alice in Wonderland"...Delamarter
Overture, "Alice's Dream," "Topsy-Turvy Land," "A Quaint Tea Party," "The Mock Turtle's Sad Story," "The Court of the Knave of Hearts," "A Fragment of the Overture."
Waltz, "Roses from the South"....Strauss
"The Star Spangled Banner"..........
....................Francis Scott Key
[To be sung by the audience.]

ELECTION CLERKS TAKEN ON CHARGE OF GRAFT.

Three of Them Arrested for Alleged Conspiracy to Defraud Election Commissioners and Fellow Clerks.

George F. Adams, 36 years old, 41 East Oak street, who says he is an investigator in the offices of City Controller Pike, and John A. O'Malley, 653 Barry avenue, were arrested yesterday on charges of conspiracy. They and C. F. Miller, 2107 Clifton avenue, and George Sandel, also under arrest, are charged with obtaining $8 fraudulently from the election commissioners' office.

BIG CROWD SEES STOCK SHOW END

Ed Moore's Greyhurst and Miss Long's Horses Are Among the Winners.

ALL CONTESTS CLOSE.

BY HERBERT J. KRUM,
[Editor the Saddle and Show Horse Chronicle.]

With the conclusion of last night's program at the International amphitheater, the horse show season of 1916 was brought to a formal close before an audience that filled every seat and packed the aisles until they were impassable. The contests last night were close and the audience was enthusiastic.

In the opening event, which was for combination five gaited horses, Ed Moore of Columbia, Mo., won with Grayhurst. Another Missouri horse was second, Del Holeman of Holliday getting the place on Cathryn Countess. John R. Thompson's bay mare, Nancy Walker, was third.

Miss Long Gets Decisions.

In the saddle pony class A. G. Lupton of Hartford City, Ind., got first and third, the second ribbon going to Charles E. Bunn of Peoria, Ill.

Crouch & Son won the draft horse six-in-hand class over the team entered by Swift & Co.

Wins Tandem Class.

John L. Bushnell of Springfield, O., won the tandem class, his Gypsy Girl and Gypsy Maid being driven by Frank Winterbottom. The second prize was awarded Val Crane's Baronet and Satire driven by Charley Barrie, and John R. Thompson's black mares, Ebony Girl and Lovely Lady, were placed third.

The junior stake for five gaited saddle horses 4 years old and unuer given here for the first time created a sensational show. Eleven prizes were awarded in the following order:

Award.	Horse.	Owner.
1	Beauchamp	Blades & Holman
2	Joan Sawyer	Loula Long
3	Bohemian Musick	S. G. Courteen
4	Prince Melbourne	Loula Long

WHAT'S ALL THIS TALK ABOUT DREXEL? Must be Something up!
Something Doing in DREXEL

KEEP YOUR MONEY!

Big, Startling Developments Are About to Take Place in

"DREXEL"

An Important Message to Those Who Can Read Between the Lines!

¶ It all means something

¶ —but what in the world can it mean when a concern that is known to be proverbially frank suddenly turns secretive

¶ —and closes up, as you might say, "like a clam"?

¶ Well, what do you suppose it can mean?

¶ Let's speculate on the possibilities—the meaning—of such an action! And coming right at Christmas time, too, when people are the very busiest and, also, harder up than at any other time of the year!!

¶ The more you think about it, the more you will agree that—whatever it is—it's something that even the DREXEL people themselves can't halt—cannot postpone. Something that must be sweeping on with irresistible force.

¶ And it is a fact that when a big movement gets started and gets full swing, even its creators usually cannot stop it. The present Great War, for instance.

¶ "Something Doing in Drexel!"

¶ "Keep Your Eye on Drexel!"

¶ "A Month from Now You'll Wish You'd Bought Drexel!"

¶ "Keep Your Money!—Big Startling Developments are About to Take Place in Drexel!"

¶ —Why do we raise this cry at this particular season of the year, instead of awaiting the more favorable beginning of the New Year?

¶ Well, the reason is simple—

¶ OPPORTUNITY NEVER AWAITS TIME NOR SEASON!

¶ Opportunity comes when she will, and man has to adjust man's time to suit Opportunity's season.

¶ There IS "something doing in Drexel!"

¶ But just what that "something" is must now remain a secret to the general public. Only those who make direct inquiry will get the inside facts. They are the ones who will benefit by their advance knowledge of the situation. Theirs is the profit to be!

¶ Many who read this Announcement will be able to read betwixt the lines. Theirs is the type of shrewdness that many people call "luck." But those who know call it "foresight."

¶ Only those with foresight and imagination will see anything unusual in this Announcement. Many wise-acres will say "Oh, it's a scheme to sell stock."

¶ But a few thousand out of the 600,000 Tribune readers, seated in the privacy of their homes, will quietly tear the coupon off the right hand edge of this page, fill it in and mail it to 820-21-22 Lumber Exchange Building.

¶ Many of them—probably the majority of them—will, as a result of this action, purchase DREXEL stock—although no one incurs the slightest obligation in answering this ad.

¶ We know that most of them who have the money will invest in Drexel. And we are cucksure of it because—

¶ But to state the reason would be to give away our secret—which we cannot, just now, afford to do.

¶ Don't wait for the Announcement to appear in the newspapers. It may not appear in the papers at all; and, if it does, it may come too late to do you any good. If you are interested, you know what to do.

Now, Go On With the Story—

¶ Perhaps we had better give you a little synopsis of our story up to date. There are many to whom the history of the DREXEL is new; you may be one of them.

¶ The Drexel Company started with Mr. A. J. Farmer, about a year ago. Mr. Farmer had then spent 16 years in the Automobile business—principally in the producing end. As factory superintendent of the Northway plant of the General Motors Company, he took a run-down property that was losing money for its owners and made it clear a million dollars in sixteen months.

¶ He has enjoyed many splendid connections, and has built engines for many of the best known motor cars on the market. He is known throughout the automobile industry as one of motordom's big stars—a mechanical genius.

¶ He is the inventor of the Farmer engine—employed exclusively in Drexel cars. This wonderful motor is from 5 to 10 years in advance of the times. Any expert who has examined it will tell you that. It contains one hundred less parts than any motor of similar type. Its performance is little short of marvelous.

¶ When Mr. Farmer first brought out his engine and started building Drexel cars, he also began receiving offers of financial aid. But, as is always the case, these offers had strings tied to them. The "string" meant control of the company, and no one seemed willing to put up the money unless their money secured for them 51 per cent of the stock.

¶ "No, thank you," said Mr. Farmer, "I'll go it alone; it may be slower, but I'm not going to give up the fruits of a life-time of research and labor."

¶ So this Master Mechanic started building his own motors—laboriously turning them out with the aid of second-hand lathes and crude tools.

¶ But the engines he built run—and run so perfectly and so beautifully that people, on all hands, began to say, "I believe Mr. Farmer has something in that motor."

¶ Then a few brave souls came to him and volunteered to invest their earnings in his enterprise. That encouraged him.

¶ He conceived the idea of a big stock company, with thousands of small stockholders furnishing the money with which to develop a great business.

¶ He invited the public to invest—promising the public that no clique of men should ever control the company. The public responded liberally, and, with the money they subscribed, Mr. Farmer began equipping and organizing a model factory.

¶ With modern machinery installed, he found that for ninety-five dollars he could now build the motor that had been costing him $185 before. So he set out to effect these economies all down the line—by installing the most modern of machinery.

¶ But the equipment of a modern automobile plant runs into the hundreds of thousands of dollars in cost. And although the Drexel Plant at 76th and Wallace Streets, Chicago, today contains several hundred thousand dollars' worth of machinery and materals (all paid for), we are now in the midst of a campaign of stock-selling to raise the money necessary to complete this great factory.

¶ We have been under constant production for the past five months, but with the balance of our machinery and equipment provided, we will be able to increase our average daily output to 25 cars per day. We expect to reach this output in less than sixty days. And this should clear us over a million a year in profits.

¶ In the meantime—

¶ But, here you will have to take the story up with us in person. For this takes us up to the Big Moment in the history of the Drexel—the secret that we have pledged ourselves to share with none but those who make direct inquiry.

¶ However, you can make up your mind that "THERE'S SOMETHING DOING IN DREXEL."

¶ YOU HAD BETTER BE ONE OF THOSE WHO WRITE AND SAY "I WANT TO GET IN ON THE BIG SECRET."

¶ Use the below coupon—or write!

This Coupon Will Let You in On the Big Secret in Advance of the General Public—Use It!

¶ All the facts are yours for the asking, as well as the advance information we promise to give you. We will gladly send you our prospectus, our little house organ, "DREXEL DOINGS," and a beautiful 20-page 10x13 inch De Luxe Book of Factory Views, containing twelve handsome 9x12 reproductions of the plant and motor, done in sepia ink, and printed on one side only and without advertising. Our literature, in fact, so thoroughly and comprehensively covers every phase of the situation that even a person located thousands of miles from Chicago can, through its perusal, become fully posted on our proposition. We want you to learn all about the Drexel, so that you can intelligently decide what to do with the startling opportunity we are about to face you with.

¶ Remember—this is all without cost or obligation to you.

¶ Better be safe than sorry! Act!!

PLAN A MEETING FOR JOBLESS MEN IN MIDDLE LIFE

They Will Meet Prospective Employers at the Olympic Theater Thursday.

Employers and middle aged applicants for work will meet next Thursday morning at the Olympic theater under the auspices of the committee of fifteen which is obtaining employment for men between the ages of 45 and 65, it was announced yesterday by Benjamin J. Rosenthal. Letters were sent to Chicago employers asking them to have representatives at the meeting. More than 1,000 unemployed men between 45 and 65 are expected to attend.

The purpose of the meeting, Mr. Rosenthal said, is to bring men and employers face to face. The letters informed the firms that the sending of a representative to the meeting entailed no obligation to employ any of the men who might be present. The employers will be given an opportunity to talk with the applicants, and the applicants will be able to learn what requirements they must fill.

Experiment Begins Tomorrow.

Tomorrow morning the Chicago Mail Order company will begin its experiment with twenty-five men over 45. The men will be tried out against younger men in certain lines of work. They will be paid $2 a day during the experiment.

The mining engineer, graduate of Princeton university, whose letter was printed in THE TRIBUNE yesterday, is now in line for a position. A man intending to give the engineer work called at the committee offices yesterday and received the man's name and address.

Held Public Office.

An application has been received from a man who for sixteen years was secretary of the Illinois state railroad and warehouse commission. He is now in California. Many applications have come from out of town, and the applicants will be cared for as soon as those in Chicago have received attention.

Letters from applicants received yesterday brought the total well over the [illegible] mark. The last advertisement appears today in THE TRIBUNE.

MEN WHO WANT JOBS

The Only Objection to Them Is Their Age—They're All Over 45.

Following are some extracts from letters received by the unemployment committee:

"I am 60 years old, out of employment, practically. I do not wish to become a burden on others, especially as I am able to work. I am a college graduate, and for nine years I was in the faculty of a college as instructor in history and English. I was manager of two publishing houses for fourteen years. I have read proof for two encyclopedias and two books, prepared advertising, and revised many books. I'm a Mason and an Odd Fellow in good standing. I'll accept any position."

"I have a dear father, 62 years old, who is not able to get into a position, as it is said he is too old and there are enough young men who can do better work. He is able and willing to do any kind of work, but cannot get it. Please, kindly help us out. I am the only member of our family working, and besides both parents I have two children. One, a 2 year old baby, is in the German-American hospital, because I could not keep her any longer, earning only $9 a week. Father was born in Germany, but is an American citizen. He can speak English, but very broken, and I hope he might get into a German place."

"I would be very thankful if some one could help me find a position of some kind. I am 50 years old, although I do not look it. I am French-American, speak, read, and write both fairly well. I am willing to do anything. Nearly destitute at present and lack of decent clothes stops me from many jobs."

"I saw your ad in THE TRIBUNE. I've been out of work nearly a month, but am 60 years old, hale and hearty. I can take a hand at almost anything except writing.

"I am 54 years of age, can speak German, and can sell anything in merchandise that any one else can sell. I would be willing to work a week or two and let the employer pay me what he thinks I am worth. I have a sick wife and need work."

"I am mentally, physically, and morally at par. Have had experience as salesman, manager, and owner, and can fit in almost any place where good address [and dress] is desirable. Am church member and Mason in good standing. Want such salary as I can rightfully earn, regardless of age [59]."

"My father would like to secure a position. He is a man about 55 years old, sober and honest. He was a teamster, but was hurt and could not do such hard work after being hurt. He would like to get a position as night watchman or anything like that."

HOME OF SENATORS TURNED TO SUFFRAGE HEADQUARTERS

House Warming of Women's National Organization Is Brilliant Social Event in Washington, D. C.

Washington, D. C., Dec. 9.—[Special.]—Cabinet women, social workers, wives of Supreme court justices, and soap box orators participated with perfect equality in the house warming of the National American Woman Suffrage association here tonight.

The opening of the new headquarters, established in the Scott circle residence owned by Mrs. Christian Hemmick and occupied successively by Lars Anderson and Senators Root and Du Pont, quickly developed into a brilliant social event.

The receiving line, headed by Mrs. Carrie Chapman Catt, included Mrs. J. Borden Harriman, Mrs. Newton D. Baker, Mrs. David F. Houston, Mrs. Louis D. Brandeis, Countess Gizycka, Mrs. Harriet Blaine Beale, Mrs. Adolph Miller, Mrs. Leigh Hunt, Mrs. Glendower Evans, Mrs. Frederick Brooke, and Mrs. Walter McNab Miller.

BENEFIT TONIGHT AIDS STRANDED FRENCH PLAYERS.

Sir Herbert Tree to Be Headliner at Illinois Theater Performances to Help Actors and Actresses.

The French players who have been stranded upon the inhospitable shores of Michigan boulevard will rally tonight, like Joffre at the Marne, to turn the tide of unkind fortune. A benefit program, the proceeds of which will be used to pay their hotel bills and transportation eastward, will be given in the Illinois theater this evening, with Sir Herbert Tree as the headliner.

Tree and members of his company will play a scene from "Trilby," in which Svengali puts the belle of the Latin quarter under his demon spell. The French actors will give "L'Etincelle," a one-act comedy, and "Gringoire," a one-act drama. MM. Dalmores, Maguenat, and Daddi of the Chicago Opera company will sing. The French consul will count the house and administer the fund.

In the heat of their preparations for the performance yesterday, the French players kept saying to Tree's stage manager:

"Combien des femmes sera-t-il dans la scene de 'Trilby'?"

"What's the blooming idea of wanting to know how many women will play in 'Trilby'?" the stage manager asked their interpreter. "That's our affair."

Then it was learned that the Frenchmen, true to the ideals of their race, although down to their last dollar, were going to send flowers to the English actresses who would act on their behalf.

DENIES ILLINOIS IS LIABLE FOR CLAIMS OVER EASTLAND

Attorney General Files Demurrer in $3,500,000 Case—Claimants Should Apply to Government?

Springfield, Ill., Dec. 9.—Attorney General Lucey today filed in the Illinois Supreme court a demurrer to claims aggregating $3,500,000 sought in the State Court of Claims by 350 persons as a result of the Eastland disaster in the Chicago river.

Attorney General Lucey alleges the claimants should apply for relief to the federal government, inasmuch as inspection of river boats is by federal authorities.

As a result of the demurrer the Court of Claims continued the hearing until Dec. 22.

WOMAN SLAYER TO PRISON.

Thompson Falls, Mont., Dec. 9.—Miss Edith Colby, a newspaper reporter, convicted of second degree murder for shooting A. C. Thomas, a politician, was sentenced today to serve ten years in the penitentiary.

YOUNG MANSFIELD IS BACK IN SCHOOL FROM THE STAGE

Son of Famous Actor Runs Away to Appear on Boards, but Career Is Short.

New York, Dec. 9.—[Special.]—Richard Mansfield, son of the late actor, after running away from his studies in the Tutorial college, South Beach, Conn., for the fifth time, and taking a whack at the drama, is back home with his mother in New London. The Provincetown Players are mourning the loss of young Mansfield's services.

It was agreed that he should join the company under an assumed name. He was rehearsing Thursday night when his mother appeared. The 13 year old actor protested in vain against going back to New London.

'TRIBUNE' FINDS HIS WIDOW.

Story Locates Relative of Alexander Ferguson, Who Died in Minneapolis.

Through publication in THE TRIBUNE of the news of the death of Alexander Ferguson in the city and county hospital of Minneapolis it became possible for Mrs. Ferguson, living in Chicago, to know of the occurrence. The Minneapolis hospital asked THE TRIBUNE to find Ferguson's relatives and this was done. Ferguson's mother and brother were found at 1530 Broadway, Spokane, Wash.

GRIDIRON CLUB POKES FUN AT BIG POLITICIANS

HEADS GRIDIRON CLUB

Washington, D. C., Dec. 9.—[Special.]—A prize fight between the respective managers of the Republican and Democratic campaigns in the late election was staged tonight at the dinner of the Gridiron club of Washington newspaper correspondents, at which President Wilson was the chief guest.

In the other satires on men and events club members played the rôles of distinguished figures in public life, but the participants in the prize fight appeared in their own proper persons.

Chairman McCormick of the Democratic national committee was escorted to the well of the assemblage directly in front of the president.

On the opposite side appeared Chairman Willcox of the Republican national commitee.

McCormick and Willcox put on boxing gloves, shook hands, and were about to square away when it was noticed that they were whispering to the club member acting as referee.

"I beg your pardon, gentlemen; a mistake has been made," announced the referee. "These gentlemen do not wish to fight—their fighting is over, and they say that Republicans and Democrats are standing shoulder to shoulder for America first."

How House Is Organized.

The first skit presented the organization of the new house of representatives, in which a score of club members appeared made up as leading figures in that forum. It turned out that there were exactly as many Democrats as Republicans, and Clark and Mann were declared dual speakers. A pseudo Uncle Joe Cannon administered the oath:

"Hands up! You ought to be able to do that after the railroad brotherhoods taught you how. Do you solemnly swear to support the constitution as amended from time to time, either by the Supreme court or the White House; also the constitution of the American Federation of Labor; to act promptly on telephone calls from Tumulty, keep in close touch with Sam Gompers, soak the rich by increasing the income tax, jolly the poor by bunk embargo investigations of the high cost of living, scrap in public and fix it up in private, vote for prohibition and hope it won't pass, play politics with woman suffrage, reduce mileage to 5 cents and beg the senate to keep it at 20—in short, in the last analysis, do you swear to act as first class politicians onto their job?"

CLARK AND MANN—We do.

CANNON—Then may the Lord have mercy on your souls and God help the people.

Then ensued a wrangle over the seating of the first woman member of congress, Miss Rankin of Montana, in the midst of which the lady was observed lighting and puffing a cigar. At that a member of the club sprang forward, snatched off her picture hat and wig, and exclaimed:

"Hey, what's this? This is no woman! This is Arthur Henning of THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE. He was not elected to congress, but to membership in the Gridiron club."

Post-Mortem on Election.

The climax of the entertainment was presented in "The Gridiron Follies of 1916," a musical review revealing facts, foibles, and fancies of the hour. The scene for the follies was laid in Lafayette park, opposite the White House, and revealed as principal characters McCormick and Willcox.

At the close of an opening chorus sung by a "Galaxy of States," with the theme, "Come, let us have a jolly time, no matter who's elected," McCormick and Willcox were disclosed and engaged in good natured dialogue:

McCORMICK—Cheer up, Mr. Willcox, the battle is over. Somebody had to lose.

WILLCOX—By the way, did William J. Bryan participate in this campaign?

McCORMICK—Certainly. He supported the president loyally.

WILLCOX—Perhaps. But he must have had laryngitis. His voice didn't carry as far as usual.

McCORMICK—Speaking of weak voices, the state of Maine had some impediment in its speech on Nov. 7. From 17,000 in September to 4,000 is some drop.

WILLCOX—But Col. Roosevelt did not suffer from vocal trouble. His voice was heard throughout the land.

McCORMICK—So I noticed from the returns. He helped us in the winning of the west.

Here the voice of Roosevelt interrupted the colloquy, saying: "I am now devoting my attention to my duties as a grandfather. But my health is bully. In 1920 the country will know where to find me. My address is still at Oyster Bay."

Roosevelt and Bryan, Too.

Next came a vaudeville sketch, the scene a theatrical booking office, with Roosevelt and Bryan as "the Criss-Cross twins." Senator Lewis, Col. George Harvey, and the other national figures applying for engagements. Roosevelt and Bryan were first tried out.

T. R.

The Victoria Cross I'd greatly prize;
The Iron Cross I do despise;
But if I can't the hero be,
Some medals of my own you'll see—
They'll get the double cross from ME.

BRYAN.

They got the cross of gold from me;
The Nobel Prize I've hoped to see.
Now, humbly, bearing my cross, I come
To say: "You shall not crucify the bum
Upon the cursed cross of RUM."

Political Ghosts Come Out.

Another travesty, entitled "The Ghost Skit," was cast in a "spook court," with a court sitting in judgment on the astral spirits of aspirants for positions in the new cabinet. Spirits of Henry Ford, Secretary of War Baker, Frank L. Polk, counselor to the state department, and others appeared, all to be rejected by the judges. When the announcer heralded the spirit of Henry Ford the astral body of the Michigan manufacturer arrived rattling a lot of tin cans.

CHIEF JUDGE—The music is familiar. What seek you, Mr. Ford?

FORD—I want to be secretary of the treasury.

CHIEF JUDGE—Why?

FORD—So I can find out how to make money.

CHIEF JUDGE—Warden, sweep out the padded cell for Mr. Ford.

The spirit of Secretary of War Baker next appeared.

ANNOUNCER—Mercy! It's the hero of Valley Forge—the Hon. Newton D. Baker.

POLK—I know; but they gave him the Hiram Johnson.

CHIEF JUDGE—What's the Hiram Johnson?

POLK—Ask Hughes.

CHIEF JUDGE—We can't find him.

POLK—Well, it's a lemon, grown in California.

Illinoisans Among Guests.

Guests from Illinois included Senators Sherman and Lewis, Representatives Madden, Cannon, Copley, Mann, McAndrews, and McKinley, Representative Elect Medill McCormick, Chester M. Dawes, Samuel Insull, Francis S. Peabody, George F. Porter, Clive Runnells, A. B Schmidt, Fred W. Upham, Joseph Medill Patterson and Tiffany Blake of Chicago and Walter A. Rosenfield of Rock Island.

Ira E. Bennett, of the Washington Post was elected president and LeRoy T. Vernon of the Chicago Daily News vice president of the club. The other officers were re-elected.

THE CORRECT

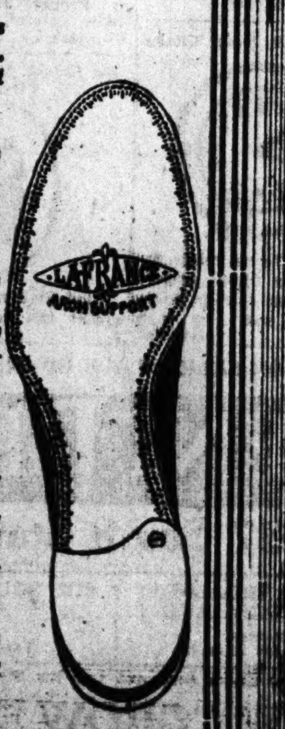
Arch Support Shoe for Women

THIS shoe has proven its superiority because it is designed and constructed scientifically for the correction of broken down arches. This name is your guarantee—

·LA·FRANCE·

LA FRANCE arch support shoes are designed so as to prevent any undue pressure on any particular spot, and to avoid squeezing and cramping of the foot bones.

The arch of the foot has perhaps been the cause of more untraceable aches and pains than any other part of the human anatomy, and should be properly supported and snugly fitted at the shank to prevent the muscles, tendons and bones from dropping into an unnatural position, which gives rise to the troubles against which nature rebels, and eventually results in the very common affliction of distorted or flat feet.



THE LA FRANCE ARCH SUPPORT SHOES are made of fine selected quality imperial vici kid—the soles tanned by a special process that assures flexibility. —Goodyear welt sewed. Complete range of sizes and widths. Price, pair $6

Second Floor.

The services of our expert shoe fitters facilitate choosing the style that best suits you, with assurance of complete satisfaction as to correctness of the fit.

If you have weak or broken down arches, the sooner you put on a pair of these "LA FRANCE" Arch Support Shoes the sooner you should find relief.

Buy A Ford

THE UNIVERSAL CAR

and Buy It Now

If you intend to become the owner of one of the new model Fords at any time in the next few months—if you intend to enjoy the comfort and luxury and real satisfaction that only a Ford can give—BUY YOUR FORD NOW.

For in spite of the tremendous capacity of the Ford factory it has been absolutely impossible for us to get cars fast enough to promptly fill the demand. In the busiest part of the season there are always ten buyers for every three cars we can supply. Therefore if you wait till February or March or April to place your order, you may have to wait for weeks before your order is filled. The one thing to do is to buy your new Ford now.

In the old days some people had an idea that automobiles were for summer use only, but they've gotten all over that now. They've found that automobiles are more necessary in winter than they are in summer, and give just as much enjoyment. You see almost as many cars on the boulevards in December as you do in May and June. And there's no car made in the world, no matter what its price, that gives better service or more complete satisfaction in winter driving than the always efficient Ford.

So whatever you do, don't wait. Get your NEW FORD NOW. Get the enjoyment, the convenience, the health it will give you this winter. Take a winter outing every day. Get some roses in your cheeks and the crisp tonic of winter ozone in your lungs.

BE A ROOKIE IN GOOD FELLOW ARMY OF CHEER

Sunday is a good day to think it over, reflect on the fortune of the last year.

Is the bank account bigger this year than last?

Are you living better this year than last?

Are your prospects better for next year than they were this year?

Did your Sunday dinner settle well, does that fat cigar draw well, is the flat or the house warm and cozy, does the big arm chair feel comfortable?

Are you happy and contented?

If you tingle with a warm glow of satisfaction, after these interrogations, then you are most probably in a proper frame of mind to consider a simple proposition by which you can increase your happiness.

There is a family, living not far from you today, that is in need. There are a number of kids who are calling upon you to share some of your happiness with them.

They want to spend a happy Christmas, and without you they are going to be disappointed. All they want is just a little bit of the good things.

Good Fellow Day.

There's a better name for it—Good Fellow day. By passing some of your prosperity around you can be a Good Fellow. Hundreds of Good Fellows in Chicago are proving that the man who shouts "The next round's on me" is only the old fashioned idea of what a Good Fellow is.

You can prove that you are a Good Fellow of the new school by filling out the application blank which you will find on this page and sending it to the Good Fellow bureau, Room 1106, The Tribune.

The bureau will provide you with the name and address of those kids in your neighborhood who are looking to you for a happy Christmas. You do the rest.

Don't Send Money.

Don't try to relieve your mind by sending money or gifts to THE TRIBUNE. Being a real Good Fellow demands the personal spirit. You go out and see those kids personally and you will get a bigger and grander conception of real Christmas joy.

There's no publicity in it. It's simply "doing something for somebody" after your own fashion. It's not charity. You will get value received. You give joy and in return you receive the joy of giving. There's no price tag on that joy. You can't buy it. You have got to deserve it.

Be a Good Fellow. If you can't be a Good Fellow be a Better Fellow. Tear out that application blank, put your signature on it, and mail it to the Good Fellow bureau, Room 1106, The Tribune. Do it now, because there are only two weeks before Christmas.

"ATTENTION! MR. G.——"

If you will be a Good Fellow at Christmas to some family of poor children in Chicago, please fill out the attached blank and send it to THE TRIBUNE (Good Fellow Department, Room 1106) or write a letter of similar import.

I live at No.....................

CHURCHES FOR AD CAMPAIGN TO GIVE RELIGION A BOOST.

Bryan and Bartholdt Urge Federal Council to Work for Peace—Divorce Evil Hit.

St. Louis, Mo., Dec. 9.—A publicity bureau to disseminate church and religious news to daily and weekly papers has been devised by the publicity committee of the federal council of churches of Christ.

The committee presented its report at the meeting of the council tonight. It reported that a systematic study of the matter of promoting church interests through paid newspaper advertising would be made, and expected to show the value of such advertising to religious effort.

William J. Bryan and former Congressman Bartholdt addressed the council and suggested that the various churches of America send committees to Europe to work in the interest of peace.

Four million five hundred thousand Americans are compelled to work seven days a week "to the detriment of their health and morals," according to a report made by the Rev. Peter Ainslie of Baltimore.

The divorce courts, as busy as they are, reveal only a small proportion of the marital infelicity in this country, says the commission of family life, which reported at the session.

ROB PEACOCK ALLEY SHOP.

Burglars Get More than $5,000 Worth of Antique Jewelry.

More than $5,000 worth of antique jewelry was stolen early yesterday morning when burglars entered the Antique shop at 518 Michigan avenue. The shop is reached both from the street and from Peacock alley in the Congress hotel by an inside door. It is believed the inner door was opened with a case knife.

Watch Trains for Elopers.

Chief of Police Pullman of Washington, D. C., asked local police to watch all incoming trains for Miss Mabel Gallegher and Robert O. Kirby, who are reported to have eloped.

BIRD-LIKE ACCELERATION
IN THESE LIGHT CLOSED CARS

THE motor car industry seemed, for years, to take it for granted that large closed cars must be heavy, massive and lumbering in their action.

It was unthinkable to any, save far-sighted experts, that a Closed Car would come that was actually lighter than touring cars of equal size and power.

But meanwhile the Marmon engineers were building such a car. It took them three years to complete it, but in the end it changed many practices of motordom.

They reduced the weight more than half a ton by reducing the mass throughout. They vastly decreased the car's inertia (the natural resistance in starting and stopping).

They turned to aluminum and built a motor of it, not only because it was light and strong, but largely for its natural conductivity of heat, so essential to motor cooling.

Then they commissioned "Kimball," "Holbrook," "Thompson" and "New Haven Carriage Co." to build them aluminum bodies.

These gave the final touch of Beauty and Luxury, because the long, low frame of unit construction permitted designs with roomy interiors—close to the ground, and only 81 inches in outside height.

So came the car that has swept to the forefront of the major class in a single year. A car that is nimble, quick and obedient; that is merciful on tires; that holds the road and rides luxuriously at extremely high speeds; that handles easily, and tops its many other excellencies by consuming from 50 to 75 per cent less fuel than any comparable car.

The New Cadillac "Eight" Enclosed Cars Are Masterpieces of the Coach Builders' Art

Of the Cadillac Eight chassis you hear no words but praise. If you should take the world's word for it—five to one would express the preference for the Cadillac compared with any other fine car. Production records prove it.

But its marvelous motor, its silent smoothness, its nerve-resting certainty are not the only virtues of the Cadillac of today. The quality of Cadillac body work—always high—has now reached a new degree of perfection, as marked as that of the chassis beneath it.

Coach work of the present Cadillac standard is really unusual—even in higher priced cars. Except in custom built bodies it is scarcely to be found.

The style lines are stunning — extremely smart—yet artistically restrained. They are distinctively exclusive; yet they do not advertise the car. Rather they enrich it, dignify it, quietly and in good taste.

In the substantial construction that makes for solid comfort these new type bodies are notable. You will first remark their utter quietness inside. Fine workmanship brings this about.

You cannot hear even a gentle purr to suggest the motor's power that propels you. You will note the solid click of the door locks, the easy acting, silent windows. Everything about the car is restful.

And in this perfect body structure you find faultlessly upholstered seats—set at just the right angle to put you at your ease—cushioned in a most delightful softness—beautified with fine fabrics from world famous looms.

As you experience your first delight with these enriched cars of Cadillac quality you wonder with what words you could ever tell their charms. Masterpieces they certainly are—marvelously thought out—exquisitely worked out—and wonderfully comfortable and appealing.

See these new type Cadillac cars now on display in our show room. They will give you a new conception of what is true perfection in a motor car today.

The prices for the Limousine, Landaulet, Imperial and Town Car range from $3600 to $4000. For the owner driver there are four body types at $2550 to $3000—the Victoria (convertible), Coupe, Town and Country (convertible), and the Brougham. Open cars, $2105.

The Secret of the Famous West Point Trousers Line

DID you know that the wonderfully smart appearance of the West Pointers—the best turned out men in the world—is due to their famous trouser crease, knife-like from belt to boot, and made by the HEATLESS method of pressing? Their clothes wear like iron for the same reason—the HEATLESS method. Get in line with the snappiest turned out men in the world. You can look like them now. Get a

Leahey's HEATLESS Trouser Press

(Protected by U. S. Letters Patent)

Cost less than one month's tailor's bills, saves your trousers and lasts a lifetime. Hot, scorching irons crack the fibres, while the hot steam rots the very life out of the cloth—West Pointers know that.

This Lifetime Valet Service

will give you freshly ironed trousers every day of your life. With Leahey's Heatless Trouser Press you get a personal valet service as long as you live for less than a cent a month. Simple, easy, convenient and durable—and all it costs is $1. Remember, the first cost is the last cost. There is no operating expense. It just takes one minute by the clock. Simply put your trousers in the press and forget them. When you get up the morning your trousers are freshly pressed, creased and stretched to look like new, and all automatically while you slept!

Adds 50% to Your Trousers' Life

The HEATLESS Press not only doubles your trousers' life, but makes it necessary to own only one pair for every two pairs that you have now. They are pressed automatically at night. It is made of the toughest fibre board, thoroughly waterproof—no wood to warp, check, crack, or splinter—and is fitted with four heavily nickel-plated clamps of the finest spring steel.

Don't ever go back to the old-time methods. At practically no cost you can be the best groomed man of your set. Get the "prosperous" look. Ask the president of any big bank in Chicago—or the president of the Equitable Life Insurance Company, or the New York Life or Northwestern Life Insurance Companies—ask any BIG business man. He will tell you the value of the "prosperous" look that only well pressed clothes can give you. The shoddy man gets the shoddy job.

Everybody's Personal Valet Service, 1c a Month

Put "Everybody's Valet" in your home today. From this day henceforward the HEATLESS Press has sounded the knell of all wrinkled, baggy, and creaseless trousers for the live ones. From today on you can have your trousers pressed perfectly every day of your life without trouble and without expense.

The First Cost Is the Last Cost

There is no operating expense whatsoever. The HEATLESS Press is simple, efficient, and made to last a lifetime. It's the most wonderful labor-saving and money-saving invention for men that has ever been worked out.

ENGLEWOOD DEFEATS CRANE FOR TITLE

PLUNGES SHATTER TECH LINE IN 32-0 TRIUMPH

Victory Gives South Siders Clear Title to H. S. Honors of County.

LEONARD BIG FACTOR.

BY OTTO A. ENGEL.

Smashing, crashing, dashing their way through the Crane forward wall, Englewood High school gridders won their second consecutive Chicago league championship and with it the county prep honors by their 32 to 0 victory at Stagg field yesterday. Football of the 1905 vintage, with plunge after plunge, occasionally varied by a wide end run or a crisscross, won for Englewood. Crane was powerless to stop the assault.

Englewood had a reserve stock of modern plays, if the occasion required, but as the south siders got the jump by scoring two touchdowns in the first half, Coach Barradell decided it wasn't necessary. Besides a two inch blanket of snow with an uncertain underfooting made the use of the forward pass uncertain. Crane tried the open stuff at least ten times and made only two successful gains with 1916 plays, each good for about ten yards. Three other times forward passes were intercepted and one was directly responsible for an Englewood touchdown.

Crane Team Not a Unit.

Two weeks ago the battlers fought three scoreless quarters when the combat was called on account of darkness. Crane had a slight shade on ground gaining, but was woefully weak when it attempted to advance the oval yesterday. The one big reason for such a reversal of form was because eleven Englewood youngsters were in every play. Cranelites played the opponent instead of the ball and time after time quarreled among themselves. They were hopeless in team work and only twice did they show what "coördination of mind and muscle" could accomplish.

Englewood played consistently, scoring touchdowns in each of the four quarters and an extra one in the final period, just as the closing whistle blew. Straight ground gained by the south siders pushed the ball into the enemy's territory 390 yards, while Crane's progress was 180 yards. Not until the second quarter did the west siders make their first down. Englewood made its distance nineteen times, while Crane accomplished this feat only five times. Englewood punted six times and Crane nine, but each exchange gave Barradell's team a decided advantage.

Leonard Leads Advance.

Leonard was a bear in driving towards Crane's goal. He was used often, probably as many times as the rest of the Englewood back field, and he usually made good, averaging close to six yards. And what ground his mates did gain was due largely to the excellent interference his huge bulk afforded them. On defense he stopped a whole side of the line and once broke through, messing up an intended kick, which was followed by an Englewood touchdown a few minutes later.

Other Englewood stars were Capt. Heeren, who showed excellent judgment in picking the proper plays; Rollin Anderson, whose alertness and agility intercepted two forward passes, and Bromsted and Peyton, who did nicely in picking the holes made by their forwards.

Geis Stars for Crane.

Crane's particular star was young Geis, who gave his team three first downs in the second quarter and whose forward pass to Ludvik, netted twenty yards. Gibbs made one good play by returning a kickoff in thirty yards in the third quarter, while Lewis raced back fifty yards from a similar play in the final period.

Forty-five yards down the field without a halt gave Englewood its opening score in the initial period, when Heeren went over. Another march in the second session advanced the ball to the four yard line, where Crane made a gallant stand, temporarily averting a score. A poor punt however, gave Englewood the ball again on the fifteen yard line. The rest was comparatively easy, as Bromsted crossed the line.

Keep Piling Up Points.

The third period saw another procession, and ten plays advanced the ball to forty-five yards. Heeren made ten more and then Leonard smashed his way across the goal. Marker number four came in the last period and Bromsted scored. The final score came just as time was called, Peyton skirting the end for twenty yards. Lineup:

WAYWARD PASS BEATS DE PAUL AT BOSTON, 7-0

Somerville Wins on Finn's Poor Toss in Last Period.

Boston, Mass., Dec. 9.—[Special.]—De Paul academy of Chicago today sustained its first football defeat of 1916, Somerville High winning at Fenway park, 7 to 0. Superior line bucking, coupled with superior defense, decided the battle.

De Paul's much vaunted spectacular open play was stopped by clever defensive backs, who intercepted long forward passes after double and triple passes. Coach Paupa of De Paul had expected these tricks to work havoc with the easterners, but out of nine forward passes tried by De Paul only two were successful, and they came in succession. One was for twelve yards and the other for thirty. A third pass followed, and was intercepted beyond the goal line, and De Paul's best chance for a score vanished.

Mistake Beats De Paul.

Somerville outrushed De Paul, 201 yards to 64, but De Paul thrice took the ball on downs, having a defensive punch near the goal lines, which kept the score from being much larger. In fact, it was a glaring error by Finn, the De Paul center, that enabled Somerville to score at all.

After line smashing that carried the ball nearly the length of the field had proved ineffective near the De Paul goal the visitors took the ball on downs at their own twenty yard line in the last period. Capt. Grundman went back in punt formation. In view of the fact that the school boys disdained gaining ground by the punting method, there being only five punts during the game, everybody was expecting another desperate attempt to get a man loose by a long forward pass.

Finn snapped the ball back far over Grundman's head. The De Paul captain leaped and managed to knock it down, but could not hold it. Meanwhile Gilman and Young, Somerville tackle and end, were tearing in from the right wing, and Gilman fell on the ball at the five yard line. Three plays brought a touchdown, Thornton finding a hole in the De Paul right wing for the final plunge.

Two Chances for Losers.

De Paul made a total of six first downs, contrasted with Somerville's fourteen. Five of De Paul's were in the second period, when the visitors had their only two chances to score. One was spoiled by a forward pass which went over the goal line for a touchback.

In the other a penalty for holding set back De Paul after fine line smashing by Schneider and a drop kick had to be attempted. Hamilton's effort from the thirty-five yard line was short. Smith also failed in an attempt at a field goal after one of Somerville's frequent marches down the field had been checked.

Schneider and Grundman were the most effective backs for De Paul, particularly on the Minnesota shift, by which all the first downs, except the two gained by forward passes, were made.

Two Hurt in Battle.

The tackling of both teams was spectacular, backs being caught behind their lines frequently by smashing tackles. There were only two substitutions for injuries. Ford, the heavyweight Somerville guard, was knocked out, and Hynes was hurt so badly in the last play of the game he had to be carried off the field. Lineup:

CHICAGO SOCCER LEADERS WANT MICHIGAN CONTEST.

Reports that the University of Michigan has a strong soccer eleven, composed of students from South Africa, has led President P. P. Peel of the Illinois State association to open negotiations for a game here. This would give the players picked to represent Chicago against the Bethlehem Steel team at Bricklayers' field on Dec. 23 a good workout for their match against the national champions.

HARLEY WON'T PLAY AT PITT.

Columbus, O., Dec. 9.—"Absolutely nothing to it," said "Chick" Harley, Ohio State's All-American half back, in discussing the rumor from Pittsburgh that he would matriculate at the University of Pittsburgh next season.

WHEELER TO LEAD HARVARD.

NATIONAL BODY RATES WILLIAMS BEST AT TENNIS

New York, Dec. 9.—R. Norris Williams II. of Philadelphia, national singles champion, is the ranking lawn tennis player of the country, according to the official lists made public today by the ranking committee of the United States Lawn Tennis association. William M. Johnston of San Francisco, 1915 title holder and runner up to Williams this season, is placed second, with George M. Church third, R. Lindley Murray fourth, and Ichiya Kumagae, the Japanese player, fifth. Miss Molla Bjurstedt leads the list of women players.

Maurice E. McLoughlin, former national champion and famous Davis cup contestant, is not ranked among the first hundred through lack of data, and for the first time since 1909 his name does not appear in the singles review, except as an addenda to the records of the ranked tennis experts.

Follow Coast Official's Request.

That is due in part to the request of Dr. Sumner Hardy, president of the Pacific States association, that where California players did not compete frequently enough to furnish complete data for comparative purposes their names should be omitted from the ranking lists entirely.

McLoughlin, coupled with Ward Dawson, is placed second in the doubles pairing ranking, however, being preceded by W. M. Johnston and Clarence J. Griffin. Church and Willis Davis get third place.

Urge New Ranking System.

The ranking committee, in its report to the executive committee of the United States National Lawn Tennis association, suggests that the system of ranking the players be changed next year and that they be classified in groups instead of the method now in vogue. It also states that in preparing the lists for 1916 the records of 223 tournaments, 4,506 singles and 2,111 doubles players were considered.

The first twenty singles players, as ranked, and the first ten doubles teams, together with the leading ten women players, follow:

1. R. Norris Williams II., Philadelphia.
2. William M. Johnston, San Francisco.
3. George M. Church, Tenafly, N. J.
4. R. Lindley Murray, Niagara Falls, N. Y.
5. Ichiya Kumagae, Tokio.
6. Clarence J. Griffin, San Francisco.
7. Watson M. Washburn, New York.
8. Willis E. Davis, San Francisco.
9. J. J. Armstrong, Philadelphia.
10. Dean Mathey, Cranford, N. J.
11. Karl Behr, New York.
12. H. Byford, Chicago.
13. C. B. Doyle, Washington, D. C.
14. H. C. Johnson, Boston.
15. N. W. Niles, Boston.
16. T. R. Pell, New York.
17. H. A. Throckmorton, Elizabeth, N. J.
18. W. T Tilden Jr., Cynwyd, Pa.
19. E. H. Whitney, New York.
20. S. H. Voshell, Brooklyn, N. Y.

WOMEN PLAYERS, FIRST TEN.

1. Miss Molla Bjurstedt.
2. Mrs. Edward Raymond.
3. Miss Evelyn Sears.
4. Miss Anita Meyers.
5. Miss Sara Livingston.
6. Miss Marie Wagner.
7. Mrs. H. S. Green.
8. Miss Martha Guthrie.
9. Miss Eleonora Sears.
10. Mrs. Barger Wallach.

DOUBLES RANKING.

1. W. M. Johnston and C. J. Griffin.
2. M. E. McLoughlin and Ward Dawson.
3. G. M. Church and Willis E. Davis.
4. G. M. Church and D. Mathey.
5. W. F. Johnston and J. J. Armstrong.
6. F. B. Alexander and K. H. Behr.
7. D. Mathey and Harold Throckmorton.
8. W. T. Hayes and R. H. Burdick.
9. A. H. Man Jr. and C. M. Bull Jr.
10. W. E. Davis and H. V. D. Johns.

In the Wake of the News

By RING W. LARDNER

THE DIARY OF A SIREN.

DEC. 6.

TONIGHT at the supper table everybody was talking about the approaching Holiday season and wondering what Santa Claus would bring them of course in a joking way. After supper most of them went out including Mr. Cooley and after a while Miss Walters complained of a headache and retired to her room. I thought I would sit in the parlor a few minutes which is warmer than my room and imagine my surprise when the front door opened and Mr. Cooley came in.

"I thought you were gone for the evening or otherwise I would of retired," I remarked.

"Why should you run away from me?" he asked.

"You know very well," was my reply. "I do not think it is right that you and myself should be alone together when you are engaged to another girl. She is the one you should talk to."

"But she is in her room with a headache," was his reply, "and I do not feel like standing out in the hall and yelling at her through the door."

I could not help from laughing though I tried hard not to.

"I won't keep you only a minute," he said. "I just wanted to ask what you wanted for xmas."

"Mr. Cooley," I said, "you must not think about giving me an xmas present. You should spend your money on Miss Walters and she only."

"Haven't I already given her a 2 carrot stone?" was his reply.

"But that was not an xmas present," I replied. "You must give her something else."

"I will tend to that," he said, "but I am going to give you something to. What shall it be?"

"Mr. Cooley," I said. "I am not the kind of a girl that want men to give me presents. All I ask is their friendship as my days of romance are at an end forever."

"But I am going to give you something whether you like it or not," he said.

"You are so stubborn I would be afraid to be your wife," I said smiling at his persistency. "But if you insist I beg you to not spend more than a few dollars on me and only just give me some inexpensive token of your friendship otherwise I can not except it."

"I was not intending to spend a million dollars on you," was his reply. "I would only I have not much to spend this year. How about a small pin or brooch?"

"I can not except jewelry from you," I replied.

"How about flowers?" he said.

"Mr. Cooley," I said, "I will say again that I can take nothing only some small token of your friendship and flowers would look like we were something more than friends."

"We are," was his reply.

"Oh, Mr. Cooley," I said my voice quavering, "please don't talk like that when you know how matters stands. If you must give me something for friendship's sake give me something that I can wear and always keep, a wrist watch or a small necklace of some kind or ear rings."

"I will give you something but I won't tell you what it is going to be," he said smilingly.

Oh, diary, I hope he will not be foolish enough to spend a lot of money on me who can never be more than his friend and if it is a watch or a necklace or ear rings that he gets I hope he will buy those that are plain and not expensive though I have already had proofs of his generosity and if he insists on giving me an expensive watch or something how can I refuse without wounding him deeply?

MANY URGE MICHIGAN TO REJOIN 'BIG NINE'

DETROIT, Mich., Dec. 9.—Agitation to have the University of Michigan return to the western conference and immediately resume athletic relations with the conference universities is attracting considerable attention throughout the state. A local newspaper which wired the football coach or athletic director of each of the "Big Nine," institutions tonight printed the replies. These replies unanimously urged Michigan to return to the fold.

For more than a week sentiment has been growing among students at Ann Arbor that conference football, baseball, and track contests are necessary to stimulate interest in athletics at Michigan. The University of Michigan club of Detroit has mailed hundreds of cards to alumnus asking: "What is the matter with athletics at Michigan?"

Coach A. A. Stagg of the University of Chicago and Coach Henry L. Williams of the University of Minnesota are among the conference leaders who favor Michigan returning to the conference. Stagg wired:

"The University of Chicago would welcome Michigan's reëntry into the conference, and I believe that the other universities feel the same way about it."

Coach Williams said: "It will be a good thing for Michigan and a good thing for the conference if she returns."

CONFERENCE TO PUNISH GRID MEN WHO TURN 'PRO'

BY WALTER H. ECKERSALL.

Threatening athletes with suspension and forfeiture of their letters if they take part in professional football games after the close of the collegiate season; moving forward the date of the practice season from Sept. 20 to 15; a letter of sympathy to relatives of the late Prof. A. G. Smith of Iowa, who had been a member of the conference since its birth, and the selection of Prof. Thomas E. French of Ohio State as its representative at the meeting of the National Intercollegiate Athletic association in New York on Dec. 28, constituted the principal business at the annual meeting of faculty representatives of the western conference at the Auditorium hotel yesterday.

That the statement of Assistant Coach Pat Page of Chicago, who called Northwestern and Ohio State "small fry" of the conference, attracted the attention of Maroon authorities, was shown by the action of the Midway board of athletic control, whose delegate, Dean Albion W. Small, read the following apology:

"Under instruction from the University of Chicago board, our delegate wishes to express to the conference regret because of the remark made near the close of the season by a member of its coaching staff in reference to two conference teams, which did not represent the approval of the Chicago board."

Pro Football Under Ban.

Because of the rapid strides being made by professional football teams, the managers of which sign up college players before the expiration of their athletic careers and college scholastic careers, the committee took drastic action. There have been cases in which a player terminated his athletic career on a Saturday and on the following Sunday competed with some professional eleven.

In order to do away with such procedure the committee adopted a resolution by which any athlete who competes on a professional team before the end of his scholastic term will forfeit his letter and will be threatened with expulsion or other punishment. The consequences were voted to be left in the hands of the faculties of the institution which the offender represents.

Hits Coaching Assistants, Too.

While taking the player's status into consideration, the committee went even farther and adopted another resolution whereby employés of athletic departments at any of the conference institutions who take part in professional contests be suspended from employment.

In moving forward the date for opening the practice season from Sept. 20 to the 15th, the committee added an amendment whereby it no longer will be possible for the candidates to use the football field, suits, or any paraphernalia of the universities they represent until the official opening day of practice.

Prof. Moran New President.

Prof. Thomas F. Moran of Purdue was elected president to succeed Dean Albion W. Small of Chicago, and J. F. A. Pyre of Wisconsin was chosen secretary to succeed Prof. Moran. Those in attendance were:

Prof. Thomas F. Moran, Purdue; J. F. A. Pyre, Wisconsin; Dean Albion W. Small, Chicago; Prof. G. A. Goodenough, Illinois; Prof. Charles J. Sembower, Indiana; Prof. B. J. Lambert, Iowa; Prof. James Paige, Minnesota; Prof. J. V. Pooley, Northwestern; and Prof. Thomas E. French, Ohio State.

WEST GETS FOUR PLACES ON ALL-AMERICAN TEAM

Eckersall Ranks Wyman, Baston, Harley, and Becker with Stars.

TWO OF 'EM GOPHERS.

BY WALTER H. ECKERSALL.

[Copyright: 1916: By Walter H. Eckersall.]

With the 1916 football season a matter of history and the strongest elevens in different sections of the country determined, it is customary to honor those who have done the most consistent playing during the year by placing them on a team known as the all-American eleven.

The season just ended resulted in the development of many players whose work, not in one game, but in all contests, makes them stand out above the others. Players who did stellar work in one contest often failed in others. So these selections are based on the playing of the men in every game, and especially their performances in evenly fought contests.

Although the west met defeat in the important intersectional games, there were players in the central west who easily have earned places on any eleven. Thus Baston and Wyman of Minnesota, Becker of Iowa, and Harley of Ohio State are all-American material.

Plethora of Good Backs.

The selection this year is made somewhat difficult by the wealth of good backfield material. Practically every eleven in the country boasted good, reliable backs, who made distance when ground was needed. These men could hit the line or run the ends with equal success, and their defensive qualities ranked with their offensive play.

In discussing the backs, every football follower knows that Elmer Oliphant of the Army was one of the best players of the year. He is not placed on this eleven because he has played more football than members of other teams restricted by college eligibility rules. Oliphant played his allotted three years at Purdue and as many more with the soldiers.

Develops Greatly with Army.

Those connected with the game know experience is the factor that makes football players. Therefore it is hardly fair to place a player of Oliphant's type on this eleven. At most universities athletes are allowed to compete only three years. At a few others the maximum limit is four years. A player in his third or fourth year reaches a stage of development which would make him a great player if he were allowed to compete two or three years longer.

There is no disputing the greatness of Oliphant. He was a great player at Purdue. With his additional training at West Point he has developed into one of the greatest players that ever represented the cadets. He is a tower of strength offensively and defensively, and has been the mainstay of the Army team for the last two years.

Must Be All-Round Team.

In selecting an all-American team every angle of football must be considered. The eleven must be strong offensively and defensively and must be able to play the old and new game with equal facility. It must be composed of players who can throw and receive forward passes, hit the line, or run the ends, and above all must be fortified with a kicker who can punt for distance with accuracy. It also must be equipped with a player who can kick goals from the field when other means of scoring fail.

The writer has seen in action most of the players named. Information about the others has been gleaned from coaches and officials.

West Draws Four Places.

Four western players are placed on the first eleven, the largest representation ever accorded the west on such an honorary eleven. Those who have seen these players will not dispute their right to be so honored.

Baston of Minnesota, undoubtedly one of the greatest ends in the history of Gopher football, is placed at the left wing. He captained the Minnesota team, and although it failed to win the western conference championship it certainly was as powerful an aggregation at the close of the season as there was in the country.

Baston has an ideal build for an end. He was heavy and fast, broke interference perfectly, and was ever mindful to turn the opposing runners to the inside. His strongest point was receiving forward passes from Wyman. He had the cunning to get out into the open to receive the passes, some of which were hurled half the length of the field.

Herron at Other Wing.

Herron of Pittsburgh is placed at right end. He was a tower of strength to Pitt, and it was in part through his defense that Coach Warner's eleven went through the season without defeat. In the east he is rated one of the greatest wing men in history. Like Baston, Herron is heavy and fast and possesses football intuition. He followed the ball at all times and was generally close to it, no matter in what part of the field the play was sent, thereby recovering many fumbles.

De Hart of Pittsburgh is placed at quarter back because of his brainy work in all Pitt's important games. He ran his team with rare judgment and seldom failed to call the proper play when distance was needed to make first down. He used his players sparingly, and directed his attacks so as to gain ground with the least effort. He was a great open field runner and a sure handler of the ball.

Harley for Right Half.

Harley, the great little back of Ohio State, whose playing made it possible for the Buckeyes to become undisputed champions of the western conference, is placed at right half back. He was the unanimous choice of western critics for a position on both all-conference and all-western teams.

There was nothing on a football field that Harley could not do and do well. Whether it was running with the ball, punting, or field goal kicking, this warrior jumped into the breach and pulled seeming defeats out of the fire. His run against Illinois resulted in a touchdown and the following goal kick won for Ohio. He scored all the Buckeyes' points against Wisconsin and led the attack which resulted in the downfall of Northwestern in the conference championship game.

Berry of Penn Gets Berth.

Berry of Pennsylvania, the mainstay of the Quaker eleven, is placed at left halfback. Berry played fullback most of the season, but because of the formations employed he ran from either halfback's position. He moved with power and drive and seldom failed to make ground in the pinches. If he had received the proper support his work would have been even more brilliant.

Wyman of Minnesota is given the fullback's berth. He was one of the best leaders of an interference seen in the west in years and a powerful line plunger. He could carry the ball straight into the line or drive off tackles with so much force that it generally took at least two opponents to check his progress.

West of Colgate at Tackle.

West of Colgate is placed at left tackle. Although playing on a small college eleven, his work against the leading teams of the country was about as good forward wall playing as has been seen in years. On defense he played wide. Although opposing teams tried to send plays inside of him, he clogged the hole in such a manner that little ground was made. He frequently smashed attempted end runs before the runner got up to the scrimmage line, and he generally opened up a hole for his own backs.

Becker of Iowa is given right tackle. He played practically every line position this year, but no matter where he was placed his work was a feature. He was strong and powerful and quick to size up opponents' attacks. He seldom failed to open holes for the backs and was on top of the play all the time.

Black of Yale Earns Place.

Right guard position is awarded to Capt. Black of Yale. He was the mainstay of the Eli forward wall and a factor in all Yale's important contests. He seldom allowed gains to be made through him because he continually varied his charges. He was fast and active for a big man.

Dadmun of Harvard draws the other guard position. Like Black, he was a fast, aggressive charger and mixed in every play. Although a big man, he handled himself well and frequently beat the ends down the field under punts. He could tackle in the open and was not afraid to throw himself at a runner when the latter was outfooting him.

The pivot position is awarded to Peck of Pittsburgh, who is looked upon as one of the greatest centers that ever straddled a ball in the east. He was an accurate passer on all the intricate formations employed by Pitt, while his defense hardly could have been improved. He played loose center and did as much tackling as any member of the team.

FIGURES SHOW RAPID GROWTH FOR BASEBALL

Cubs' Books Prove the Jump to High Finance Is of Recent Origin.

BY I. E. SANBORN.

Veteran baseball fans who discourse about "the good old days" talk of deeds instead of dollars. They can tell all about what the old time players did and argue in terms of dope whether Radbourne or McGinnity was the better "iron man"; whether Lange or Cobb was the better outfielder of all times. But they do not try to tell you the salaries of these former heroes.

In the old days deeds instead of dollars were the measure of a man's achievement. The modern fan talks in dollars; claims Cobb is a better fielder than Lange because he gets more salary and challenges the old timer to name the former Chicago star's stipend. Said old timer doesn't know what salary Lange drew. The 1916 fan doesn't know Cobb's salary, either, but thinks he does, and fixes it anywhere between $10,000 and $25,000, according to what newspaper he reads.

Contracts Held Secret.

The veteran fan doesn't realize he could floor his antagonist by declaring that Lange drew $30,000 and saying he read it in some newspaper of fifteen years ago, because neither the old nor the new fan is aware of the fact that ball players' salaries are kept secret if possible. The only people who positively know the figures in Cobb's contract are Ty himself, Frank Navin, owner of the Detroit club; President Johnson of the American league, who approves all contracts in that circuit, and probably (although not necessarily) Hugh Jennings, manager of the Tigers.

I don't know Cobb's salary, and would not expect to be told the truth if I asked any one who does know it. But I do know that Lange's salary was only $1,600 in 1893, because I have been given access to the old balance sheets and records of the Chicago National league club by James A. Hart, former president of that concern. From those I obtained a lot of interesting facts and figures. But when I attempted to obtain similar facts and figures covering this season or the previous one—to compare past conditions with present—I was met with evasions and promises about "tomorrow."

These Facts May Surprise You.

Here are a few facts that are not "hearsay" dope, nor are they based on guesses:

Only twice in fifteen years after it was established did the Chicago National league club's receipts for home games in an entire season exceed the receipts of a single world's series game.

The share of each player on the Red Sox team for four games of the last world's series was larger than that received by any member of Cap Anson's team for the entire season of 1893, and more than twice that of some of the stars of that team.

Each club's share of the receipts of the world's pennant contest of last October was much greater than the profits of the Chicago team for an entire season in any year prior to 1905 and was more than double the team's pay roll for any season except under war conditions.

Proves Growth of Baseball.

Those are enough to indicate something of the tremendous growth of baseball as a business in the last ten or twelve years and to account for the commercial spirit that has invaded the sport. If any one questions the foregoing facts, here are the figures on which they are based, and said figures are a matter of record, not surmise:

The gross receipts for one world's series game (Oct. 12, 1916) were $83,873. During the seasons from 1877 to 1891, inclusive, the receipts of the Chicago club for the year for all home games exceeded that figure only in 1887 and 1888, right after the Ansons had won two straight pennants and were still contenders. During that period the lowest year's receipts were $10,155 in 1890 (Brotherhood war), and that figure probably is beaten several times a season by the receipts of a single championship game.

Some Individual Comparisons.

Each Red Sox player received as his share of the last world's series coin $3,750. In 1893 Cap Anson's salary as manager was $2,700. Next to him the highest salaried player on the team was Hutchinson, the star slabman. He was paid $2,500, which was $100 more than the National league's salary limit then in force. Bill Dahlen's contract called for only $2,100, and that figure would be scorned by any recruit of today unless he was an "unknown." Malachi Kittridge, the catcher, drew only $2,000; Jimmy Ryan, the outfielder, only $1,875; and Bill Lange, the Ty Cobb of his time, was paid only $1,600 for the season of 1893.

Each club's share of the last world's series was $92,052. In twenty-one years the annual profits of the Chicago National league club never reached that figure, and only once did they amount to more than half what the Boston and Brooklyn clubs received at the end of the 1916 world's combat. Only in the years when war was threatened or being waged did the team pay roll amount to half of that sum.

In scanning the subsequent table, which shows the Chicago National league club's aggregate salary roll and profits from 1884 to 1904, it will be noticed how expensive war is. The year of the Brotherhood cost the local club over $43,000. The three years of the American league war resulted in an aggregate loss of over $54,000. Here 'tis:

Year.	Salaries.	Profits or losses.
1884	$28,023	$ 1,152
1885	28,378	19,581
1886	40,210	24,987
1887	40,534	62,210
1888	66,373	35,249
1889	55,388	9,717
1890	40,692	*43,230
1891	43,777	10,093
1892	32,828	......
1893	44,715	2,459
1894	35,288	*2,040
1895	38,310	22,321
1896	37,873	18,110

BILLY SULLIVAN TO QUIT.

Detroit, Mich., Dec. 9.—[Special.]—Billy Sullivan, formerly White Sox catcher and last year coach of the Tiger pitching staff, has decided to pass up baseball and spend his days developing his ranch near Portland, Ore. At the close of last season Sullivan was given his unconditional release. Now he writes that unless receiving a liberal offer he will stick to the ranch.

LOCAL PACKERS BATTLE ST. LOUIS WITHOUT SCORE

Rival Teams, in Return Match, Fail to Count in Game on Muddy Field.

St. Louis, Mo., Dec. 9.—[Special.]—Football teams representing the Marigolds of Chicago and the National Stock Yards of East St. Louis today battled desperately on a muddy field and finished with honors even—0 to 0. The game was played on the athletic field of Jones' park, East St. Louis, for the benefit of the Glen Addie orphanage, an institution near Belleville.

The field was in such bad condition that straw was brought over from the yards and scattered between the goals.

Interest in Morris Boys.

Interest in the Chicago lineup centered in the multimillionaire players, including Edward and Nelson Morris, active managers of the packing houses established by their grandfather, and H. Heymann, son of L. A. Heymann, treasurer and financial director of the Morris interests.

Mrs. Edward Morris, a bride of a few months, came from Chicago to see her husband get "mussed up." He fared very well in the game, and it was not until within ten minutes of the finish that he met with a slight accident that forced him to retire.

No Damage to Nelson.

Nelson Morris went through the game without serious mishap, and was in the center of many exciting scrimmages.

TWO CAPTAINS FOR SCHURZ.

Schurz High school football players elected two captains yesterday. Albert Reinits, full back, was chosen to lead the heavyweight squad, while Walter Hudson, quarter back, was elected captain of the lightweights. Although Schurz was represented by only the midget team last season, Coach Louis Berger plans to put a heavyweight eleven on the field next fall.

Whiting, 59; Hamlin, 13.

Whiting Owls swamped the Hamlin Outlaws of Chicago at Whiting, 59 to 13. In a curtain raiser the Hamlin Clippers defeated the Polarines of Whiting, 19 to 13. Girard furnished the feature of the heavy contest by tossing twelve ringers.

Waukegan Fives Beat La Grange.

Waukegan Township High won a double header from La Grange High quintet at La Grange last night. Waukegan heavies trimmed the home majors, 88 to 20. Populorum tossed six baskets and Tornquist five for the invaders. Waukegan lightweights won from La Grange, 20 to 10.

Riverside Quintets Take Two.

Riverside High school basketball players opened their season by taking a double header from Wheaton at Riverside last night. The heavies won, 32 to 18, and the midgets came out ahead after a well fought contest, 21 to 16.

CHIVINGTON HAPPY THOUGH OUT OF JOB; TERM NOT EXPIRED

BY JAMES CRUSINBERRY.

The unusual condition of finding a man without a job and still happy was experienced yesterday when one called upon Tom Chivington at the offices of the American association. Tom had hurried back from Indianapolis immediately after he had been defeated by Tom Hickey of St. Paul for the office of president of the association.

"I know I am a man without a job," said Chivington, "but I also wish to say that I haven't felt as free and easy in mind in a great many years. Just at present it looks as if the American association has two presidents. At least the last time I was elected to the office it was on Jan. 8, and I was put in for a term of five years. I suppose my time isn't up until Jan. 8, but I see that my successor has been appointed on committees to do some work immediately.

Money Doesn't Worry Him.

"I don't know what I shall do. One thing I am glad about is that many years ago I put some of my savings into a pecan grove down in Alabama, and the trees are pretty big now and yield quite a supply of nuts every fall. It is not hard to get money for that commodity."

Chivington was busy in the American association office preparing to abandon the place. Mrs. Davis, who has been his private secretary for nearly ten yeras, was helping him and also was wondering what she would do in the future. Her experience with the American association has fitted her to accept almost any position in baseball, and Chivington seemed more concerned about securing a job for her than for himself.

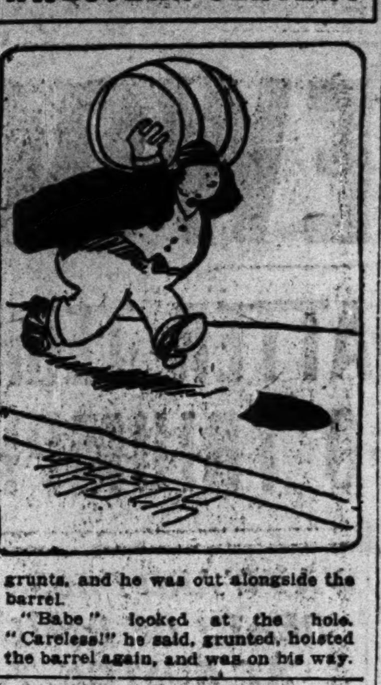
President Weeghman of the Cubs completed arrangements to leave today for New York for the annual meeting of the National league, but was still in doubt as to who would be manager of the north siders next season.

President Johnson of the American league stated that among the things which would come before the magnates of his organization next Thursday at the annual meeting here would be the matter of stars of his league acting as reporters for the world's series. That same issue has come up before and the league legislated against it, but stories appeared just the same under the names of several of the stars.

Illinois, 38; Millikin, 18.

Decatur, Ill., Dec. 9.—The University of Illinois basketball team won its first game of the season tonight from Millikin university, 38 to 18.

WHAT'S A 200 POUND BARREL OF SALT TO "BABE" SMITH, NORTHWESTERN CENTER?



With the close of the most successful football campaign in a long space of years, followers of the gridiron heroes at Northwestern university have had plenty to talk about. One of the yarns concerns 250 pound "Babe" Smith, center on the varsity.

"Babe," whose father conducts a grocery store in a Wisconsin town near Madison, was assisting Smith père by conveying a 200 pound barrel of salt along the street, just as the ordinary citizen would walk home with a ten pound bag of sugar. The barrel rested on the brawny shoulder of "Babe" and he was striding along cheerfully until an unexpected manhole interrupted the jaunt, engulfing "Babe" and the barrel.

Spectators hurried up to see whether anything would be left of Smith. Before the first alarmed villager had got close enough to peer down the manhole, a 200 pound barrel of salt came shooting out of the hole. It landed on terra firma with a thud. Next came "Babe," who gave a couple of wriggles to extricate his husky form, a couple of grunts, and he was out alongside the barrel.

"Babe" looked at the hole. "Careless!" he said, grunted, hoisted the barrel again, and was on his way.

Reo

What Does "50 Per cent Oversize In all Vital Parts" Mean to You in Your Motor Car?

DO YOU REGARD THAT famous Reo slogan merely as an advertising "catch phrase" or had you accepted it at par—as you have a right to accept any statement to which the name Reo is signed?

YOU'VE OBSERVED, of course, that Reo the Fifth is fully 50 per cent larger—more commodious—than other cars selling within one or two hundred dollars of its price.

YES 50 PER CENT LARGER—50 per cent more passenger room. There's just the difference of comfort versus discomfort between this $875 Reo and cars selling for, say, $100 to $200 less.

BUT THERE'S A BETTER WAY to test this matter—to make comparisons—and to find that you actually do get "50 per cent oversize" in all vital parts of Reo the Fifth.

PUT THEM ON THE SCALES—there's the real test. For in the final analysis, the metal in a car does count for strength—does cost in the making.

THERE'S A GREAT TENDENCY these days to skimp in size, and then to skimp in size of parts—and that shows up in the weight of the car.

GRANT, IF YOU WILL, that others may use as good material and as good engineering as Reo (though in service these cars don't prove it) and still you must know that one pound of steel cannot do the service of a pound and a half.

THAT'S SIMPLE ISN'T IT?

THE CLAIM MIGHT BE made that superior engineering could offset the difference in materials—but in the light of the fact that Reo engineering was known and recognized as the standard for the industry long before the designers of most other cars were ever heard of, that claim won't hold water.

DOWN TO A CERTAIN POINT lightness in a motor car is desirable. Put a Reo on the scales and you'll find just what that point is.

TO GET BELOW THAT one of two expedients must be resorted to (generally both are)—

NAMELY: SKIMPING ON THE SIZE—cut an inch or a half an inch there; narrow the seats, shorten the leg room till you can just squeeze the regulation "5" passengers in; and cut the size of every part down till there's just enough "factor of safety" to get by.

THAT CUTS THE WEIGHT—and since weight means steel, brass, bronze, aluminum, wood, leather—and these cost money, you can see how the selling price can be cut by that simple plan.

THEN SUBSTITUTE imitation leather for real leather, use commercial steels instead of special alloy, skimp on the work—and you have cut the first cost again—and lowered the selling price.

BUT WHAT HAVE YOU DONE to the customer—the man who is to buy and to own and to drive and to pay the "upkeep and repair" bills of that car?

ASK ANY OWNER of Reo the Fifth, after he has driven his car two, or three years. Ask owners of others that sold for the same or less.

COMPARE THEIR ANSWERS and you'll appreciate as never before the tremendous significance of that Reo slogan—that Reo standard which calls for "50 per cent oversize" in all vital parts.

BY THE WAY!—THE PRICE of Reo the Fifth, which is now $875 f. o. b. factory, may (almost surely will) have to be increased at any moment now.

THE REO FOLK are holding off as long as possible, hoping that some change in conditions may put prices of materials back where they were a year ago, and thereby enable them to make this great car the Reo way and yet sell it at the present price.

BUT YOU KNOW, and we are certain no such prospect is in sight—so we expect notice any day that the price has been raised.

MEANTIME Reo dealers are accepting orders with the expressed understanding that the sale price is subject to the list price that may be in effect at time the delivery is specified.

TWO BIG RINKS SOON TO OPEN FOR ICE FANS

North and South Side to Be Scenes of Indoor Skating Soon.

BY J. J. ALCOCK.

Are you a skater?

Does the clink of good steel against smooth ice send a thrill up your spine?

Has the prospect of an open winter about Chicago caused you a bit of disappointment?

If you qualify as an ice fan, forget about the weather. We are to have skating, real ice skating, all this winter. The weather man may do his worst. Within a month Chicago skating devotees will no longer be dependent on his efforts. For nearly $750,000 has been invested in two artificial rinks in our midst, and the skating bug and buggess may have their fling all through the "R" months, regardless of weather conditions.

Opening Christmas Eve.

Out in White City work on an artificial rink which will cost nearly $200,000 without considering the value of the site, is rapidly nearing completion. The rink is to be thrown open to the public on Christmas eve, according to present plans. Up north, on Broadway, at Thorndale, work is being pushed on a [illegible] ice palace, which is slated to open on New Year's day or shortly afterward.

Indoor ice rinks have been an established fact in other cites for years. Chicago has been backward in adding this feature to its winter amusements, largely because of an unfortunate financial experience at Dreamland several years ago. Lack of attention and a defective refrigerating system made a bloomer of the west side project, and cost the promoters a wad of cash, according to reports. Since then local capital has been wary of investing n any similar scheme.

Phil Ball Interested.

It remained for men who have made a success of indoor rinks in other cities to wake up Chicago. A combination which controls rinks in Cincinnati and St. Louis is furnishing most of the coin for the rink on the north side. Phil Ball, principal owner of the St. Louis Browns, is one of the heaviest investors. He opened a rink in St. Louis recently and has associated with him men who have been conducting a rink in Cincinnati for years. The backers will combine the Chicago, St. Louis, and Cincinnati rinks as a nucleus for a hockey and skating league, and expect to draw in Pittsburgh, Cleveland, and New York, where rinks already are established.

White City's rink is controlled entirely by Chicagoans, however. Work was started over two months ago, and most of the fifteen miles of piping which will furnish the ice have been put in place. Progress has reached a stage where there seems no doubt of the opening being held on Christmas eve, as planned.

Service Room for Skaters.

There will be no heating of the skating room on the south side, but there will be a large and comfortable service room wherein the skaters may warm up or rest if they so desire. The skating floor will be 100 feet by 250 feet, ample enough for almost any contingency. Regardless of weather conditions outdoors, the temperature inside will be kept at a uniform notch.

At the Ice palace on Broadway the skating arena, 295 feet by 120 feet, will be heated, but the icing system installed guarantees that the ice surface always will be just right, no matter how many skaters may throng the place. The promoters assert they can "skate" [illegible] persons comfortably in their arena.

Cost Thousands of Dollars.

Considerable mechanical genius is displayed in producing ice for indoor skating. Numberless feet of piping are laid along the floor of the arena, all fed from an ice producing plant which costs thousands of dollars. This piping is "sprayed" until a proper surface of ice is secured, and the frozen aqua is kept in condition by the cold air in the ice flooring. What is known as the brine system is used at both the new plants here.

An idea of the cost may be obtained from the fact that the switchboard at the Broadway rink, by which every foot of ice is registered and in which the least variation of temperature is recorded, cost the owners $25,000. The White City plans call for practically the same care. If successful at the start, both rinks will be open through a season extending from October or November to May 1.

Dancing will be an added attraction at both rinks, and, in addition, the White City ice arena will connect with the roller rink there. The Broadway building was constructed solely for ice skating, but a lot of useless space in the foyer will be turned into a dance hall.

"Tribune" Starts Boom.

Last year THE TRIBUNE started a skating boom in Chicago. Through its efforts practically every available park and lot within the city limits was flooded, and the sport thrived as it had not done in years. As a direct result of the boom, Chicago was awarded the international amateur speed championships. Only once before, when the Dreamland rink was in operation, were the title races given to this city. This year they will be decided at one of the rinks now being constructed.

Officials of the Western Skating association are looking for a banner year. Plans to boom hockey locally, without [illegible] crack teams from other cities, will be taken up tomorrow night at the annual meeting in the Hotel Sherman.

Kennedy St. Ignatius Captain.

[illegible] Kennedy, center of the St. Ignatius [illegible] academy basketball team, was elected captain by his teammates yesterday. [illegible] Walsh plans to have a college and an academy bantamweight five [illegible]. Percy Moore, former St. Ignatius star, was out yesterday, giving the youngsters [illegible] in how to play the game.

CAPT. HEEREN OF ENGLEWOOD SCORING FIRST TOUCHDOWN

EDGEWATER BOWLER LANDS SECOND PLACE IN CITY PIN TOURNEY

An effort by Robert Timm of the Edgewater Country club to lower the high mark in singles, held by Brown, marked the work in the Chicago Bowling association tournament yesterday. Timm got off to a mild 180 start, then pumped in two big counts which ran him into second place with 645. Joe Shaw and Harry Omsberg of the Howard Majors ran high in doubles during the day with 1,156, eighty-one pins back of the mark set by Webster and Mott of the I. A. C. the day before. The team event proved slow, the George A. Fullers showing best with 2,669.

The longest day's schedule of the present meet was carded, with a lot of famous men in action, but they did not disturb the leaders. J. C. Peebles of the Metcalfs picked up 621 for fifth place in singles. Only a few others hit better than 600.

FOR PLAYERS OF WHIST

BY A. R. METCALFE.

AUCTION bridge cannot be learned by memorizing a lot of rules. A player must learn how to use his mind, and a knowledge of bidding even is of little use unless one is able to extract the full value of a deal after winning the bid. The best deal of the last week follows:

THE HANDS.

S.—J, 7.
H.—K, Q, 10, 7.
C.—8, 5.
D.—J, 10, 9, 5, 2.

West secured eight tricks.

Note that the player who doubled did not take a trick. North said that if he held two good red suits and his partner had bid both black, he did not see how west could make two odd at no-trump.

West figured that south must have held ten black cards, especially as he could only hold two honors in either suit.

The play of the ace of hearts at trick four was the most important of the deal, as it forced south to lead clubs at trick twelve. Had south played the nine of clubs at trick seven west would have won with the ten and forced the lead upon south with a spade.

ILLINOIS A. C. TRIMS EARLHAM TOSSERS BY 68 TO 10 COUNT

Illinois Athletic club basketball tossers ran away from the Earlham college quintet, 68 to 10, in the second half of a double bill in the I. A. C. gymnasium before a packed house. At half time the score was 38 to 0. The basket shooting of Elliott, who caged ten baskets, and of Griesel and Cochrane, who made eight apiece, featured the game.

In the curtain raiser the second I. A. C. team, reinforced by several regulars, defeated Seward park, 27 to 22.

IMPORTANT ANNOUNCEMENT TO MEN WHO DRINK

Book Published for Free Circulation by Hon. J. E. Bruce Tells How to Create a Loathing for Liquor and Overcome Effects of Using the "Red Stuff" Without Leaving Home or Business

DRINKING MEN DEFENDED AND FORTIFIED

A Remarkable Book by a Remarkable Man

Seven years ago Senator J. E. Bruce, of Iowa, a prominent lawyer and banker, gave up all other business and political ambitions and moved to Chicago to devote his entire time to the work of establishing institutions for the treatment of drinking men by modern and scientific methods of treatment.

That he has "Made Good" is evidenced by the fact that through his efforts over three-score splendid institutions have already been established in Principal American and foreign cities in which tens of thousands have been released from their slavery to drink or drugs, and restored as useful citizens to society and as "Breadwinners" to their families.

With a view of reaching and saving the thousands of high class men in all "Walks of Life" who keep on drinking until they become "hopeless wrecks" because of their unwillingness to go to an institution or inability to pay the prices charged, Senator Bruce has published a book for free circulation entitled the "Drinking Man Defended and Fortified."

In this "Heart-to-Heart-Talk" to business, professional and laboring men and women, Senator Bruce gives them the benefit of the knowledge he has acquired during the past seven years devoted exclusively to the work regarding a REMEDY that will enable them to overcome the cause and effects of continued indulgence (for themselves or others) and permanently quit drinking without leaving home or neglecting business.

As its title "Drinking Men Defended and Fortified" indicates, Senator Bruce in this book defends the drinking man as the innocent victim of a CAUSE—a "condition not a theory," that virtually forces him to drink regularly or periodically to excess. He also POINTS OUT THE WAY for the drinking man to overcome the cause and be permanently fortified against the effects and well known, awful final results of continued indulgence.

Irrespective of your personal or direct interest for self, a "dear one," a neighbor or friend, you will be interested in reading this truly "Remarkable Book by a Remarkable Man." It provides the fortunate man or woman who has been "immune" to the poison of alcohol, with "Food for Thought," and action in behalf of a relative, valued employe, or unfortunate neighbor or friend who has been most "susceptible" to its insidious touch.

For a free copy of "Drinking Men Defended and Fortified," which will be mailed in plain, sealed envelope, free of charge, address Hon. J. E. Bruce, 615 East 49th Street, Chicago, Ill. Write a brief statement regarding the case, with the assurance that all communications will be held as sacredly confidential as those with your own minister, doctor or lawyer at home.

CHICAGO'S GOLF COST $2,000,000; HERE'S THE DOPE

Statistician Presents Figures Showing Vast Amount Spent Yearly.

BY J. G. DAVIS.

In a talk at the annual meeting of the Chicago District Golf association held last week Alonzo A. Burt, vice president and treasurer of the Chicago District Golf association, made the statement that approximately $2,000,000 is spent annually in pursuit of the royal and ancient game by golfers in and around Chicago.

This caused some surprise among the delegates, many of whom were familiar with the finances of their own clubs. In his capacity as treasurer Mr. Burt has a fondness for vital statistics, and when he volunteered to assist the clubs in the Chicago district in formulating a standardized system of accounts the work led him into an interesting channel.

Report Is Conservative.

An analysis of the report shows that Mr. Burt has been extremely conservative in his estimates and it is easy to infer that when playing on his home course at the Oak Park Country club he seldom overputts.

In response to a request from THE TRIBUNE Mr. Burt furnished the following data showing the basis for his $2,000,000 statement:

There are about forty golf clubs in the territory that can be fairly called the Chicago golf district. These clubs will average 250 members, making a total of about 10,000 members, whose annual club dues will average fully $75, or $750,000 per annum, very little of which is left over at the close of the season.

Locker dues are from $3 to $8 per year, or an average of around $5 per member, amounting to $50,000 per annum. Caddies' fees average around $50 per member for the season, which is approximately $500,000. The average restaurant bill per member for the season will not be less than $50, which adds another $500,000.

Golf Balls $100,000!

Golf balls, although a trifle cheaper now than before the expiration of the fundamental patents, still cost enough. Some players want a new ball frequently, others use a ball as long as it will roll, provided, of course, it is not driven into the "rough" or into a water hazard. The balls that change hands through "syndicates," "birdies," "eagles," and similar interesting methods, amount to a tidy sum. Certainly the whole cost of golf balls is not less than an average of $10 per member, making a total of $100,000.

The above items have not included the great army of park golfers who play over the public courses. Statistics compiled by the south parks commission indicate that over 300,000 players used Jackson park and Marquette courses the current year. These figures, of course, include starts made by the same player, but do not take in the other public courses. The expenses of these players during a season would certainly not be less than $100,000.

CHICAGO GOLF COST

Annual dues	$ 750,000
Locker rentals	50,000
Caddies' fees	500,000
Restaurant charges	500,000
Transportation	250,000
Golf balls	100,000
Cleaning and repairing clubs, laundry, valet work, etc.	150,000
Park golfers	100,000
Total	$2,400,000

The above estimates do not include any transfer and initiation fees, no income from rooms, which is a considerable item with a number of clubs, and no account has been taken of the income from guest privileges, which at a good many clubs amount to $2,500 per annum. The figures are approximate and do not include the cost of the "nineteenth hole."

INDOOR NET MEN COMPLETE PLAY IN FIRST ROUND

The first round of play in the winter singles tennis tournament was completed at the municipal pier yesterday and matches in two other rounds also were run off. Marasigan, the Filipino star, lost a hard fought contest in the second round, when he was unable to get started in the first set. He dropped the match to Adams, 6—1, 7—9, 7—5.

The double semi-final contest between Kenfield and Oelsner of the Chicago Tennis club and Wylie and Carver of the South Park club will be played off at 10 o'clock this morning. The winner in this match will then meet Miller, South Park, and Hubbell, South Side, for the doubles championship trophy at 1 o'clock. Singles matches will be staged all day, to finish off several rounds of the tourney. Yesterday's singles summaries:

First round—Dr. Harrison defeated Bowan, 6—2, 6—0; Johnson defeated Kimball, 6—0, 6—1; McKiernan defeated Curran, 6—3, 6—4, 6—3.

Second round—Adams defeated Marasigan, 6—1, 7—9, 7—5.

Third round—Crowley defeated Nattinger, 6—1, 6—4.

Schedule of matches today:

SINGLES.

10 a. m.—Johnson vs. Bigger, McLaughlin vs. Parten, McKinlay vs. Boozer, Sugerman vs. Carlstrom, Howard vs. Lynch, Andrews vs. Baldwin.

11 a. m.—Benzion vs. Fischer, McKiernan vs. Holbrook, Farley vs. Benson, Wylie vs. Hubbell.

DOUBLES.

Semi-final match—Kenfield and Oelsner vs. Wylie and Carver, 10 a. m.

Final match—Winner of morning's semi-final vs. Miller and Hubbell, 1 p. m.

STECHER'S FAME IN MAT SPORT DUE TO ONE HOLD

Nebraska Farmer Boy Becomes Marvel of Game with Scissors Grip.

BY RAY C. PEARSON.

Joe Stecher, the Dodge, Neb., wrestler, is head, shoulders, and scissors above everybody else in the mat game. That much was demonstrated to the satisfaction of everybody recently in Chicago when the fellow they call a marvel polished off Charlie Cutler of Chicago for two falls in 27:04. It wasn't so much the fact that the Nebraska farmer defeated the Chicago man as it was the speed with which he accomplished the trick under conditions which in advance pointed to a long drawn out contest.

When Cutler entered the arena he had just one purpose in mind, and that was to make his struggle on the defensive. He hoped by adopting these tactics to tire Stecher. To battle on the defensive was just about the best policy that Charlie could adopt. By so doing he had an outside chance of making the contest a long one, but that was his only chance, for in the end the farmer would have beaten him regardless of the methods he used.

Youth Favors Stecher.

But if Cutler had any idea that roughing it on defense would tire his opponent and favor his own chances he had another guess coming, for Stecher is powerful, has stamina, and, of greater advantage than all, he has youth. As a matter of fact, to prolong the contest would have tired the Chicago man more than his opponent.

With his famous scissors, formed by a pair of powerful legs, Stecher has carved his name in the hall of wrestling fame. It is a safe and sane statement to say that the Nebraskan can crush to defeat any man on whose body he can lock his strong legs. It also can be said without much fear of the necessity of contradiction that Stecher is a one hold wrestler, and that grip is the scissors. Take this hold away from the westerner and he is cut down to an equal basis with other heavyweight wrestlers.

Not Sharp Without Scissors?

There are some who know the mat game who go so far as to say that without the scissors Stecher would be easy picking for a number of wrestlers, but that has to be proved, so there is no use terming a man mediocre by saying "If he didn't have the scissors." Stecher is the heavyweight champion of today, for there is no Frank Gotch standing in his path.

To call a man a one hold man is not casting discredit on him, for the Nebraskan is a credit to the sport in which he has entered. He is a clean cut, intelligent farm boy. He was mentally capable of discovering the scissors which has brought him to the front, and he deserves praise for that. Talking with him a few days ago, he showed plainly that the success he has achieved has not spoiled him in the least. He is a big, good natured, likable kid, minus the ego which so frequently appears in an athlete in any line of sport who ascends the top rung of the ladder.

How the Scissors Clip.

There are many fans who possibly are not fully informed what the scissors hold really is and what its effects are on the man on whom it is locked. As used by Stecher it is a rib crushing, torture producing grip from which there is no escape. Charlie Cutler will vouch for this. The Nebraskan has perfected it to an extent that he can clamp it on from almost any position. In fact, he might be nearly on his own shoulders and still put it on and defeat his opponent. Stecher simply swings his long legs around the body of his foe, locks his ankles together, brings an inward pressure on his powerful knees, and if his opponent does not cry for help the victim is quickly rolled over on his back in defeat. Stecher makes his hold effective by forcing his knees into the midsection of an opponent, just below the lower and short ribs. As an accessory he applies a half nelson.

The effect of this scissors is most painful. Cutler, around Chicago three days after his match with Stecher, was still suffering fron. the scissors attack. It is worth mentioning here that Stecher applied the grip only twice. The first time Cutler rolled over on his back. The second time Stecher applied it Cutler's face pointed to the canvas, and in the viselike grip Charlie could not turn his shoulders to the mat. He simply was forced to give up and concede the fall to end his own suffering.

Cutler Admits Soreness.

Three days after the match Cutler had this to say about Stecher and his scissors:

"I have the sorest ribs in the world. That fellow crushed those knees into my sides so hard I thought something would crack. And it makes a fellow sick, too. He can beat anybody in the world."

There are many people talking about a match between Stecher and Gotch. Since the Humboldt (Ia.) farmer broke his ankle and announced his retirement from the game there is no chance of this match ever taking place. However, this does not prevent the fans from trying to compare the two. Many believe that Gotch would beat the Nebraskan. The only way this question could be answered would be by a meeting of the pair, but it is pretty certain that if Stecher could get his scissors on Gotch he would defeat him. It would be up to Gotch to prevent Joe from locking his legs around him. On the other hand, Gotch has that famous old toe hold to fall back on. If he got that on Stecher it would mean defeat for the Nebraskan.

"TRIBUNE" DECISIONS

At New York—Fred Gilmore beat Kid Alberts (10).

At Field Headquarters American Punitive Expedition, Mexico—Rufe Williams knocked out Joe Blackburn (8).

At St. Louis—Sailor Jarabek beat Jack Torres (12).

EIGHTH WIFE SUES M'COY.

New York, Dec. 9.—Kid McCoy [Norman Selby] is being sued for divorce again. Mrs. Edith Valentine Selby, eighth wife of the former pugilist, filed suit today in Supreme court. The name of the co-respondent is not revealed, but the evidence is said to be based upon a sensational raid upon McCoy's apartments in the Hotel Seville a couple of days ago. The young woman in the case is said to be well known to Broadway.

HAMILTON CLUB NATATORS BEAT ST. LOUIS SQUAD

BY KEENE GARDINER.

In a club members' meet, featured by the closest kind of competition, the Seals of the Hamilton club defeated the Whales of the Missouri Athletic association of St. Louis yesterday in the first intercity swimming meet ever staged between representative organizations. The score was 32 to 23, but the result was in doubt until the final events, the relay and water basketball game, were decided.

Each team alternated in taking the lead, but the Hamilton club quartet, by winning the 160 yard relay race, clinched the honors. If the locals had not captured this event they would have been beaten, as the visitors came along and won the water basketball game in decisive fashion, 10 to 0.

Dr. Swatek Proves Star.

To Dr. E. P. Swatek of the Hamilton club went the honor of winning the greatest number of points. A few years back Dr. Swatek was looked upon as one of the greatest fancy and high divers who ever pulled on a suit. He won the fancy diving event from the low board, then came back and captured the fifty yard back stroke after a close race with his teammate, Cox. This gave him an individual total of ten points.

Forty members of the Missouri A. A. came to Chicago to root for their team. They were met by members of the Hamilton club, and, despite weather conditions, were taken for an auto ride over the boulevards. Then they were entertained at luncheon at the South Shore Country club and had dinner at the Hamilton club. After the meet a banquet was held at the Hamilton club. A return meet will be held at St. Louis in the near future.

UNIVERSAL CODE FOR YACHTSMEN SAVED FOR YEAR

BY JOHN G. DE LONG.

Champions of universal rules, adopted several years ago by the Lake Michigan Yachting association in the hope of building up special classes of racing boats, barely saved their pet formula from walking the plank when the parent sailing body of Lake Michigan held its annual meeting at the Sherman hotel yesterday.

Following a stormy session that tossed the delegates from ten clubs into the breakers of nautical oratory the pilots of the big controlling organization poured oil on the troubled waters and steered the craft into Harmony harbor. After giving the universal rules a thorough tryout for four seasons it was decided to go back to the old Seawanhaka rules that up to 1912 had been in force in all of the races held hereabouts since Judge Kremer discovered yachting in the year 1. In the future boats of classes P and R, which have been conducting a corner in prizes, will be forced either to race among themselves or compete under heavy handicaps in the leading regattas.

McClurg Named President.

The clubs represented at the meeting were the Chicago, Jackson Park, Lincoln Park, Evanston, White Lake, Macatawa Bay, Milwaukee, Steel Mills, and South Shore Yacht clubs. The South Shore organization, which is located in Milwaukee, was admitted to membership yesterday and made the third Cream city club in the L. M. Y. A. The election of officers resulted as follows:

President—Ogden T. McClurg, Lincoln Park Y. C.

Secretary—Charles Scates, Macatawa Bay Y. C.

Treasurer—Frank B. Wever, Columbia Y. C.

Delegates to Yacht Racing union—F. L. Porter, Lincoln Park Y. C.; Charles Scates, Macatawa Bay Y. C.; Fred T. Roberts, Chicago Y. C.

New Class B Boat.

A new Class B boat will enter the lists next season, according to an announcement made after the meeting. The new craft, which has been designed by John Alden of Boston, for Harry Wagner of Milwaukee, will fly the colors of the South Shore Yacht club and will compete against the Chicago boats in the leading 1917 races.

Your Dog Is Deprived of Nature's Remedies

The city dog is shut off from certain remedies that preserve and improve his health. Not being allowed to roam at will he misses the health-regulating action and liberty which dogs in open places enjoy.

Vermilax Worm Remedy is the best known single substitute for the laxatives and tonics that your pet would get from Nature if he could.

Vermilax Worm Remedy will also quickly rid any dog of worms, the most dangerous single menace to either the city or the country dog's health. Gently but thoroughly it cleanses his whole system, enabling his own recuperative powers to work unhampered. Famous breeders, dog-exhibitors, sledge-drivers in Alaska and keepers of Blue Ribbon kennels swear by it as the greatest tonic and conditioner known, and use it regularly to keep their charges healthy.

These remedies are sold by Buck & Rayner's six stores; Public Drug Co., and other druggists. Also for sale at Von Lengerke & Antoine's, Kaempfer's Bird Store and Atlantic & Pacific Bird Store. Wholesale Distributors, Fuller-Morrisson Company.

Car Efficiency All Winter!

ARE you going to be hampered by a motor car that you cannot use, or one which at best will give you faulty, imperfect service in cold weather? There is no need for you to submit to such a handicap.

Motor science has perfected a car that will serve you unfailingly, dependably, and in comfort, winter as well as summer. The eight-cylinder, light-weight Model 44 Oldsmobile is this car. Made in four styles—two of which are illustrated in this announcement.

The powerful, eight-cylinder motor, coupled with light weight, carries you resistlessly through deepest mud or snowdrift; the reason—a power impulse to every five inches of car travel, and a weight less than 2800 pounds. Gear shifting is reduced to the minimum.

HOTEL PROJECT ON SOUTH SIDE WEEK'S LEADER

Manufacturing and Apartment Property Figure Large in the Market.

Totals	226	$2,144,750
Same wk. last yr.	203	4,869,750

PROBABLY the most important single feature of the week's real estate market, which was of a generally encouraging character, was the announcement of the plans for another big high grade fireproof hotel in the Jackson park district, overlooking the lake, although the several big deals in manufacturing property, the most of them involving extensive improvements, constituted a most important feature of the market, as it did during the previous week.

These big hotel and apartment projects, together with the many important transactions in manufacturing property, have been the distinct feature of the market during the last several weeks, and while some of them are understood to have fallen by the roadside, or to have made so little progress as to be much in the air as yet, still the majority of them seem to be assured.

This seems to be the case with reference to the two proposed big buildings in the immediate vicinity of Jackson park and the lake and their erection will tend to emphasize the growing prominence of this district, which, with the project of the Chicago plan commission for the proposed South Shore drive, lagoon, motor speedway, etc., will make it one of the most beautiful parts of Chicago.

Located on "Shedd Tract."

The proposed hotel will be located on the block bounded by the lake on the east, Fifty-fifth street on the north, Everett avenue on the west and extending to within 220 feet of the north line of Jackson park. The property, which long has been known as the "Shedd tract," has a frontage of 374 feet on Everett avenue and extends along Fifty-fifth street for a distance of 469 feet to the line established between the South Park commissioners and the Shedds. It has been sold by William Herbert Johnson of Glencoe to the Shoreham Hotel company and Paul A. Webdling.

The property was acquired by Mr. Johnson from the Shedds about a year ago for a reported consideration of $180,000. The consideration in the present transaction is not disclosed, but it is understood to have given Mr. Johnson an exceedingly handsome profit. Richard Ostenreider, secretary of the Schoenhofen Brewing company, is said to be heading the enterprise.

Nine Story Hotel Planned.

The immediate improvement of the part of the property fronting on the lake will be made by the erection of a nine story fireproof extra high grade hotel of an attractive design and with an exterior finish of light colored brick with terra cotta trim. The plans, which have been designed by Wheelock & Shank, provide for all conveniences and luxuries which go with the most up to date buildings of this character.

The arrangement of the lounge, ball room and dining room, all on the first floor, are along unique lines. To the west and south of the hotel the grounds will be laid out in elaborate terraces and Italian gardens. In connection with the construction, Wollenberger & Co. have underwritten a serial bond issue loan of $600,000, bearing 6 per cent interest. McGuire & Orr were the brokers in the deal, while the legal details were attended to by Levinson & Hoffman.

Big Deal on North Shore.

Outside of the several transactions in manufacturing property the most important deal of the week was the sale of the fifty-five acre tract north of Lake Bluff to "Shoreacres," a corporation representing the new country and golf club just north of Lake Bluff.

The downtown district, which has been much in evidence during the last few weeks, was without a representation in the week's business. There is said to be a big State street deal on, however, which probably will be closed in the comparatively near future.

There was a fair run of outside business and apartment property, although there were no transactions of any particular magnitude. There was, too, an important sale of high class residential vacant on Wellington street near the Lake Shore drive in the exclusive residential district north of Lincoln park. The purchaser was J. Ogden Armour and he is said to have paid in the neighborhood of $450 a front foot for the property.

BUYS SHERIDAN ROAD HOME.

R. C. Haskins, president of the International Harvester Company of America, has sold to Bernhard Ulrich of the Continental Machine and Foundry company the three story brick and stone residence at 7350 Sheridan road for an expressed consideration of $35,000, subject to a purchase money mortgage of [illegible]. The property comprises the northwest corner of Sherwin avenue, [illegible] feet. O. L. Brockett of Gordon [illegible] & Co. represented the seller and [illegible] Walker represented the purchaser.

FEW BIG DEALS IN APARTMENTS

Volume of Trading Fairly Large—$95,500 Sale on South Side Leads.

While there was in the aggregate a good sized movement of apartment house property during the week, there were comparatively few transactions of any magnitude. In one of the most important deals reported Roswell G. Ackley sold to Frank L. and Louisa W. Smith the thirty flat building at 1400-10 East Sixty-third place for a reported consideration of $95,500, subject to $62,000.

In payment for the equity Mr. Ackley took the six flat building at 6439-41 Kimbark avenue at $32,000, subject to $16,500; the brick residence at 6638 Kenwood avenue, and the Old Orchard farm, a half mile east of the Grand Beach summer resort in Michigan. Byron M. Hopkins & Sons represented all the parties.

Fred Becklenberg has sold to Joseph O. Costa the new fifteen apartment building of four and five rooms on 50x156 feet at the northeast corner of Lakeside terrace and Howard street, consideration nominal, but said to be about $100,000, subject to $50,000 incumbrance. The property at 936 Lafayette street, 32x110 feet, valued at $16,000, and a row of stores on Milwaukee avenue, near Emily street, valued at $20,000, were given in part payment.

Grand Boulevard Corner Sold.

The nine flat building, 160x122 feet, southwest corner Grand boulevard and Thirty-eighth street, was sold by L. F. Hammel of the Loeb-Hammel Realty company to W. F. Tempel for a reported about $50,000, subject to $25,000. First conveyed by A. J. Franks to Mr. Hammel. A 400 acre Wisconsin farm was given in part payment. The Loeb-Hammel company, brokers.

Jacob Lowenstine has sold to William A. and Amelia L. Magee the fifteen flat southwest corner Sixty-second street and Eberhart avenue, 57x125 feet, for a reported $44,050, business vacant at Chicago and North Humphrey avenues, and flat property at 508-10 North Humphrey being given in part payment. Mark Levy & Bro. represented the seller and T. J. Lunney and J. E. Groarkin the Magees.

The flat property in Lincoln street, 192 feet north of Montrose boulevard, with 100x152 feet, west front, has been conveyed by G. A. Fry to Martin M. Owen, consideration nominal, subject to $60,000.

Sunnyside Avenue Corner Sold.

The twelve flat on 68½x125 feet at the southeast corner of Sunnyside and Campbell avenues was sold by John H. Birren to Ernest Chaney for a reported $36,000, subject to $13,000, three clear pieces of vacant being given for the equity. F. S. Paffrath & Co., brokers.

E. M. Bertha has sold to H. S. Flaxman the six flat, 50x161 feet, at 6133-35 Prairie avenue for a reported $30,000, subject to $16,000, a $10,000 store building at Fifty-first and Loomis streets being given in part payment. George W. Stewart, broker.

Joseph J. Miller sold to C. J. Krause the twelve flat at the northwest corner of Sixty-sixth street and Vernon avenue for a reported $40,000, subject to $25,000, the business property at 2144 Twelfth street and at the northwest corner of Long avenue and Byron street being given in part payment. Krause, Beak & Co., brokers.

Other Sales of Week.

Among other flat sales of the week were the following:

The property southwest corner Cullom and Lamon avenues, 60x125 feet, north front, Montgomery Smith to Herbert J. Moore, the consideration being nominal, subject to $33,500.

The twelve flat on 58x150 feet, southeast corner of Fifty-third street and Kenwood avenue, C. B. Eggleston to Alfred Guthman, consideration nominal, subject to $25,000.

John McInnis, builder, to E. J. and O. F. Blakely, new six flat at 6131-33 Michigan avenue, at reported $24,000, subject to $15,000. M. Lorian of W. K. Young & Bro., broker.

I. C. PURCHASES TRACT.

Record has been made of the purchase by the Illinois Central Railroad company from F. B. Daniels et al., trustees of the Pullman Land association, of a tract of a trifle over seventeen acres in South Park avenue, 267 feet south of Ninety-ninth street, for a stated consideration of $39,116. The property extends from the right of way of the road to South Park avenue, and has been added to the site of the Burnside shops of the company.

BUILDINGS THAT FIGURE IN REALTY NEWS

An unusually attractive new Evanston residence, which sold recently, is the Dutch colonial home erected by Alton D. Orvis at 945 Sheridan road, after plans by E. Norman Brydges. It was sold to R. B. Upham, vice president of the Peoples Trust and Savings bank, for $27,500. The lot fronts sixty-eight feet on Sheridan road and 165 feet on Lee street. It has massive Doric columns at the tiled entrance, a central hall on either side of which is a large living room and dining room, two solariums, two sleeping porches, six bedrooms, and four tiled baths.

An attractive type of the business buildings going up in the outlying districts is the three story building being erected by Milton H. Callner on Kedzie avenue, south of Lawrence avenue. It occupies a lot 75x125 feet, contains four stores, eight flats, and four offices.

OUTSIDE BUSINESS SITES MAKE A POOR SHOWING.

There was not much doing of an important character in outside business property.

In an interesting deal in west side business property Irene Burgraeve has sold to Lawrence Murphy the property at the northeast corner of Cicero avenue and Van Buren street, lot 82x100 feet, improved with a three story building containing five stores and eight flats, for a reported consideration of $40,000, subject to an incumbrance of $16,500. The purchaser conveyed in part payment two improved and two vacant properties. Breckenridge & Co. represented both parties.

Another important deal in west side business property was the sale by Frank A. Rockhold to Randall Newman of the property at the northeast corner of Twenty-sixth street and Kedzie avenue, 126 feet front on Twenty-sixth street and 50 on Kedzie, improved with a two story brick building containing six stores, a billiard hall, and a flat, for a reported consideration of $50,000, subject to an incumbrance of $35,000.

In part payment the purchaser conveyed the property at 5522 South Halsted street, lot 25x125 feet, with three story building containing one store and two flats, at a valuation of $13,500. Gordon, Lapin & Co. represented all parties.

An interesting transaction in Lincoln avenue business property is the purchase by Ernest H. Knoop of E. H. Knoop & Co., department store, from D. G. O'Connell, of the property at the northwest corner of North avenue and Vine street, 51x125 feet, with a three story building, for $60,500. The purchase will give Knoop & Co. a store frontage of 130 feet.

TORRENS SYSTEM FILING.

Application was made for initial registration under the Torrens system of the tract of 160 acres between Twenty-second street, the B. & O. C. T. R. R., Ridgeland and Harlem avenues, recently acquired by Biscoe Hindman from Ward T. Huston, who made the application for registration. A valuation of $360,000 was given it and it will be subdivided into 1,000 lots and placed on the market.

Net Earnings, 25%

Am farming extensively in northern Colorado and last year earned 25% on my investment. Can furnish tractors, horses, implements, complete equipment, sufficient to farm ten thousand acres more.

I am not a land agent, but have complete farming organization. I know where a good tract of cheap land can be had near mine. If you will buy it, I will farm it and manage, on shares.

If interested, write me today. Now is the time to plan for Spring breaking, for beans and potatoes, to be followed with winter wheat.

V. H. SURGHNOR NOMINATED FOR REALTY BOARD'S HEAD.

Valentine H. Surghnor, one of the veteran members of the Chicago real estate board, heads the regular ticket to be voted on at the annual election of the board Dec. 20, and, as there is no talk of any opposition ticket, he undoubtedly will be the next president of the organization.

Mr. Surghnor has been a member of the board twenty-nine years, and, with the exception of secretary and treasurer, has held every elective position on the board.

Other leading nominations were: Walter S. Ross, vice president; Hyde W. Perce, secretary, who was honored by a renomination; Nelson W. Lampert, treasurer. Board of directors for three years, Edward J. Scott. Valuation committee, advisory board for three years, Samuel H. Hodge. Subcommittee A, Robert White; subcommittee B, Lewis M. Smith; subcommittee C, Ernest H. Lyons; subcommittee D, Burtt B. Clover.

HIGH GRADE HOME SITES ON NORTH SHORE BOUGHT.

There were several transactions of high class residential vacant on the north side reported during the week. In one J. Ogden Armour added to his holding at Lake Shore drive and Wellington street by the purchase from Boetius H. Sullivan, son of Roger C. Sullivan, of 100 feet south front on Wellington street, with a depth of 165 feet, being 200 feet west of Lincoln park, the consideration being withheld.

The property is understood to have been held at between $400 and $450 a front foot. The purchase gives Mr. Armour 250 feet on the drive and 300 feet on Wellington street. It is in the new restricted residence district north of Lincoln park. Callistus S. Ennis & Co. were the brokers.

Another was the purchase by Alonzo C. Mather, president of the Mather Stock Car company, from the Chicago Title and Trust company, trustee, of 100 feet of vacant on the east side of Sheridan road, 200 feet north of Ardmore street, in Edgewater, extending back to the lake, with riparian rights.

The consideration is withheld, but the property is said to have been held at $30,000. It is said Mr. Mather plans to improve with a handsome residence. McGuire & Orr represented the seller and E. C. Waller Jr. the purchaser.

The property at the southwest corner of Pine Grove avenue and Surf street, 148x164 feet, has been conveyed by Francis Ryan to Maurice L. Blatt for a stated consideration of $50,000, subject to $20,000 incumbrance.

LAST BANQUET OF THE YEAR.

Thursday's weekly luncheon of the Chicago real estate board at the Hotel La Salle was the last of the year and the last under President Paul Steinbrecher's administration. All addresses at the fall luncheons have been of an unusually interesting character, the speakers being leaders in the various business activities of which they were representatives.

Wanted—Copy-Writer

Experienced copy-writer wanted by one of Chicago's leading advertising agencies—a man who has had automobile accessory as well as agricultural copy experience. Good salary, splendid surroundings and fine opportunity for high grade man; 30 to 40 years of age preferred.

ADDRESS T K 154, TRIBUNE

FACTORY SITES SHOW ACTIVITY; THREE BIG SALES

Brokers Are Encouraged by the Demand for Manufacturing Property.

There was much activity in manufacturing property again last week, the business in this field being represented by several transactions of unusual interest. It is a significant and encouraging feature of the market.

Probably the most important was the announcement that the W. F. Hall Printing company has closed the purchase of eight parcels on West Chicago avenue, from different sellers, which gives the company the ownership of the entire block bounded by Chicago avenue and Kingsbury street, Superior and Townsend streets, having a frontage of 340 feet on the avenue, with a depth of 130 feet, comprising 44,200 square feet, for which $285,000 was paid, which is at the rate of about $6.50 a square feet.

Plan Big Building.

It is the purpose of the firm, which is said to be the largest commercial printing plant, in point of production, in this country, to erect upon the ground acquired a seven story and basement mill constructed building, the plans for which are being prepared by Glaver & Dinkelberg.

It will be similar to the building now on the Superior street frontage, except that the ground floor of the Chicago avenue frontage will be devoted to stores. The cost is placed at $750,000. The present three and six story buildings on the property will be wrecked.

S. C. Iverson of Hibbard Porter & Bro. represented all the parties. The legal details were attended to by Frederick Secord of Gann & Peaks.

Old Iron Works Plant Sold.

The old Gates iron works plant on the north branch, owned by the Allis-Chalmers Manufacturing company, has been sold for a price understood to be $220,000. The northwestern half, improved with a large building, has been purchased by the Hanna Engineering works, of which Philetus W. Gates is president. Mr. Gates was the founder of the Gates Iron works and constructed the building to which he is now returning.

The Hanna Engineering works, manufacturers of special machinery and tools, will occupy the property. It will be recalled that the company last year sold its present works on the north branch.

The south half of the property has been purchased by John Miller & Co. and the Chicago Tanning company. John Miller & Co. are dealers in hides and operate the Chicago Tanning company.

The entire plot comprises 220,000 square feet. It faces Elston avenue, running from Redfield street to the Bloomingdale line of the St. Paul railway and extends back to the Chicago river and the holdings of the Illinois Steel company. John Miller & Co. were represented by Mr. Rosenheim of J. J. Harrington & Co. John C. Fetzer is exclusive agent for the Allis-Chalmers company.

Deal on West Side.

An interesting deal in west side manufacturing property was the purchase by the Grasselli Chemical company of Cleveland, O., of a tract of 63,000 square feet fronting north on Canalport avenue, extending from Peoria street to the Burlington tracks on Sangamon street, with a frontage of 376 feet on Canalport avenue, 295 feet on Peoria street, 256 feet on the south line, and 130 feet on the Burlington right of way.

The property was purchased from the Reder Foundry company, and while a nominal consideration was given, the property has been held at $90,000, it is said. The property is partly improved with one and three story foundry buildings, which were given little value in the transaction.

After extending a new switch track into the property and erecting new buildings, the Grasselli company will occupy the premises as a warehouse and distributing center for its Chicago business. A. J. Montague & Son represented the sellers and Willis & Frankenstein the purchasing company.

The Jefferson Ice company has purchased from C. O. Boren the property in Bickerdike street, 142 feet north of Grand avenue, 50x180 feet, west front, and 26x180 feet adjoining, improved with three or four buildings, comprising an artificial ice plant, consideration nominal, subject to an incumbrance aggregating about $49,000.

Leases and Loans.

SEVERAL unusually interesting leases were reported during the week, covering building space in the downtown as well as outlying districts. The downtown lease involves the erection by the Laflin estate of a new building at 14-16 West Randolph street, which has been leased to the El Mar Cafeteria company, composed of Chicago business men.

It will occupy the lot 40x180 feet, south front, will be one story with balcony and twenty-three foot ceilings on Randolph front, while the kitchen will be in the third floor of building on rear of lot. It is expected to set a new standard in a cafeteria way, and if the success its promoters anticipate, will be the first of a series to be located in several other large cities. The lease, which was negotiated by Edgar A. Ranson, manager of the Laflin estate, is for twenty years and provides for a net annual rental of about $20,000. The building will cost about $100,000.

Two important leases were reported in the central manufacturing district by which the B. F. Goodrich company has taken about [illegible]5,000 square feet in the building being erected on Thirty-ninth street, between Canal street and Normal avenue, for the Chicago Junction Terminal Building company, previously mentioned, while the Beckley-Ralston company, wholesale dealers in automobile accessories, has taken 50,000 square feet.

The Goodrich company will use the space for warehousing all its products, particularly tires, and distributing direct from Chicago to all its western branch houses. The term rent of the building to be occupied by the Goodrich company, Beckley-Ralston company and the Atlantic and Pacific Tea company is said to approximate $1,000,000, or $40,000 a year.

J. J. Harrington & Co. have leased for W. H. Winslow and F. A. Winslow and E. S. Fechheimer the second and third floors in the building at 1323-33 Carroll avenue to the Illinois Paper Box company for ten years at a term rent of $54,650, the lessee company to take possession when proposed improvements are completed.

The Walter M. Lowney company of Boston has leased through the same brokers the three story building now occupied by them at 1222-26 South Wabash avenue to the Howe Scale company for seven and one-half years at a term rent of $56,250.

The Centaur company, distributors of the Jeffery car, has leased from the Peck estate a one story building to be erected at the northwest corner of Twenty-third street and Michigan avenue for a term rent of $40,000. J. J. Harrington & Co., who were the brokers, also leased for Ferdinand Peck Jr. a one story building to be erected at 2240-42 South Michigan avenue to the Roamer Automobile company for a term rent of about $24,000.

White & Tabor have leased for Albert Dickinson to the Columbia Graphophone company the four story building, 75x120 feet, at 12-22 South Peoria street, for a term rent of $30,000; also for the Madison trust agreement to Periolat Bros. the store and basement at 331 West Madison street for a term rent of $28,000.

The Northwestern Mutual Life Insurance company has made two loans of $90,000 and $65,000 to the Catholic bishop of Chicago, and, while the terms are not given, it is understood both were at 5 per cent. The $90,000 loan is secured by the property at the northeast corner of Glenwood and Loyola avenues, 159x290 feet, while the $65,000 loan is secured by the property at the northeast corner of Leamington avenue and Jackson street, 132x531 feet.

G. M. REYNOLDS TO SPEAK AT REALTY BOARD BANQUET.

An interesting announcement in connection with the ninth annual banquet of the Cook county real estate board, to be held in the gold room of the Congress hotel Tuesday night, is that George M. Reynolds, president of the Continental and Commercial National bank is to be one of the speakers. While his topic is not announced, it is understood he will talk on the financial situation.

Other speakers will be Harry Pratt Judson, president of the University of Chicago; John Temple Graves, and Robert E. L. Brooks, retiring president of the board. Levy Mayer will act as toastmaster.

An unusually large attendance is promised. The members of the banquet committee are Mark Levy, chairman; H. T. Davis, A. Wahl, A. C. Rathje, C. T. A. Anderson, W. H. Loehde, C. D. Goodman, P. Foote, A. S. Ruud, A. C. Lueder, C. S. Adelman, P. C. Loeber, J. M. Pace, F. L. Dean, R. E. L. Brooks, J. W. Hedenberg, C. F. Durland, C. Ringer.

COUNTRY CLUB BUYS MORE LAND ON NORTH SHORE

"Shoreacres" Gets Tract Adjoining Old Holding—Hartman Purchases a Home.

Two particularly interesting transactions were reported in north shore property, one of which was the purchase of fifty-five acres by "Shoreacres," a corporation representing the new country and golf club of which Stanley Field is president, whose home will be just north of Lake Bluff. The purchase was made from the Chicago Real Estate Investment association, a syndicate represented by McGuire & Orr. About two weeks ago the club, under the name of the Lakewoods club, acquired 100 acres on the lake as the site for the club.

The fifty-five acres just acquired adjoins this on the north, and, while no consideration is mentioned, it is said the property, as well as the 100 acres, was held at $3,500 an acre, making the transaction one of the largest on the north shore.

Reason for Changing Name.

One of the reasons for the change from "Lakewoods club" to "Shoreacres" was the fact there already exists a golf club bearing a similar name. It is stated the club still holds an option on twenty additional acres which it may acquire when it begins the work of laying out the grounds.

This will leave eighty acres in the hands of the syndicate owning "Lakewoods," with a half mile of lake frontage, which will be available for country homes adjoining the club grounds. It is claimed the clubhouse and the general appointments of the grounds will be the finest of their kind in the country.

The membership is restricted to 200, other leading officers besides Mr. Field being: Alfred L. Baker, Samuel Insull, and Harold F. McCormick, vice presidents; Donald W. Ryerson, secretary; Alfred E. Hamill, treasurer.

Immediately south of the club are the holdings of the Blair family, Howard Linn, Reuben H. Donnelley, Robert H. McElwee, and Edgar H. Uihlein. The deal was negotiated by McGuire & Orr, representing the syndicate, and John Griffity of Lake Forest, representing the club.

Hartman Buys Home.

The handsome country home of M. W. Kozminski at Highland Park, who for many years was the Chicago agent of the French line of steamers, and who recently moved to New York, has been purchased by Leon H. Hartman, secretary of the Hartman Furniture and Carpet company. The property, which is on Sheridan road, in the south part of Highland Park, is one of the most attractive homes on the north shore. The grounds comprise about five acres, extending back 760 feet, with a ravine in the rear and with a frontage of about 300 feet on Sheridan road.

The house is an unusually attractive two story frame, colonial style, and contains about fourteen rooms with seven bathrooms. It was designed by Robert Seyfarth, the interior being most attractively finished. It was erected about five years ago. The consideration is withheld, but the property is said to have been valued at $50,000. Murray & Terry represented both parties to the transaction.

SHORTS CAUSE ACUTE RALLY IN WHEAT MARKET

Early Selling Is Overdone, and in Attempts to Cover Prices Are Bid Sharply Higher.

Shorts bid up wheat prices sharply in the closing half hour yesterday, the market recovering from an early spell of weakness. Leading spots were at net advances of 2@2⅝c, with May relatively strongest. Prices at the finish were at best levels of the day and were 4@5c higher than the early low points. Shorts attempted to take profits on the break, but found the offerings limited on the way up and were also forced to compete with fairly good commission buying. Numerous stop-loss orders were encountered on the advance and prices moved up rapidly in the absence of any material selling pressure.

It was apparent that the selling movement at the outset had completed the liquidation by longs, and the bears became a little bit too enthusiastic. Export news was not encouraging, in fact, outside of reporting a demand from Greece for 540,000 bu. wheat, the seaboard claimed nothing. The day's clearances, however, were liberal at 1,157,000 bu and compared with 2,590,000 bu a year ago.

Look for Lighter Receipts.

There is a disposition to look for lighter receipts of wheat at the primary markets in the near future, as farmers are not selling much at the prices, and farm stocks are smaller than usual at this date. However, the shipping business is restricted by the railroad congestion and vessel scarcity, and a shrinkage in receipts would not be felt as keenly as though the export outlet were big. Bullish sentiment has been pretty thoroughly cooled by the growing agitation over the food question and by the submarine activities.

Liverpool spot wheat was unchanged with the cargo market easy. Broomhall says larger shipments of wheat are expected shortly from both America and Australia. Primary receipts for the week were 8,612,000 bu, against 18,411,000 bu a year ago. Winnipeg received 7,515 cars of wheat this week, against 9,541 last year.

Corn Develops Strength.

Corn also rallied in the latter part of the session, in fact, commenced to show strength before wheat did. Closing prices were at gains of 1¼@2c for the day. The market was a little lower early, in sympathy with the decline in wheat, but buying by some of the prominent cash interests soon turned values upward. Later the shorts became aggressive buyers and prices moved up quickly. Shipping advices were bearish and sales here yesterday were only 20,000 bu. Liverpool spot corn was ½d higher and the parcel market was strong.

Increased receipts of corn are looked for next week, following reports that western roads have received many empty cars. Country elevators are filled with corn. Cash corn was steady to ½c lower. Local receipts this week were 2,962,000 bu, while 1,746,000 bu were shipped. Seaboard clearances were only 2,000 bu. Primary receipts for the week totaled 7,698,000 bu, against 5,832,000 bu a year ago.

Oats Also Finish Higher.

Oats followed the movement of wheat and corn and finished ½@¾c higher. Shorts covered freely toward the last, while a fair commission house demand was noted earlier in the day. Trade in general was light. Clearances from the seaboard were 47,000 bu. Local receipts of oats this week were 2,816,000 bu, while 2,151,000 bu were shipped. Primary markets received 5,266,000 bu oats this week, against 6,141,000 bu a year ago.

Provisions closed with substantial gains, meeting with better support than for some time. Higher prices for hogs at the yards and the late strength in grains also helped the market. There was buying by packing interests, mainly of nearby lard futures and May ribs, while offerings were moderate. Western markets received 852,000 hogs this week, against 794,000 last week and 850,000 a year ago. Trade in cash produce reported as quiet. Local shipments of meats this week totaled 21,016,000 lbs, compared with 16,690,000 lbs a year ago, while lard shipments were 11,638,000 lbs, against 7,050,000 lbs a year ago.

Rye Prices Lower.

Rye was 1@2c lower. No. 2 sold at $1.45@1.46, No. 3 $1.40@1.42½, and No. 4 $1.38. Receipts were 12 cars.

Barley ruled firm. Malting was quoted $1.02@1.23 and sold $1.03@1.23; feed and mixing quotable 90c@$1.00, with sales at 95c; screenings were quoted 50@90c and skimmings 65@70c, former selling at 55@72c. Receipts, 50 cars.

Timothy seed was firm. March, $5.90 bid and $6.20 asked; cash lots sold $4.75@5.00. Clover seed held steady, with cash lots quoted $12.00@17.50.

Flax closed 1½c higher, with cash quoted $2.85½@2.91½; Minneapolis was 1½c, Duluth 1½@2c, and Winnipeg 2¼@2½c higher respectively.

COFFEE.

NEW YORK, Dec. 9.—COFFEE—The market for futures was less active today and fluctuations were correspondingly narrow. There was some scattered covering, while outside long interest, disturbed by the unsettled ruling of other markets, appeared to have been pretty well liquidated on the moderate decline of yesterday. The opening was unchanged to 1 point higher in consequence, but demand was by no means active and prices sagged off slightly during the morning, with May selling at 8.34c and July at 8.50c. The close was net 4 points lower to 1 point higher. Sales, 10,500 bags. December, 7.93c; January, 8.01c; February, 8.09c; March, 8.19c; April, 8.26c; May, 8.32c; June, 8.41c; July, 8.49c; August, 8.55c; September, 8.60c; October, 8.67c; November, 8.75c. Spot coffee quiet; Rio 7's, 9¼c; Santos 4's, 10⅝c. Few fresh offers were reported in the cost and freight market, but the quotations received ranged from 9⅞@10c for Santos 4's. London credits. Owing to the holiday there were no official cables from the primary markets.

NEWS AND GOSSIP OF BOARD OF TRADE

Most of the big advance in wheat prices yesterday was credited to shorts. Commission houses bought some wheat early, but later there was free commission house selling on the advance, while local bears oversold and were the leading buyers on the rally. The increased clearances of wheat and flour caused some buying, but conservative wheat traders were of the opinion the market was oversold and with the usual week end evening up, the market responded quickly to buying support. Foreign news does not show much change, and the question of tonnage to carry the grain is the main factor at present. If clearances should continue large for a week or so it would have much effect.

The cash trade here was slow, although some of the wheat that would grade contract was quoted at slightly higher prices relatively, which was not strange in view of the weakness in the December compared to the May. Low grades of spring wheat, however, sold at smaller discounts. Outside markets were about steady for cash wheat. December wheat here at the close was about 12c discount under the May. At the seaboard little business was reported except that the Greek government was said to be after some wheat. Local sales were only 5,000 bu.

Bartlett-Frazier had the following Nebraska reports: Columbus: Corn husking about finished with the yield better than expected, averaging nearly thirty bu. Quality good. Condition of wheat unsatisfactory, because of too much dry weather. Fairbury: Weather fine but not enough moisture. Wheat, however, is doing well. Corn husking about finished with an average yield. Fremont: When corn was 85c farmers marketed freely. The decline now retards delivery. Condition of wheat good.

Charles Sincere & Co. had the following from the central Illinois corn belt: "The weather is fine, enabling the farmers to do pretty much all their spring work, and this will be a factor in the corn movement later on. Whole trains of empty cars are moving south and receipts should soon show decided increase. Cribs and elevators filled the capacity."

Following applications for memberships on the board of trade were posted: Charles E. Comley, Chester M. Martin, A. R. Frank, Robert H. Livingston, Gerald F. Earle, and George C. Myers. Memberships were posted for transfer by Edward J. Tegge, Irving L. Corse, Carlos W. Wheatly, Charles C. Renshaw, and the estates of William J. Fyffe and John R. MacKenzie.

Local shorts were the principal buyers of corn and oats. Prices have had a big decline recently, and with the let up in the selling pressure the covering together with the strength in wheat caused a much firmer tone. Shipping conditions continue unfavorable, and there is little grain being sold at present for shipment. This makes the bulls in coarse grains a little timid.

A wheat cargo of 100,000 bu left South Chicago for Buffalo Friday night. An oats cargo of 450,000 bu sailed yesterday. A boat carrying 270,000 bu corn to Buffalo also left yesterday, and one leaving Milwaukee with 375,000 bu oats. This will practically end the shipping season as cargo insurance expires at midnight Dec. 12 or next Tuesday. All boats must clear before that date.

Liverpool cabled: "It is believed here the recent official action will result in more confidence in shipping circles and that tonnage will be increased. There is an increased demand for Manitoba and hard winter wheat."

Offerings of corn from the country were fair, and the demand was moderate. Prices for both corn and oats in the sample markets were steady to ½c lower. Shipping sales were 20,000 bu corn and 35,000 bu oats.

Argentine cables reported holders reserved. Freight rates have been advanced as tonnage has been diverted to other ports. The general outlook for corn is said to be unfavorable in spite of the recent rains.

Receipts inspected Saturday: Wheat, 49 cars; corn, 288 cars; oats, 104 cars; rye, 12 cars; barley, 50 cars. Hogs estimated for Monday, 68,000, and for all next week, 290,000.

Four board of trade memberships have been sold the last day or so at $7,350 net to the buyer. One sold earlier in the week at $7,400 net to the buyer.

Minneapolis wheat stocks increased 85,000 bu for one day. The total stock is now 11,483,000 bu, compared to 6,777,000 bu a year ago.

Weather conditions in Australia has turned fine after the recent rains.

Rosario wheat was 1½@2c up and corn 2¼@3c up.

COPPER GROUP AFFECTED.

New York, Dec. 9.—The stock market was somewhat unsettled today, mainly in consequence of the latest ruling of the British government placing severe restrictions upon imports of copper metal. Shares of that particular group were depressed 1 to 3½ points, American Smelting, Utah, and Anaconda being most affected.

Declines equally severe were registered by important industrials, equipments and motors, United States Steel falling more than 2 points. Shipping shares were highly irregular, Marine preferred losing a point after an early substantial advance, while Atlantic, Gulf and West Indies yielded a considerable part of its advance of the previous day.

Specialties of various descriptions, petroleum, leather and paper issues, sugars and a number of unclassified stocks shaded 1 to 2 points, with such seasoned shares as Reading, Union Pacific, Norfolk and Western, and other dividend paying rails.

Ajax Rubber Sets Record.

Ajax Rubber was the only exception to the general decline, rising more than 6 points to the new record of 84⅝. Final quotations for many stocks were a point or more above lowest levels, short covering contributing to the irregular rally.

The weekly bank statement, which disclosed a large cash gain and corresponding expansion of reserves, was not available until after the market's close.

General news bearing upon the financial situation embraced another abrupt decline in exchange on Austria and further weakness in lires. Trade advices were of the usual optimistic character, though tempered by moderate apprehension as a result of the further advance in raw and fabricated materials.

Bonds were lower, with Anglo-French 5s at the new minimum of 93⅛. United States bond issues advanced ⅛ to ½ of 1 per cent on call during the week.

IN FOREIGN STOCK MARKETS.

LONDON, Dec. 9.—Money was in good supply and discount rates were steady today. Trading on the stock exchange was listless in the absence of stimulating influences. Oil and rubber stocks were steady, but home funds barely moved and shipping shares showed a further reactionary tendency. American securities were undecided and dull around parity.

Bar silver, 36⅛d per ounce. Money, 4½ per cent. Discount rates, short bills, 5¼@5⅜ per cent; three months, 5¼@5⅜ per cent.

PARIS, Dec. 9.—Prices were steady on the bourse today. Rentes, 61 francs 10 centimes. Exchange on London, 27 francs 81½ centimes. Five per cent loan, 88 francs 5 centimes.

Larger Annuities Possible.

The great advantage of annuities which could be provided by Illinois or other western states is the possibility of larger incomes than are yielded by any annuity now obtainable. An annuity contract made by a state would be no more certain of payment than those now sold by the strongest life insurance companies, but it should be larger because insurance associations cannot invest all their funds in mortgages which yield a high return. They must always have large amounts of cash on hand and must put part of their invested money in readily salable bonds so as to be prepared always to pay the surrender value of policies to any policy holders who want to withdraw. The law requires this, and the result is a substantially lower income on their assets.

It has been objected that annuities provided by the state would not be bought freely by people, because there would be no machinery for pushing sales. This is equally true of the annuities now obtainable. Life insurance companies sell them practically at cost, so there is not only no inducement for pushing sales but no money is available to pay for such work. People who want annuities often are deterred by the apparently small return on the money that must be invested. If they could get a larger return they would be more inclined to buy.

As heretofore explained, an annuity is based not on estimates, but on exact calculations in which the interest rate is the only factor not decided in advance. People who buy annuities pay in their money either in monthly or yearly installments or in lump sums. This money is invested, and principal and accumulations of interest are gradually paid back. Evidently if it can be invested at 6 per cent it will yield a substantially larger income than if it must be put in 4 per cent bonds.

A second advantage of annuities which the state might provide is that they would be exempt from the United States income tax.

Sandow Motor Truck.

C. H. D.—The Sandow Motor Truck company has been formed to take over the business of a company of similar name. The new company is issuing $300,000 of preferred stock with a bonus of common. No reports of the old company are furnished, but it is stated that it had been in business five years and on a dividend basis for three. The balance sheet of the new company as of Aug. 31 shows $58,900 of preferred stock and $289,300 of common outstanding. Debts are $75,670 and net tangible assets $175,170. The statement is made that when the present issue of stock has been sold the net current assets will equal 133 per cent of the preferred.

Carolina Power and Light.

W. M. B., Richmond, O.—The Carolina Power and Light company is a consolidation formed in 1906. It furnishes electric light and power, gas and street railway service in Raleigh, and other towns in North Carolina. Earnings have increased steadily. In the year ended July 31 last, gross was $744,143, net after taxes, $283,788. Total income was $360,338 compared with $291,044 the year before. Interest charges of $171,106 were covered more than twice. The first mortgage bonds, of which $2,756,000 were outstanding on Dec. 31 last, are evidently in a strong position. Seven per cent dividends are paid on the $1,058,700 of preferred stock.

Crucible Steel.

A. G. T., Oshkosh, Wis.—Crucible Steel is making exceedingly large earnings. It has paid 4¾ per cent of back dividends on preferred stock thus far this year and will pay 1¾ per cent more on Dec. 21, leaving 18¾ per cent still unpaid. The report for the fiscal year ended Aug. 31, showed net profits of $13,223,655. Earnings amounted to 52.89 per cent on $25,000,000 of preferred stock and to 45.89 per cent on the $25,000,000 of common. It was announced in the annual meeting that the company was spending several millions dollars on new construction, was keeping much of its profits in the treasury to increase working capital and would liquidate back dividends gradually.

Brief Answers.

L. B. R.—Swan and Finch is a former Standard Oil subsidiary. It increased its capital stock from $500,000 to $1,000,000 early this year by selling the new stock at par to stockholders. Earnings and dividends in recent years have not been reported, except one payment of 5 per cent in 1913. The balance sheet of Dec. 31 last, showed a surplus of $467,052.

J. H.—The Library Bureau discontinued dividends on its $1,500,000 of common stock in 1906. Dividends on its $1,500,000 of preferred stock were suspended from 1910 to January 1912. Since then they have been paid and most of the back dividends made up.

COTTON.

NEW YORK, Dec. 9.—Yesterday's big break was followed by further sensational declines in the cotton market today, with the selling so active and excited that at times prices broke some 10 to 15 points between transactions. Heavy margin calls, necessitated by the slump of the previous day, appeared to have brought in selling orders from all directions and it was not until March contracts had sold at 18.50c, or 75 points net lower, that the decline was checked. The close was at 19.05 for that delivery and the final tone was steady at a net loss of 17@34 points. Estimates by 115 members of the New York cotton exchange as to the size of the crop, excluding linters, ranged from 10,678,000 to 13,500,000 bales, and averaged 11,427,000 bales. Port receipts today were 35,959 bales; for the season, 4,357,225 bales; exports today, 34,120 bales; for the season, 2,646,216 bales. Port stocks, 1,552,973 bales. Futures:

NEW ORLEANS, La., Dec. 9.—Extreme weakness again was in evidence in the cotton market here today, severe hammering by bear traders bringing out liquidation on a large scale. At the lowest levels prices were 49 to 65 points under yesterday's close. This wide decline stimulated much profit taking from recent sellers, who did not care to carry their contracts over Sunday and the government's estimate of the crop on Monday, and on this buying prices made a good recovery, the market closing steady at a net loss of 26 to 38 points. METALS.

NEW YORK, Dec. 9.—The copper market has shown continued firmness during the week. Small sales of electrolytic have been reported for delivery during the first quarter at 35½c, but supplies offering for shipment during the first three months of 1917 are so light and scattering that the quotation is practically nominal. Leading [illegible] today quoted prices ranging from [illegible] to [illegible] for the second and third quarters. Iron was firm and unchanged.

BRITISH CURB ON COPPER IMPORTS AFFECTS STOCKS

Action Unsettles Market—Favorable Report of U. S. Steel Corporation Ignored.

Great Britain's action in forbidding private importations of copper except on government permit had an unsettling effect on the stock market. Prices of the industrials, and particularly copper, suffered severely. The list rallied some later.

The market had no help from the splendid showing of business of the United States Steel company, as the figures were not issued until the close. These are expected to give the steel stocks a good boost this week.

Railroad securities were under pressure, while the liquidation in industrials was greatest, but they recovered somewhat and were relatively firmer than the balance of the list. The rails continue to have the preference of bankers as collateral. Bethlehem Steel was again extremely erratic, selling up sharply and then receding. Motor and sugar issues were also lower. Corn Products was almost as weak as the war order stocks.

Steel Company's Tonnage.

Unfilled tonnage of the United States Steel company at the end of November showed an increase over that of a month before of 1,043,282 tons. This was double the expectations of most everybody in the street and in the trade. The total tonnage unfilled Nov. 30 was 11,058,542, against a total on Oct. 31 of 10,015,260 tons, and on Sept. 30 of 9,522,584 tons. The showing of unfilled tonnage on Nov. 30 last year was 7,189,489 tons.

Government estimates regarding exportation of steel and iron products, published yesterday, places the ten months' total exports this year at 4,968,285 tons. It is estimated that iron and steel exports this year will surpass the previous record year by 75 per cent.

Feverish Wall Street News.

It was reported in stock circles that Mr. Morgan had returned from Europe with many misgivings about the future financing for the allies. It was the talk attending these reports that it was the intention to cut the allies' purchases down to the smallest possible proportions.

Taken in connection with the English prohibition of private purchases of import copper, the alarmists had considerable coloring for their picture. Some of them regarded yesterday's break in the industrial list, which was by no means significant or extended, as the first attempt of the market to readjust itself to an expected radical change in trade conditions. Conservatives were inclined to look on the extreme views as too feverish to be given serious consideration.

Rock Island Reorganization.

The Rock Island reorganization will be carried out without any change in the status of the refunding mortgage 4s. There will not be issued at this time the proposed 4½ per cent bonds.

Final action by the refunding bondholders' committee will be taken next week, and it is understood an agreement has been reached between the two committees by which the petition of the refunding committee for foreclosure will not be pressed.

Motors Lead in Curb Activity.

The local unlisted securities market continues active, especially in the motor stocks. Continental Motors improved to sales at 45¾, and this price was bid at the close. Buyers advanced the bid price of Paige-Detroit to 41¼ bid, offered at 4¾. W. K. Prudden was in excellent demand, advancing to 54½. Packard Motor common advanced to sales at 174, closing at that price with little stock offered. Reo Motor Car reacted to 45⅝. American Ford and Hoe common changed hands around 119.

American Hominy preferred was wanted at 71, with offerings at 75. Avery common and preferred were neglected, with little change in prices. Butler Bros. sold off to 289½, but improved slightly toward the close to 290 bid, offered at 292. Consumers common and preferred have been very active, the former around 26 and the latter around 6⅝. Emerson Brantingham preferred sold at 8½. Moline Plow preferred was quiet at 94½ bid, offered at 95½.

U. S. Gypsum in Demand.

United States Gypsum common was wanted at 44½, stock offered at 46½. The preferred advanced to sales at . Wilson & Co. preferred was offered freely at 104, stock was traded in at . Holland-St. Louis declined four points to 18. Minnesota Sugar was quoted ; Michigan Sugar, 103@105; German-American, 28@29½. Byproducts corporation sold at 175. Kellogg Switchboard and Supply changed hands , closing 370@375. Great Lakes Dredge and Dock was quiet at 119½. Steel was in demand at 465. Acetylene was inactive at 105@ Linde Air Products 295@300, lots changing hands between these prices.

Public Utility securities . Northern States Power common advanced from 105 to 109½, reacting slightly to 108 bid, offered at 109. The preferred was unchanged at 101@. Standard Gas and Electric preferred declined from 45½ to 43¼; the common was traded in at 16¼@16⅝.

Cities Service Improves.

Cities Service common improved from , closing at the latter price. The preferred was quoted 93¼@94. American Light and Traction common , being offered at 390. American Waterworks and Electric participating preferred was wanted at 31 and the common at 14. Federal Light and Traction preferred was in good demand , due largely to its reported good earnings.

United Light and Railways common , preferred 79; Middle West Utilities common, 63½; preferred, 82; Illinois Northern Utilities preferred, 81; System Electric preferred, ; Appalachian Power common, 8⅝; Public Utilities common, 41; 73½; Republic Railway and Light common, 56; Tennessee Railway, Light and Power common, 11.

Corn Products Company.

President Edward T. Bedford of the Corn Products Refining company has issued a statement to the stockholders showing that the company in the last year [1916 partly estimated] has earned ,097,994, and a net of $30,510,. The surplus for this period, after paying in preferred dividends, is $14,225,218. The surplus, after allowing $5,700,000 for payment on the accumulated preferred dividend, leaves about $4,000,000 for the $50,000,000 of common stock.

NEWS OF THE FINANCIAL WORLD

It has been unanimously voted by the directors to merge Westinghouse Air Brake and the Union Signal companies. The matter will be submitted to the stockholders of both companies for action. A circular letter sent to stockholders proposes to increase the capital of the Air Brake company from $20,000,000 to $30,000,000 and to exchange the shares at the rate of four shares of Air Brake for five shares of Union Switch preferred, and two shares of Air Brake for three shares of Union Switch common.

It is understood that a meeting of the directors of International Marine will be held on Thursday next and that a cash dividend will be paid on the preferred of anywhere from 8 to 12 per cent and a refunding plan considered. It is thought that $30,000,000 of new preferred will be issued on account of back dividends and that the balance may be paid in cash in various installments.

Sales of the McCrory Stores corporation in November amounted to $604,188, compared with $464,299 in November last year, an increase of 30.13 per cent. For the eleven months ended Nov. 30 the sales were $5,559,894, against $4,687,240, a gain of 18.63 per cent.

Announcement is made of the formation of a $22,500,000 motion picture corporation in New York. The Lasky Famous Players company by the deal acquired a controlling interest in the Paramount Pictures corporation. The former is a $12,000,000 organization and the latter one of $10,000,000. No change in the officers of the two companies is contemplated.

Some of the recent buyers of Western Union look for an increased distribution on that stock at the directors' meeting. The announcement of the dividend action may be made either Tuesday or Wednesday.

Edwin Holley & Co., syndicate managers, state that the time for depositing stock of the Ohio Copper company expires Dec. 15.

Exports of iron and steel products for the year 1916 will total 6,000,000 tons, which surpasses maximum by about 75 per cent.

The new $15,000,000 Westinghouse Electric company stock has been underwritten and will be offered to stockholders at par.

Southern Pennsylvania Oil stockholders will vote Feb. 14 on a proposition to increase the stock from $12,500,000 to $20,000,000.

Chicago Stock Exchange.

An undertone of weakness was shown in most of the stock list on the Chicago stock exchange. Swift had a considerable decline, going from 155¼ at the opening to 153¼, then to 151½, with a small lot traded in at the lower figure. There was a subsequent rally to 154, but the close was at 153¼. Union Carbide sold from 208 at the opening, which was high, to 206 at the close, the latter being low for the day.

Sears-Roebuck was traded in moderately and ranged between 229½ and 230, opening at the top and closing at 229⅞. There were irregular changes in the stocks of less speculative activity, but most of these, as with the important trading properties, were easier.

Argentina's Finances.

An issue of short term notes to refund the temporary obligations of the Argentine government has been decided on and a syndicate headed by J. P. Morgan & Co. has been formed. There is $10,000,000 coming due this month and $23,000,000 in the next two months.

Loans to the Argentine by this country since the beginning of the war total $74,000,000.

Money and Exchange.

Money rates in Chicago steady at 4 per cent on collateral, 3¼ per cent on commercial paper, and 4½@5 per cent over the counter. New York exchange sold 10@5c discount. Chicago bank clearings, $65,917,637.

SUGAR.

CHICAGO, Dec. 9.—SUGAR — Following prices were quoted by the wholesale dealers per 100 lbs: Cut loaf, H. & E., $8.83; powdered, standard, $7.81; standard cane granulated, $7.53; beet granulated, $7.13; extra C, $7.38; canary, $6.98.

NEW YORK, Dec. 9.—The only new feature in the market for raw sugar was the fact that rumors current yesterday were confirmed today that exporters had purchased 20,000 bags of Cubas for February and March shipment at $3.50 f. o. b. Cuba. Otherwise there were no sales reported, although it was thought possible that Cubas were available at quoted prices. The market closed barely steady at 4 11-16c for Cubas, cost and freight, equal to 5.69c for centrifugal and 4.82c for molasses. There were no changes in refined sugar prices, and trading was again inactive, with all refiners naming 7.20c for fine granulated. In futures trading was very quiet and confined to the January position. Scattered liquidation for over the week-end and a little selling by commission houses caused a slightly easier feeling, and closing prices were unchanged to 3 points net lower. Sales, 2,500 tons. January sold from 4.82c to 4.81c; closing 4.31c; March closed 4.01c; May, 4.06c; July, 4.13c.

DRY GOODS.

NEW YORK, Dec. 9.—Cotton goods and yarns were decidedly quieter today, with some easing in prices reported on small resales between second hands. Burlaps and linens ruled firm. Jobbers were busy on arranging shipments. Spot trade was better than usual at this season of the year. Knit goods were in demand for spot and future delivery.

Bankruptcy Petitions.

William O. Oviatt, reporter, 165 West Washington street, $477.29; no assets.

In re the petition of John C. Moninger company et al. to have E. G. Krueger, doing business as the Superior Novelty company, adjudged bankrupt; claims $683.53.

Telegram from President Ward—

E. A. FERRON & COMPANY
226 S. La Salle St., Chicago, Ill.

Our oil production will easily run 22,500 barrels per month from our 40 wells. Well on company's land south of Tulsa is making 180 barrels daily and is not three weeks old. Taking over possession of seven Booch Sand oil wells at Boynton. Acreage has 10 more proven locations yet to drill. Starting drill there next week. Booch Sand exceptionally rich in gasoline. Will put plant there also. Shot new well on one of Bird Creek properties; good for 50 barrels. Expect to complete within next 15 days two or more oil wells now drilling. Last test on open flow capacity of gas wells showed 36,000,000 cubic feet per day of 24 hours from 26 wells.

Am offsetting 12,000,000 gas well in Catoosa field. Should get as good a well completed by Dec. 15th. Expect completion of three new gas wells now drilling within next 15 days. Should easily put our open flow to 50,000,000 cubic feet daily. Gas pump station should be running by Dec. 15th. Building gasoline station now. Also acquired about 800 acres more proven leases. Company's acreage will now exceed 8,000 acres, located in the following districts: Haskell, Okmulgee, Glenn Pool, Boynton, Blackwell, Bird Creek, Catoosa, Owasso, Collinsville and Tulsa. Expect to start extension pipe lines for gas to Catoosa fields in next month. Company's leasing division opened and running in Reeder Building, Tulsa, since Nov. 1st. Have contracted for entire time for one year of three best lease men in the state.

(Signed) J. D. WARD, President,
Sequoyah Oil and Refining Company.

It is upon the strength of the above wire that our prediction is founded.

Here Are More Facts: Sequoyah Oil and Refining is located in the heart of Oklahoma's richest oil and gas fields; oil production has more than doubled in the past few weeks; oil leases have been increased from 6,000 acres to over 8,000 acres; 66 oil and gas wells as against 47 a few weeks ago; earnings are over 50%; dividends are 12%; price of stock has advanced only 40% and right now is intrinsically worth $5 per share. Greatly increased dividends may be announced any day and stock is certain to take a big jump. Present quotations are only 1¾ to 1⅞, simply because its real value is not yet generally known.

We have not one share of this stock for sale. We are brokers—buy and sell all listed securities and fill your orders at the market. Special information convinces us that Sequoyah Oil and Refining offers wonderful possibilities as a money-maker.

GETTING AHEAD

¶ To successfully fulfill the meaning of these words, it is necessary to perfect some sort of a system whereby one can not only save, but also invest his savings, so as to insure the maximum income yield commensurate with safety of principal.

¶ A ready-made combination system is within your grasp in

"The Twenty Payment Plan" and
"Investment Opportunities"

¶ The one provides a convenient way of accumulating dividend-paying securities of undoubted merit, and the other suggests which issues represent the best purchases.

¶ Those who are interested in getting the most out of their surplus funds should not fail to regularly receive "Investment Opportunities." It will be sent, without charge, beginning with the present issue, upon request for 35-CT, including booklet explaining "The Twenty Payment Plan."

Swift's Four Cut-out Calendar Dolls

Send to day for your set

These big darlings, each with four beautiful costumes—all sixteen richly colored—are more than 18 inches tall, big as live new babies, can stand alone! Each doll is worth 25c. You will say you never saw such unusual calendars, even in the famous Swift "Premium" series.

How your children will love them! How their little hearts will thrill with joy, when they dress and undress these big beauties!

You too must be stony-hearted if you will not find yourself smiling every day of 1917 as you look at these winsome little faces, and enjoying each season's change to a gay new costume.

Their Characters and Costumes

Who could resist Dashing Donald, the handsome boy doll, in any of his three gay sporting suits or his surprise costume?

Coy Clarabel, with her bashful brown eyes, red lips and curly black hair would melt the heart of an iceberg. Nothing could be more fetching than her red, blue and green costumes.

Every one loves Sweet Sylvia for her dewy violet eyes, and hair as golden as her nature. How pretty she looks in her white, rose, blue and red costumes!

As for Merry Myrtle, her brown hair and twinkling blue eyes are irresistible. In a pretty blue or pink or tan or scarlet costume she is sweet.

Send for these calendars—daily they will remind you of the rare quality of

Swift's "Premium" Hams and Bacon

How to Get the Calendars

One doll with four costumes, forming a complete calendar for 1917, will be sent to any address in the United States for 10c, in coin or stamps, or—Trade Mark end of five Swift's "Premium" Oleomargarine cartons, or—4 labels from Swift's "Premium" Sliced Bacon cartons, or—4 covers from Brookfield Sausage cartons, or—6 Maxine Elliott Soap Wrappers, or—10 Wool Soap Wrappers.

(If you live in Canada send ten cents extra on each doll ordered to pay duty.)

NOTE:—All four dolls—with four costumes for each, making four complete calendars, sent for 40c or four times the number of labels or wrappers required for each doll.

A new way to wash sweaters and sportcoats

Lux and very hot water! That's all! You may not believe that Lux will not shrink wool.

You may hesitate to use it on a lovely sweater.

You may say that woolens can't be washed in hot water!

All we ask is that you get a package of Lux—pure essence of soap in flakes—and try it on any old woolen you happen to have in the house—notice how wonderfully Lux washes it. Then wash your sweater!

What other women say

"It gives me pleasure to tell you how much I like Lux. I have a white sweater which has been washed several times with it, and it is still white, soft and unshrunken."—Mrs. P. Dreyer, 532 East 89th Street, New York City.

"I have just secured Lux and have washed a heavy chinchilla coat with it, and the results are very satisfactory. I shall never be without it again."—Mrs. A. S. Fowler, 43 Beverly Street, Melrose, Mass.

Lux and very hot water! That's all you need to make soiled sweaters or sport coats look like new!

Wash the children's sweaters without fear of shrinking

Now, you let the children wear their sweaters just as long as possible without washing, because each washing makes them so much harsher and inches shorter. But with Lux they can be washed so they will remain just as soft as when new, and actually not shrink a thread!

Give Lux one trial. Follow the directions carefully—hot water and no rubbing—and you will be amazed and delighted with the results you get!

Lux can't injure anything that water alone won't injure.

Lux is now on sale at all grocery and department stores. Get a package and see for yourself how entirely different it is. Lever Bros. Co., Cambridge, Mass.

The Lux way

Throw the thin, transparent Lux flakes into very hot water; whisk them up into the fluffiest lather you ever saw. Allow your sweater to soak ten minutes in these rich, hot suds. When the water has cooled, so the hands are comfortable in it, dip your sweater up and down in the lather. The dirt will come out easily without rubbing. Rinse in three relays of water of the same temperature in which you washed it; then stretch into shape and lay flat to keep its form perfect.

LUX 10¢ WON'T SHRINK WOOLENS

"Yes'm! I'd like to have 'nother cup of Runkel's."

And it's the same with every growing little youngster who tastes it.

Runkel's, you know, just hits the spot with every kiddie's appetite—because it's the only cocoa with that "chocolaty" taste that they all like. But it's GOOD for them—builds muscles and pinks up little cheeks—and once the folks at home know Runkel's taste, you will always

Say Runkel's

the COCOA with that "Chocolaty" Taste

RUNKELS
COCOA

Runkel's Cocoa—being so much more finely powdered—dissolves more easily and completely, giving the full, natural "chocolaty" flavor of the rich cocoa beans. Food experts say a cocoa with 20% cocoa butter is too rich and indigestible and that a cocoa with only 20% is "too lean." Runkel's has 24%—just right to give maximum nutriment with complete ease of digestion. Get Runkel's—at any good grocer's. Or a Family Taste Size for trial direct from us for 10c in stamps. Test the two creams—these beautiful women use

(Photo by Lumiere Studios.) Norma Talmadge says: "I have found Pond's Vanishing Cream wonderful. It leaves my skin refreshed and clear."

Pond's Cold Cream is wonderful as a massage and cleansing cream.

FREE! Write for samples of these two creams today

Send for both of these free samples now. See the difference between Pond's Vanishing Cream and Pond's Cold Cream. Learn just how each one benefits your skin and when each should be used.

FOR cleansing and massaging a cold or grease cream is a necessity. William Allen Pusey, A. M., M. D., says: "A certain amount of fat in the skin is necessary to its perfect condition. Fats applied to the skin lubricate it and make it soft; and if applied, then rubbed off, remove the dirt."

Pond's Cold Cream is made of the purest ingredients, especially chosen for their softening and cleansing values. It has an oil base and is intended for night use. The moment you use it, you will say you never would have believed cold cream could be so dewy, so delicate.

Then try this famous greaseless cream

Then try Pond's Vanishing Cream—see how different it is from Pond's Cold Cream. The skin absorbs Pond's Vanishing Cream immediately; becomes cool and velvety, the shine disappears at once!

A famous dermatologist has said: "Much of the harm to the complexion from exposure to wind and weather can be avoided by properly protecting the skin from their action."

Pond's Vanishing Cream was especially formulated to afford a constant protection and refining influence to the skin. It is quickly absorbed by the skin, and forms a fine, invisible covering.

For years, women had only grease creams with which to protect the skin from harsh winter winds. No matter how thoroughly they wiped them off, the oil in these creams would reappear on their faces in a hateful, embarrassing shine.

Then the Pond's Extract Company, who for sixty years had been making such high-class preparations, had their chemists experiment to get exactly the correct formula to make an effective, absolutely greaseless cream.

This ideal formula they have found in Pond's Vanishing Cream—a cream which has never been approached in any other laboratory. Every ingredient was scientifically chosen as the most potent of its kind. Even the delicate Jacqueminot rose perfume used in Pond's Vanishing Cream costs more than four times as much as perfumes ordinarily used in toilet creams.

For massage you will find Pond's Cold Cream ideal.

Pond's Vanishing Cream vanishes, will never reappear in a hateful shine.

Send today for your sample tube and test Pond's Vanishing Cream now! Even after one application you will see the improvement in your complexion.

Some famous users

Such well-known beautiful professional women as these use Pond's Vanishing Cream: Frances Starr, Elsie Ferguson, Marie Tempest, Norma Talmadge, Mrs. Fiske, Constance Collier, Jane Cowl, Pauline Frederick, Julia Sanderson, Pavlowa, Tetrazzini, Emmy Destinn.

Pond's Face Powder is a soft, pure, delicately scented powder which blends perfectly with the texture of the skin and, used after applying Pond's Vanishing Cream, gives the skin a wonderfully beautiful, velvety appearance. In flesh color, white and brunette.

Fill out the coupon now and get these free samples. Or send 4c for enough Pond's Cold Cream or Pond's Vanishing Cream to last two weeks! Or send 8c for enough of both creams to last two weeks. Send today. Pond's Extract Co., 146 Hudson Street, New York.

As a stimulating massage cream and marvelously cleansing cream

So soft and smooth is Pond's Cold Cream, it makes a marvelous cream for massage. It will leave the skin smooth, rested, and wonderfully cleansed. See how fresh and clean your skin becomes—what a delicate coloring it takes on. Send for sample.

Keep your complexion delicate and radiant—give it the protection it needs

You can't avoid the cold, irritating winds of winter, but with Pond's Vanishing Cream you can protect your skin; you can keep it exquisitely delicate and smooth. If your face has become reddened and roughened try Pond's Vanishing Cream. Your skin will respond wonderfully to it, losing after one application any rough or chapped appearance.

The peculiar value of Pond's Vanishing Cream lies in its protective quality.

Before going out, rub a little on face and hands. Compare the soft, pliant condition in which it keeps your skin with the roughened, chapped feeling which ordinarily follows exposure to cold and wind. It contains no grease or oil, so that the moment you apply it your skin takes it up. It never reappears—never comes out on the skin in an embarrassing shine and will not soil gloves or veil.

Beata Beatrix

Reproduction of a Painting by Rossetti

Every week "The Sunday Tribune" will reproduce in four colors on this page one of the world's most famously beautiful paintings. There will be a brief biography of the painter and a story of the painting. Herewith is reproduced another in the series.

BY LOUISE JAMES BARGELT.

Beata Beatrix. From the picture by Daniel Gabriel Rossetti in the National Gallery of British Art. 33x26 inches. Presented to the nation in 1889 by Lady Mount Temple as a memorial to her husband. (1828-1882.)

BEATA BEATRIX sits in a balcony which overlooks the city of Florence. In the distance are faintly seen the outlines of the city and its bridged river. It is all dim, veiled with shadowy, misty lights. In front of Beata is a sundial which marks the hour when she passed from the world. A crimson bird has dropped a white poppy between her hands. The poppy is the symbol of sleep and painless death. The bird, which is the messenger of death, is the spirit of God and therefore has a halo. It is red because red is the color of love and death has come to Dante's adored Beata as the blessing of blessings.

In the background are Dante and the angel of love. Dante's eyes are tragically following the departure of the angel. But the lamp is brightly lit and its light is to be the guiding star to lead him on to the unseen.

The glorious, incomparable hair of Beata has made a halo about her head. For by her death she had become a glorified being to Dante. A rare spiritual beauty floods her face. She wears a gown of green, which is the color of spring and of hope, over a ground of purple, which is the color of suffering, and her drapery is simple and dignified and full of grace.

The picture, which is full of this detailed symbolism, is filled with a beautiful peace. It is like the woods in summer just before the first bird has begun to sing. A subdued, misty sunlight suffuses the canvas. Emotionally it ranks with Rossetti's best pictures. Technically it is considered superior to any of his studies after Dante. It illustrates symbolically the death of Beatrice and the words of Jeremiah's lamentation, "How doth the city sit solitary," which is written on its frame, show the grief of Florence at the death of Beata.

Rossetti painted this picture from the portrait of his wife, which was done immediately after her death. As in all of his paintings, thought and passion are equally played upon. With the peculiar physical sensuousness of his works he always mingled a high intellectual refinement and in the wealth of his poetic coloring no painter of modern times has ever surpassed him.

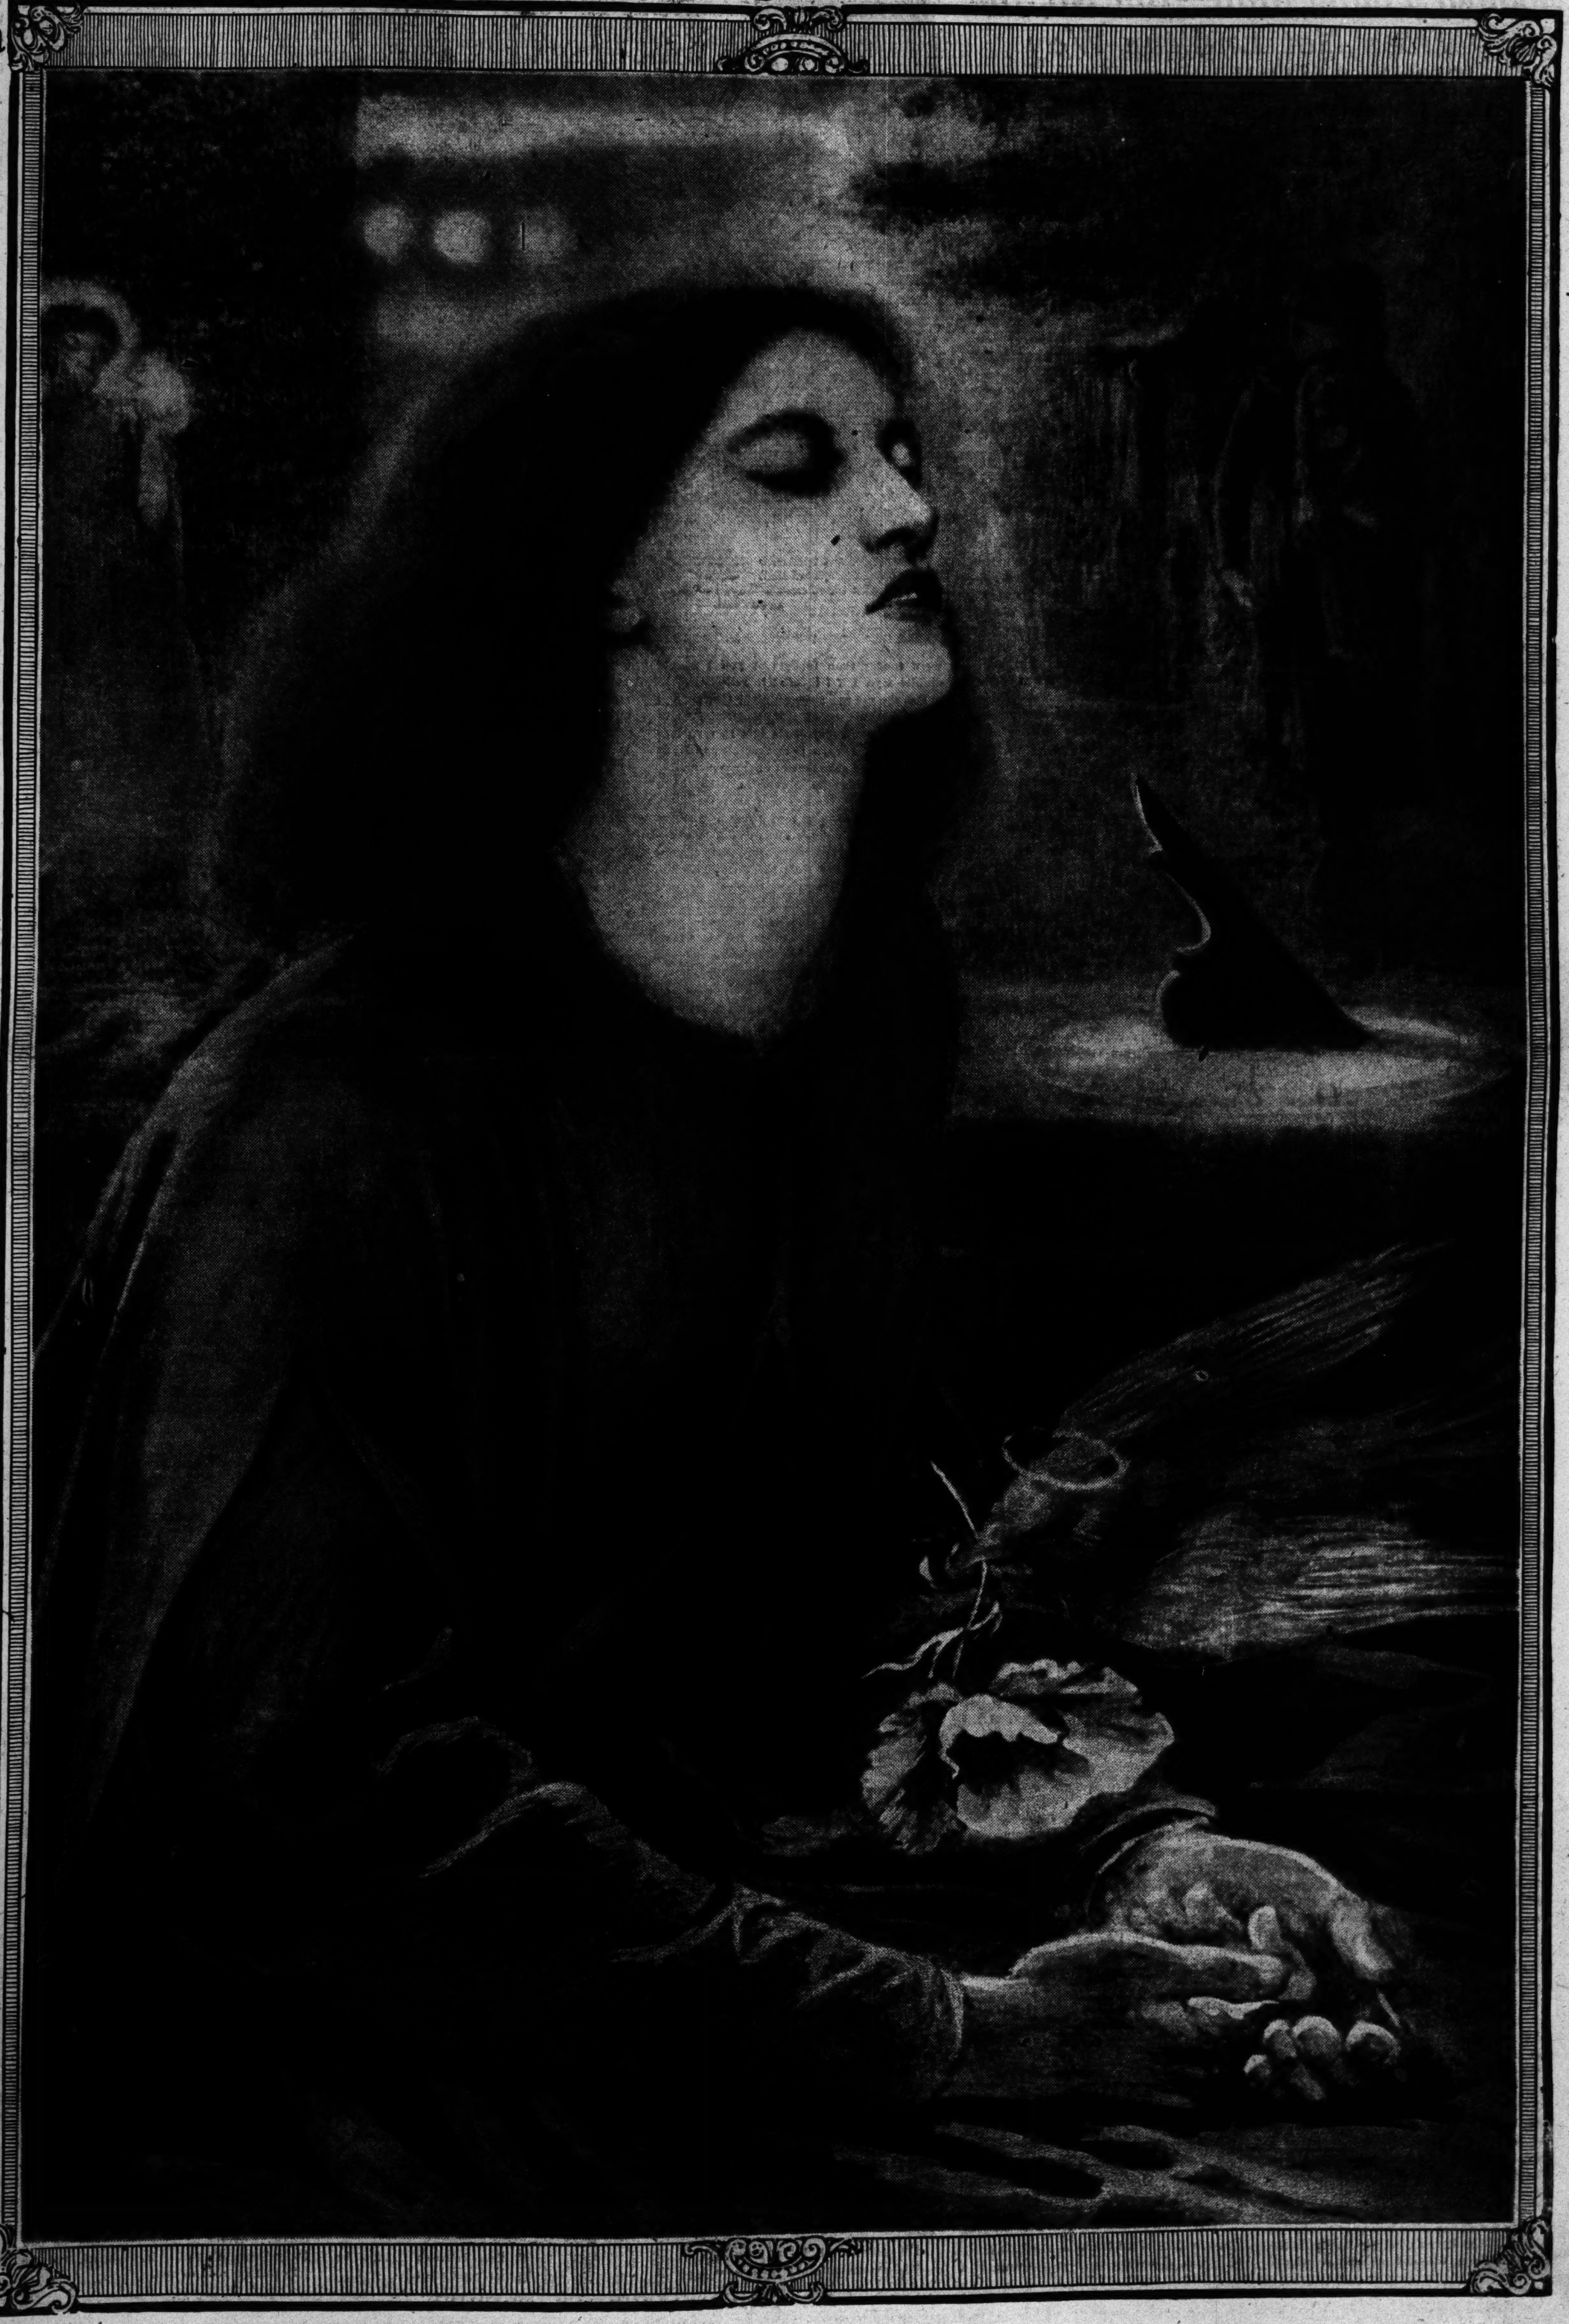
The name of Rossetti should be placed perhaps first in the list of men who have raised and changed the spirit of modern art. He was the poet of the pre-Raphaelites, as well as one of their greatest painters, and his genius was essentially and primarily that of passionate emotionalism.

He married a Miss Elizabeth Siddal, who was the inspiration and model of many of his paintings. At her death, in a burst of uncontrollable grief, he buried his manuscripts with her as the most precious gift he could possibly bequeath her. Later on, however, he was persuaded by friends and admirers to exhume them.

His painting of the "Annunciation" is remarkable not only in its technique and composition, but also in the originality of its conception. It represents the angel awakening the Virgin from sleep to give her his message. The face of Mary is that of his younger sister, Christina.

This painting of Beata Beatrix was bought by Lord Mount Temple and later presented by Lady Mount Temple as a memorial of her husband to the British nation in 1889. Rossetti painted replicas of this picture, one of which is in the collection of Mr. Hutchinson and was recently exhibited in his loan exhibit at the Art institute of Chicago. Rossetti died in 1882.

Another famous painting will be reproduced next Sunday.



SAPPHIRA by Gouverneur Morris

She Advanced a Loan to Reclaim a Spoiled Young Man—But No, the Story Does Not End the Way You Think It Will.

MR. HEMINGWAY had transacted a great deal of business with Miss Tennant's father; otherwise he must have shunned the proposition upon which she came to him. Indeed, wrinkling his bushy brows, he as much as told her that he was a banker and not a pawnbroker.

Outside, the main street of Aiken, broad enough to have made five New England streets, lay red and glaring in the sun. The least restless shifting of feet by horses and mules tied to hitching posts raised clouds of dust, immense reddish ghosts that could not be laid. In the bank itself, ordinarily a cool retreat, smelling faintly of tobacco juice deposited by some of its clients, the mercury was swelling toward 90. It was April Fools' day, and unless Miss Tennant was cool nobody was. She looked cool. If the temperature had been 40 degrees below zero she would have looked warm, but she would have been dressed differently.

It was her great gift always to look the weather and the occasion, no matter how or what she really felt. On the present occasion she wore a simple, inexpensive muslin, flowered with faint mauve lilacs, and a wide, floppy straw hat trimmed with the same. She had driven into town, half a mile or more, without getting a speck of dust upon herself. Even the corners of her eyes were like those of a newly laundered baby. She smelled of tooth powder (precipitated chalk and orris root) as was her custom, and she wore no ring or ornament of any value. Indeed, such jewels as she possessed, a graceful diamond necklace, a pearl collar, a pearl pendant, and two cabochon sapphire rings, lay on the table between her and Mr. Hemingway.

"I'm not asking the bank to do this for me," she said, and she looked extra lovely (on purpose, of course). "I'm asking you——"

Mr. Hemingway poked the cluster of jewels gingerly with his forefinger as if they were a lizard.

"And, of course," she said, "they are worth twice the money; maybe three or four times."

"Perhaps," said Mr. Hemingway, "you will take offense if I suggest that your father——"

The muslin over her shoulders tightened the least in the world. She had shrugged them.

"Of course," she said, "papa would do it; but he would insist on reasons. My reasons involve another, Mr. Hemingway, and so it would not be honorable for me to give them."

"And yet," said the banker, twinkling, "your reasons would tempt me to accommodate you with the loan you ask for far more than your collateral."

"I wish to lend it in turn," she said, "to a person who has been reckless, and who is in trouble, but in whom I believe. . . ."

"This person——" he began, twinkling.

"O," she said, "I couldn't bear to be teased. The person is a young gentleman. Any interest that I take in him is a business interest pure and simple. I believe that, tided over his present difficulties, he will steady down and become a credit to his sex. Can I say more than that?" She smiled drolly.

"Men who are a credit to their sex," said Mr. Hemingway, "are not rare, but young gentlemen——"

"This one," said she, "has in him the makings of a man. Just now he is discouraged."

"Is he taking anything for it?" asked Mr. Hemingway with some sarcasm.

"Buckets," said Miss Tennant simply.

"Was it cards?" he asked.

"Cards, and betting—and the hopeless optimism of youth," said she.

"And you wish to lend him $5,000, and your interest in him is platonic?"

"Nothing so ardent," said she demurely. "I wish him to pay his debts, to give me his word that he will neither drink nor gamble until he has paid back his debt to me, and I will suggest that he go out to one of those big western states and become a man."

"If anybody," said Mr. Hemingway, with gallantry, "could lead a young gentleman to so sweeping a reform it would be yourself."

Mr. Hemingway swept the jewels together and wrapped them in the tissue paper in which she had brought them.

"Are you going to put them in your safe—or return them to me?" she asked plaintively.

Mr. Hemingway affected gruffness.

"I am thanking God fervently, ma'am," said he, "that you didn't ask me for more. You'll have to give me your note. By the way, are you of age?"

Her charming eyes narrowed, and she laughed at him.

"People," she said, "are already beginning to say, 'she will hardly marry now.' But it's how old we feel, Mr. Hemingway, isn't it?"

"I feel about 7," said he, "and foolish at that."

"And I," said she, "will be 25 for the second time on my next birthday."

"And by the way," she said, when the details of the loan had been arranged and she had stuffed the $5,000 into the palm of a wash glove, "nobody must know about this, because I shall have to say that—my gewgaws have been stolen."

"But that will give Aiken a black eye," said he.

"I'm afraid it can't be helped, Mr. Hemingway. Papa will ask pointblank why I never wear the pearls he gave me, and I shall have to anticipate."

"How?" he asked.

"O," she said demurely, "tonight or tomorrow night I shall rouse the household with screams, and claim that I woke and saw a man bending over my dressing table—a man with a beautiful white mustache and imperial."

Mr. Hemingway's right hand flew to his mouth as if to hide these well ordered appendages, and he laughed.

"You could make the burglar a clean shaven man," Mr. Hemingway suggested.

"I will," she said; "I will make him look like anybody you say."

"God forbid," said he. "I have no enemies. But seriously, Miss Tennant, if you possibly can, will you do without a burglary, for the good name of Aiken?"

"I will do what I can," she said, "but I can't make promises."

In the fall from grace of David Larkin there was involved no great show of natural depravity. The difference between a young man who goes right and a young man who goes wrong may be no more than the half of 1 per cent. And I do not know why we show the vicious such contempt and the virtuous such admiration. Larkin's was the case of a young man who tried to do what he was not old enough, strong enough, or wise enough to "get away with," as the saying is.

Aiken did not corrupt him; he was corrupt when he came, with a bank account of $3,500 snatched from the lap of Dame Fortune at a moment when she was minding some other small boy. Horses running up to their form, spectacular bridge hands (not well played), and bets upon every subject that can be thought of had all contributed. Then Larkin caught a cold in his nose, so that it ran all day and all night, and because the Browns had invited him to Aiken for a fortnight whenever he cared to come, he seized upon the excuse of his cold and boarded the first train. He was no sooner in Aiken than Dame Fortune ceased minding the other small boy and turned her petulant eyes upon Larkin. Forthwith he began to lose.

Bad luck is not a good excuse for a failure in character; but God knows how wickedly provocative thereof it can be. The elders of the Aiken club did not notice that Larkin was slipping from grace, because his slipping was gradual; but they noticed all of a sudden, with pity, chagrin (for they liked him), and kindly contempt, that he had fallen. Forthwith a wave of reform swept over the Aiken club, or it amounted to that. Rich men who did not care a hang about what they won or lost refused to play for high stakes; Larkin's invitations to cocktails were largely refused; no bets were made in his presence (and I must say that this was a great cause of languishment in certain men's conversation), and the young man was mildly and properly snubbed.

This locking of the stable door, however, had the misfortune to happen just after the horse had bolted. Larkin had run through the most of his money; he did not know how he was to pay his bed and board at Willcox's, where he was now stopping; his family were in no position to help him; he knew that he was beginning to be looked on with contempt; he thought that he was seriously in love with Miss Tennant. He could not see any way out of anything; knew that a disgraceful crash was imminent, and for all these troubles he took the wrong medicine. Not the least foolish part of this was that it was medicine for which he would be unable to pay when the club bill fell due. From after breakfast until late at night he kept himself not drunk but stimulated. . . . And then one day the president of the club spoke to him kindly—and the next day wouldn't speak to him at all.

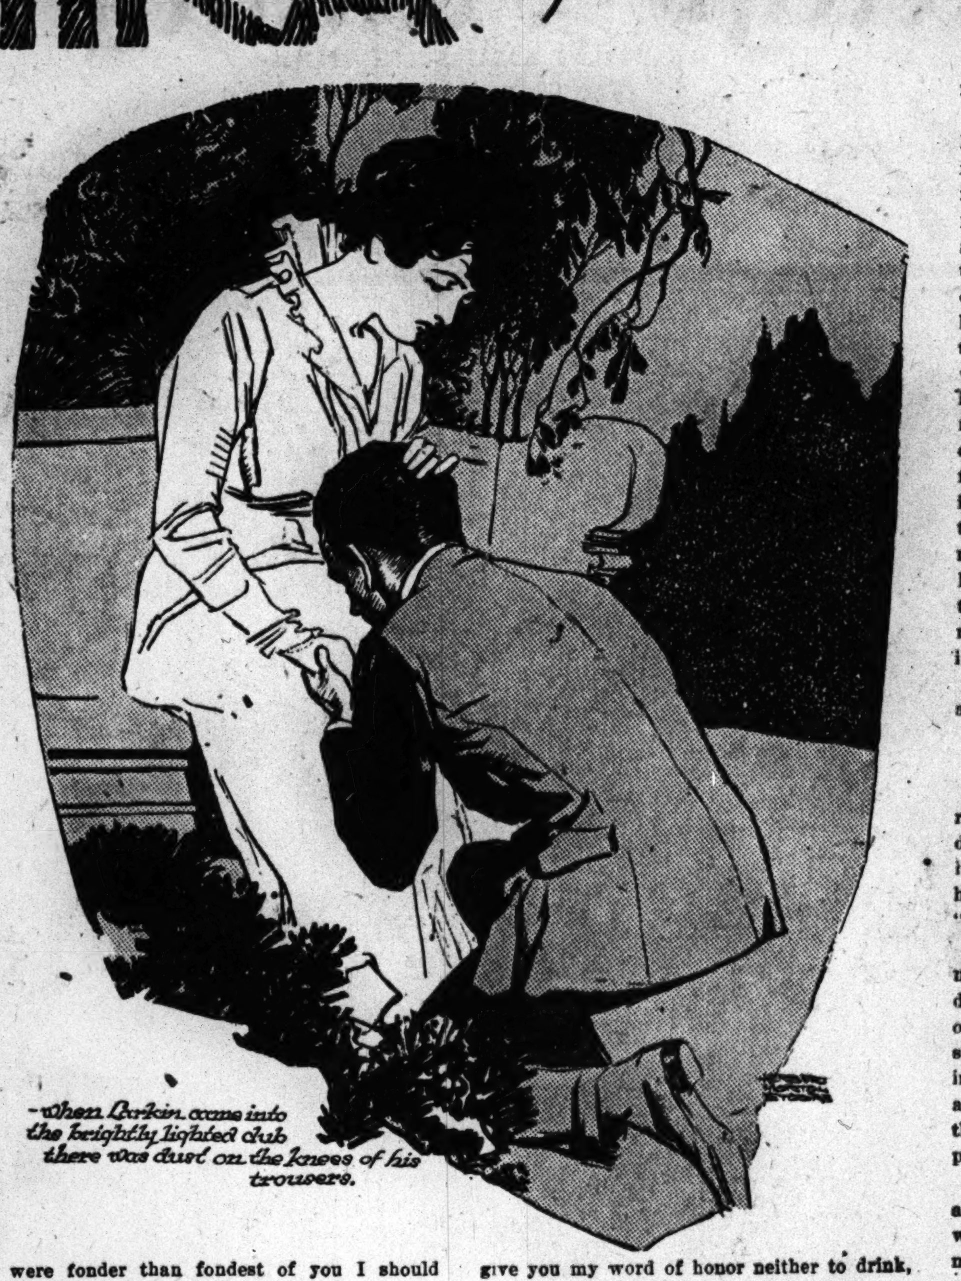
The proper course would have been for Larkin to open his heart to any of a dozen men. Any one of them would have straightened him out mentally and financially in one moment, and forgotten about it the next. But Larkin was too young, too foolish, and too full of false pride to make confessions to any one who could help him; and he was quite ignorant of the genuine kindness and wisdom that lurks in the average rich man, if once you can get his ear.

But one night, being sure they could not be construed into an appeal for help or anything but a sympathetic scolding, which he thought would be enjoyable (and because of a full moon, perhaps, and a whole chorus of mocking birds pouring out their souls in song, and because of an arbor covered with the yellow jasmine that smells to heaven, and a little sweeter), he made his sorry confessions into the lovely pink hollow of Miss Tennant's ear.

Instead of a scolding he received sympathy and understanding; and he misconstrued the fact that she caught his hand in hers and squeezed it very hard; and did not know that he had misconstrued that fact until he found that it was her cheek that he had kissed instead of her hastily averted lips.

This rebuff did not prevent him from crowning the story of his young life with further confessions. And it is on record that when Larkin came into the brightly lighted club there was dust upon the knees of his trousers.

"I am fond of you, David," she had said, "and in spite of all the mess you have made of things, I believe in you; but even if I were fonder than fondest of you I should despise myself if I listened to you—now."



—when Larkin came into the brightly lighted club there was dust on the knees of his trousers.

But she did not sleep all night for thinking how she could be of real, material help to the young man and cause him to turn into the straight, narrow path that always leads to success and sometimes to achievement.

Every spring the Mannings, who have nothing against them except that they live on the wrong side of town, give a wistaria party. The Mannings live for the blossoming of the wistaria which covers their charming porticoed house from top to toe and fills their grounds. Ever since they can remember they have specialized in wistaria; and they are not young and wistaria grows fast. The fine old trees that stand in the Mannings' grounds are merely lofty trellises for the vines, white and mauve, to sport upon.

Even Larkin when he paused under the towering entrance vines, a mauve and a white, forgot his troubles. He filled his lungs with the delicious fragrance, and years after the consciousness of it would come upon him suddenly. And then coming upon tea tables standing in the open and covered with good things, and finding, among the white flannel and muslin guests, Miss Tennant, obviously on the lookout for him, his cup was full.

Either because the day was hot or because of the sandwiches, they found exclusive shade and sat in it, upon a white seat that looked like marble—at a distance. Larkin once more filled his lungs with the breath of wistaria and was for letting it out in further confessions of what he felt to be his heart's ultimate depths. But Miss Tennant was too quick for him. She drew five one thousand dollar bills from the palm of her glove and put them in his hand.

"There," she said.

Larkin looked at the money and fell into a dark mood.

"What is this for?" he said presently.

"This is a loan," said she, "from me to you; to be a tiding over of present difficulties, a reminder of much that has been pleasant in the past and an earnest of future well doing. Good luck to you, David."

"I wish I could take it," said the young man, with a swift, slanting smile. "And at least I can crawl upon my stomach at your feet and pull my forelock and heap dust upon my head. . . . God bless you!" And he returned the bills to her.

She smiled cheerfully, but a little disdainfully.

"Very well, then," said she. "I tear them up."

"O!" cried Larkin. "Don't make a mess of a beautiful incident."

"Then take them."

"No."

"Why not?"

"O, you know as well as I do that a man can't borrow from a girl."

"A man," she said; "what is a man? I can answer better by telling you what a man is not. A man is not a creature who loafs when he ought to be at work, who loses money that he hasn't got, who drinks liquor that he cannot carry, and who upon such a noble groundwork feels justified in making love to a decent, self-respecting girl. That is not a man, David. A man would have no need of any help from me. . . . But you—you are a child that has escaped from its nurse, a bird that has fallen out of its nest before it has learned to fly, and you have done nothing but foolish things. . . . But somehow I have learned to suspect you of a better self, where, half strangled with foolishnesses and extravagance, there lurks a certain contrition and a certain sweetness. . . . God knows I should like to see you a man. . . ."

Larkin jumped to his feet, and all of him that showed was crimson, and he could have cried. But he felt no anger, and he kept his eyes upon hers.

"Thank you," he said; "may I have them?"

He stuffed the bills into his pocket.

"I have no security," he said. "But I will give you my word of honor neither to drink, neither to gamble, neither to loaf, nor to make love until I have paid you back interest and principal."

"Where will you go? What will you do, David?"

"West—God knows. I will do something. . . . You see that I can't say any thanks, don't you? That I am almost choking, and that at any moment I might burst into sobs?"

They were silent, and she looked into his face unconsciously while he mastered his agitation. He sat down beside her presently, his elbows on his knees, his chin deep in his hands.

"Is God blessing you by any chance?" he said. "Do you feel anything of the kind? Because I am asking him to—so very hard. I shall ask him to a million times every day until I die. . . . Would it be possible for one who has deserved nothing, but who would like it for the strengthingest, beautifulest memory. . . ."

"Quick, then," said she, "some one's coming."

That very night screams pierced to every corner of the Tennant's great house on the Whisky road. Those whom screams affect in one way sprang from bed; those whom they affect in another hid under the bedclothes. Mr. Tennant himself, a man of sharp temper and implacable courage, dashed from his room in a suit of blue and white pajamas, and overturned a Chippendale cabinet worth a thousand dollars; young Mr. Tennant barked both shins on a woodbox and dropped a loaded Colt revolver into the well of the stair; Mrs. Tennant was longer in appearing, having tarried to try the effect upon her nerves and color sense of three divers wrappers. The butler, an Admirable Crichton of a man, came bearing a bucket of water in case the house was on fire. Mrs. Tennant's French maid carried a case of her mistress' jewels, and seemed determined to leave.

Miss Tennant stood in the doorway of her room. She was pale and greatly agitated, but her eyes shone with courage and resolve. Her arched, blue veined feet were thrust into a pair of red Turkish slippers turning up at the toes. A mandarin robe of dragoned blue brocade was flung over her nightgown. In one hand she had a golf club—a niblick.

"O!" she cried, when her father was sufficiently recovered from overturning the cabinet to listen, "there was a man in my room."

"A man?"—Mr. Tennant furiously, young Mr. Tennant sleepily, the butler as if he thought she meant to say a fire, the French maid blushing crimson.

"Out the window!" cried Miss Tennant.

Her father and brother dashed downstairs and out into the grounds. The butler hurried to the telephone (still carrying his bucket of water) and rang central and asked for the chief of police. Central answered, after a long interval, that the chief of police was out of order, and rang off.

Meanwhile Mrs. Tennant arrived, and having coldly recovered her jewel case from the custody of the French maid, prepared to be told the details of what hadn't happened.

"He was bending over my dressing table, mamma," said Miss Tennant. "I could see him plainly in the moonlight; he had a mask, and was smooth shaven, and he wore gloves."

"I wonder why he wore gloves," mused Mrs. Tennant.

"I suppose," said Miss Tennant, "that he had heard of the Bertillon system, and was afraid of being tracked by his finger marks."

"Did he say anything?"

"Not to me, I think," said Miss Tennant, "but he kept mumbling to himself so I could hear: 'slit her damn throat if she makes a move; slit it right into the backbone.' So, of course, I didn't make a move."

"Have you looked to see what he took?"

"No. But my jewels were all knocking about on the dressing table. I suppose he got them."

"Well," said Mrs. Tennant, "let's be thankful that he didn't get mine."

"Dear, kind Mr. Hemingway: You have heard of the great robbery and of my dreadful fright. But there is no use crying about it. It is one of those dreadful things, I suppose, that simply have to happen. The burglar was smooth shaven. How awful that this should have to happen in Aiken of all cities. In Aiken where we never have felt hitherto that it was ever necessary to lock the door. I suppose Mr. Powell's nice hardware store will do an enormous business now in patent bolts. Papa is going to offer $5,000 reward for the return of my jewels, and no questions asked. Do you know, I have a feeling that you are going to be instrumental in finding the stolen goods. I have a feeling that the thief (if he has any sense at all) will negotiate through you for their return. And I am sure the thief would never have taken them if he had known how badly it would make me feel and what a blow he was striking at the good name of Aiken.

"I am, dear Mr. Hemingway, contritely and sincerely yours,

"SAPPHIRA TENNANT,
"(formerly Dolly Tennant.)"

But Mr. Hemingway refused to touch the reward, and Miss Tennant remained in his debt for the full amount of her loan. She began at once to save what she could from her allowance. And she called this fund her "conscience money."

Miss Tennant and David Larkin did not meet again until the moment of the latter's departure from Aiken. And she was only one of a number who drove to the station to see him off. Possibly to guard against his impulsive nature, she remained in her runabout during the brief farewell. And what they said to each other might have been (and probably was) heard by others.

Aiken felt that it had misjudged Larkin, and he departed in high favor. He had paid what he owed, so Aiken confessed to having misjudged his resources. He had suddenly stopped short in all evil ways, so Aiken confessed to having misjudged his strength of character. He had announced that he was going out west to seek the bubble wealth in the mouth of an Idaho apple valley, so Aiken cheered him on and wished him well. And when Aiken beheld the calmness of his farewells to Miss Tennant Aiken said: "And he seems to have gotten over that."

But Larkin had done nothing of the kind, and he said to himself, as he lay feverish and restless in a stuffy upper berth: "It isn't because she's so beautiful or so kind; it's because she always speaks the truth. Most girls lie about everything, not in so many words, perhaps, but in fact. She doesn't. She lets you know what she thinks and where you stand . . . and I didn't stand very high."

There had been wistaria in Aiken. There was snow in New York. There was a hurricane in Chicago. But in the smoker bound west there was a fine old gentleman in a blue serge suit and white spats who took a fancy to David, just when David had about come to the conclusion that nothing in the world looked friendly except suicide.

If David had learned nothing else from Miss Tennant he had learned to speak the truth. "Any employer that I am ever to have," he resolved, "shall know all that there is to be known about me. I shall not try to create the usual impression of a young man seeking his fortune in the west purely for amusement." And so, when the preliminaries of smoking room acquaintance had been made—the cigar offered and refused, and one's reasons for or against smoking plainly stated—David was offered (and accepted) the opportunity to tell the story of his life.

"I love to smoke," he said, "but I've promised not to."

"Better habit than liquor," suggested the old gentleman in the white spats.

"I've promised not to drink."

"Men who don't smoke and who don't drink," said the old gentleman, "usually spend their time running after the girls. My name is Uriah Grey."

"Mine is David Larkin," said David, and he smiled cheerfully, "and I've promised not to make love."

"What—never?" exclaimed Mr. Grey.

"Not until I have a right to," said David.

Mr. Grey drew three brightly bound volumes from between his leg and the arm of his chair, and intimated that he was about to make them a subject of remark.

"I love stories," he said, "and in the hope of a story I paid a dollar and a half for each of three novels."

"O," said David, "if it's my story you want, I don't mind a bit. It will chasten me to tell it, and you can stop me the minute you are bored."

And then slip by slip, and bit by bit, he told his story, withholding only the sex of that dear friend who had loaned him the $5,000 and to whom he had bound himself by promises.

"Well," said Mr. Grey, when David had finished, "I don't know your holding out powers, Larkin, but you do certainly speak the truth without mincing."

"That," said David, "is a promise I have made to myself in admiration of and emulation of my friend. But I have had my little lesson and I shall keep the other promises until I have made good."

"And then?" Mr. Grey beamed.

"Then," said David, "I shall smoke and I shall made love."

"But no liquor."

David laughed.

"I have a secret clause in my pledge" said he; "it is not to touch liquor except on the personal invitation of my future father-in-law, whoever he may be." But he had Dolly Tennant's father in his mind, and the joke seemed good to him.

"Well," said Mr. Grey, "I don't know as I'd go into apple growing. You haven't got enough capital."

"But," said David, "I intend to begin at the bottom and work up."

"When I was a youngster," said Mr. Grey, "I began at the bottom of an apple tree and worked my way to the top. There I found a wasp's nest. Then I fell and broke both arms. That was a lesson to me. Don't go up for your pile, my boy. Go down. Go down into the beautiful earth and take out the precious metals."

"Good heavens!" exclaimed David; "you're the Mr. Grey of Denver."

"I have a car hitched on to this train," said the magnate; "I'd be glad of your company at dinner—7:30. It's not every young man that I'd invite. But seeing that you're under bond not to make love until you've made good, I can see no objection to introducing you to my granddaughter."

. . . .

"Grandpa," said Miss Violet Grey, who was 16, spoiled, and exquisite, "make that poor boy stop off at Denver, and do something for him."

"But," said Mr. Grey (Mr. "Iron Grey," some called him), "if I take this young fellow up it won't be to put him down in a drawing room, but in a hole a thousand feet deep, or thereabouts."

"And when he comes out," said she, "I shall have returned from being finished in Europe."

"And if I make him?" The old gentleman smiled provokingly.

"Why," said she, "then I'll break him."

"Or," said her grandfather, who was used to her sudden fancies and subsequent disenchantments, "or else you'll shake him."

Then he pulled her ears for her, and sent her to bed.

In one matter David was, from the beginning of his new career, firmly resolved. He would in no case write Miss Tennant of his hopes and fears. If he was to be promoted she was not to hear of it until after the fact; and she should not be troubled with the sordid details of his savings bank account. As to fears, great at first, these dwindled, became atrophied, and were consumed in the fire of work from the moment when that work changed from a daily nuisance to a daily miracle, at once the exercise and the reward of intelligence. His work, really light at first, seemed stupendous to him because he did not understand it. As his understanding grew he was given heavier work, and behold! it seemed more light. He discovered that great books had been written upon every phase of bringing forth metal from the great mother earth; and he snatched from long days of toil time for more toil, and burned his lamp into the night, so that he might add theory to practice.

I should like to say that David's swift upward career owed thanks entirely to his own good habits, newly discovered gifts for mining engineering, and industry; but a strict regard for the truth prevents. Upon his own resources and talents he must have succeeded in the end; but his success was the swifter for the interest, and presently affection, that Uriah Grey himself contributed toward it. In short, David's chances came to him as soon as he was strong enough to handle them; and were even created on purpose for him; whereas if he had had no one behind him he must have had to wait interminably for them. But the main point, of course, is that, as soon as he began to understand what was required of him, he began to make good.

His field work ended about the time that Miss Violet Grey returned from Europe "completely finished and done up," as she put it herself, and he became a fixture of growing importance in Mr. Grey's main offices in Denver and a thrill in Denver society. His baby w's instead of rolling r's thrilled the ladies; his good habits, coupled with his manliness and success, thrilled the men.

"He doesn't drink," said one.

"He doesn't smoke," said another.

"He doesn't bet," said a third.

"He can look the saints in the face," said a fourth; and a fifth, looking up, thumped upon a bell that would summon a waiter, and with emphasis said:

"And we like to have him around!"

Platonic friendships became the rage. David himself, as leader, maintained a dozen such, chiefest of which was with the newly finished Miss Grey. At first her very soul revolted against a friendship of this sort. She was lovely and she knew it; with lovely clothes she made herself even lovelier, and she knew this, too. She was young, and she rejoiced in it. And she had always been a spoiled darling and she wished to be made much of, to cause a dozen hearts to beat in the breast where but one beat before, to be followed, waited on, adored, bowed down to, and worshiped. She wished yellow flowering jealousy to sprout in David's heart instead of the calm and loyal friendliness to which alone the soil seemed adapted. She knew that he often wrote letters to a Miss Tennant; and she would have liked much to have this Miss Tennant in her power and to have scalped her there and then.

This was only at first when she merely fancied David rather more than other young men. But a time came when her fancy was stronger for him than that; and then it seemed to her that even his platonic friendship was worth more than all the great passions of history rolled into one. Then from the character of that spoiled young lady were wiped clean away, as the sponge wipes marks from a slate, vanity, whims, temper, tantrums, thoughtlessness, and arrogance, and in their places appeared the opposites. She sought out hard spots in people's lives and made them soft; sympathy and gentleness radiated from her; thoughtfulness and steadfastness.

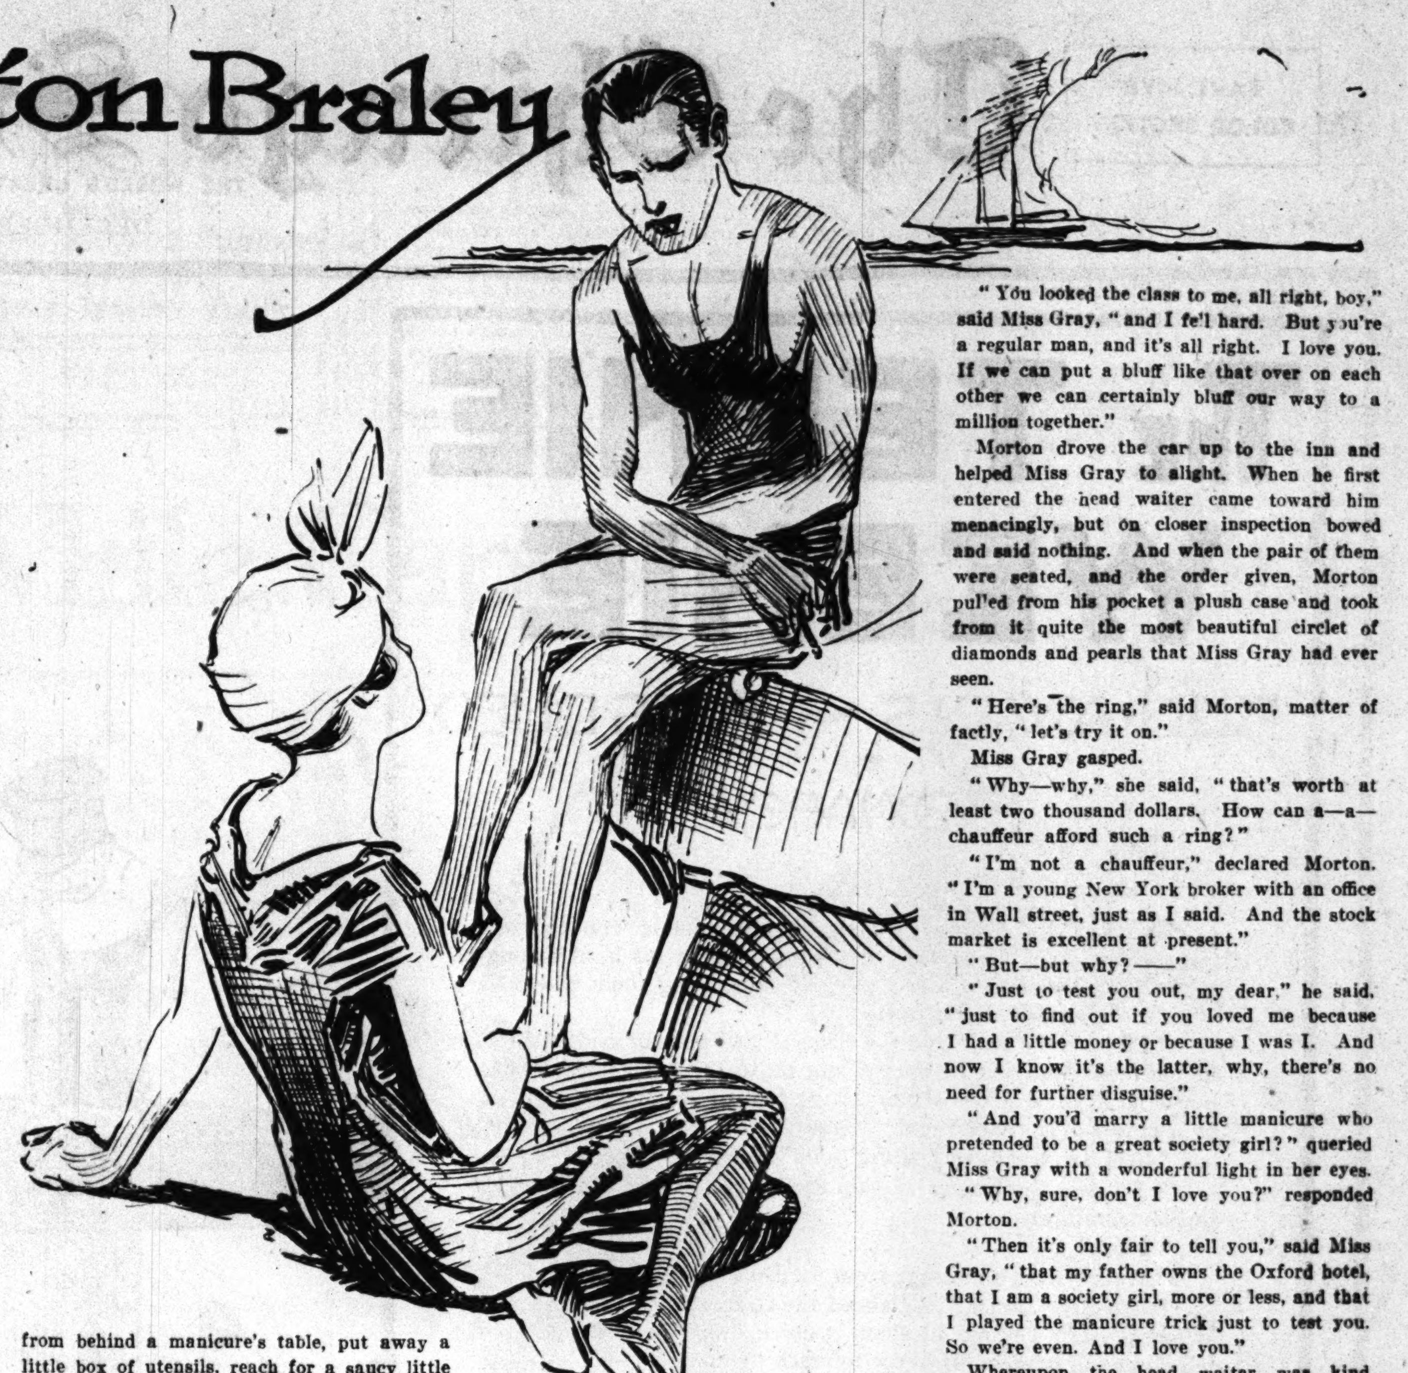
CLASS

by Berton Braley

If You Know Anything About Poker You'll Enjoy This Story, Though There Isn't a Thing In It About That Game.



IN a land where castes hold rigid, the social bluffer finds his task no cinch. But in a country where about the only mark of caste is the dollar mark—a mark which every man may win or lose overnight—the art of putting over the big stall flourishes splendidly, and is recognized universally as an amusing American talent which furnishes material for paragraphers and comic artists innumerable.

Falls Morton, who had studied, through pleasantly cynical eyes, the ways of the winter climber and the summer bluffer, who had trained himself by observation, reading, and what might be called an intuitive sense of social values to recognize Vere de Vere from Nere de Vere and patrician from parvenu, looked upon the lovely lady who reclined in the sand and placed her at once.

Then, because introductions and rigid formalities are largely the fetiches of the middle classes and never observed by those of the upper crust or the bottom strata, he spoke to her.

"I'm Falls Morton," he said, without further preliminary—as though his being Falls Morton were a letter of introduction and a master key to all social acquaintance. "We're at the same place, you know; I saw you at breakfast this morning. Won't you take a swim with me?"

The girl looked him over with a coolly appraising eye, took in his lean brown figure, his fine tanned face, his easy poise—as assured and comfortable as though he stood bowing before her in an evening dress at a ball where they had been properly introduced, instead of in a bathing suit at a beach where they both were taking their first plunge of the summer.

"Thanks," she said, "I will take a swim. Help me up, please." Miss Angela Gray didn't often make mistakes in estimates of class, either.

Morton found her a slow but enduring swimmer, who loafed quietly through the water and negotiated without fatigue distances which left him puffing and trembly. He had the feeling that this was a girl adequate to almost any situation, as confident and competent and unfretted in the eddies and swirls of the social sea as she seemed in the friendly embrace of old ocean.

When you discover a seashore companion who is at all congenial you are daily, hourly, minutely finding new fields into which that congeniality extends. You have more chance, for one thing. City friendships grow by weeks and months, their growths must be confined to nonworking hours, which are few and not always free for affection, but at the shore or the mountain hotel companionships spring up swiftly and achieve gigantic fruition in hours and days. All this because a summer resort vacation gives you all your time for friendship—or love.

Therefore Falls Morton and Miss Angela Gray were pleasant acquaintances the first day, first name companions the second, old, old friends the third, regular pals the fifth, in the twilight zone of uncertainty and wonder the sixth, miserably, gloriously, agonizingly, ecstatically, irremediably in love the seventh, and engaged the eighth day of their acquaintance.

Of course it was more or less of a foregone conclusion from the first. That strange sense which both possessed for detecting caste naturally drew them together when they recognized caste in each other. Then, too, they were indubitably the best looking pair at Sea Wall beach, and it happened that intellectually they were matched. Also and furthermore and as well they just naturally liked each other, and from that just naturally loved each other.

In this way Fate and propinquity and summer sun—and moon—and white beaches and blue seas and breeze-swept summer ballrooms where violins and 'cellos crooned sensuous tangos and wildering waltzes—worked their old fashioned magic and flung those two into that breathless embrace from which the girl emerged to sigh, as girls always seem to do.

"And are you absolutely sure you love me? It has been such a little while."

Whereupon Falls Morton answered, as some ten billion men in history and before have answered substantially the same question in some ten thousand dead or living languages and dialects:

"Of course I am sure. And as to its being only a little while, dearest, it seems as if I had known you always. The mere number of days has nothing to do with it."

"But suppose," suggested Angela, "suppose you should find out something perfectly dreadful about me. That I was a—a—well, a kind of a thief or something. Then you might wish you hadn't been in such a hurry."

"You couldn't be anything like that," replied Morton, "but if you were I think my love would forget it. It's been only eight days, if you insist on counting them, but sweetheart, I'm in love with you for keeps! And that goes."

And the rest of the conversation between these two during the days left of their stay is quite ridiculous to record. If you've been there yourself you know—and if you haven't, well, there's a lot of things in life still to come to you.

They went back citywards together, not in the plebeian train but in his gray car in which they had had many a drive during the two wonder weeks they had been at the beach, but when he wanted to drive her to her house she would not hear of it. She insisted that she had to look after the trunk she had expressed to town, and do some shopping besides. Therefore he must let her off at the entrance to one of the big department stores and get back to his office in Wall street.

But she did promise that he might come and call for her the next day at the Oxford, where she was to have lunch with a friend, and she further promised that she would not forget that he loved her and that she had promised to marry him.

"Though maybe you'll want to forget it at that," he warned her. "You're taking a long chance in accepting me in eight days, you know."

"Do you want to get out of it?" asked Miss Gray, with a little quiver in her voice. "Maybe you're afraid—of me? Maybe you weren't so sure of your love as you thought when you t-told me about it."

But Morton patted her hand and reassured her he hadn't any such idea—he did love her, he would always love her, and he was going to buy her a diamond circlet for the engagement ring and put it on when he came for her the next day.

Which seemed to leave her satisfied, though after he left her and drove away, she turned into the store with a doubtful smile, saying to herself:

"I wonder."

And he drove with automatic skill through the packed streets while he smiled cynically to himself and said:

"I wonder."

The barber shop at the Oxford has a clear plate glass window that gives directly on the street and shows to the passer-by every nook and corner of that immaculate and modern tonsorial emporium. That is why, when Morton drove up in his car, he could see with cruel distinctness Miss Angela Gray get up from behind a manicure's table, put away a little box of utensils, reach for a saucy little hat on its peg, and trip out to greet him. But if he felt astonishment he showed none, while she, when she noted that he wore a chauffeur's outfit, stood stock-still in the middle of the sidewalk for a moment before she controlled her amazement. But she got in and the car slipped smoothly away.

There wasn't a word between them until they reached the green reaches of the park, when he turned and looked her in the eyes.

"Well," he said, indicating his costume.

"Well?" said she, making motions like a girl buffing nails.

They were running slowly. He glanced back and front of them—then his arm went about her and—his face bent over hers.

"It's all right with me, kid, if it's all right with you," he said, and for all answer she kissed him.

"And you don't care if I'm a manicure?" she asked.

"Not a bit," he replied, "unless you object to my being a chauffeur. I've got a good boss—he let me have the car that whole vacation just for my own fun. So I bluffed the hotel to a fareyouwell. They all thought I was the boss—even you, didn't you, little one?"

"You looked the class to me, all right, boy," said Miss Gray, "and I fell hard. But you're a regular man, and it's all right. I love you. If we can put a bluff like that over on each other we can certainly bluff our way to a million together."

Morton drove the car up to the inn and helped Miss Gray to alight. When he first entered the head waiter came toward him menacingly, but on closer inspection bowed and said nothing. And when the pair of them were seated, and the order given, Morton pulled from his pocket a plush case and took from it quite the most beautiful circlet of diamonds and pearls that Miss Gray had ever seen.

"Here's the ring," said Morton, matter of factly, "let's try it on."

Miss Gray gasped.

"Why—why," she said, "that's worth at least two thousand dollars. How can a—a—chauffeur afford such a ring?"

"I'm not a chauffeur," declared Morton. "I'm a young New York broker with an office in Wall street, just as I said. And the stock market is excellent at present."

"But—but why?——"

"Just to test you out, my dear," he said, "just to find out if you loved me because I had a little money or because I was I. And now I know it's the latter, why, there's no need for further disguise."

"And you'd marry a little manicure who pretended to be a great society girl?" queried Miss Gray with a wonderful light in her eyes.

"Why, sure, don't I love you?" responded Morton.

"Then it's only fair to tell you," said Miss Gray, "that my father owns the Oxford hotel, that I am a society girl, more or less, and that I played the manicure trick just to test you. So we're even. And I love you."

Whereupon the head waiter was kind enough to turn his back while two of his guests kissed across the table.

They've been married two years now, and there's a third member of the family who's half a year old, but neither one of the parties to the contract has yet found courage to admit that they had known all about each other almost from the first, and that neither one of them had been deceived for an instant. They had both consulted the hotel clerk, who, on society information, had Town Topics beaten at the quarter.

And most true believers in romance will hope that neither Morton nor Angela ever learns the truth.

SAPPHIRA

Her grandfather, who had been reading Ibsen, remarked to himself: "It may be artistically and dramatically inexcusable for the ingénue suddenly to become the heroine—but I like it. As to the cause——" and the old gentleman rested in his deep chair till far in the night, twiddling his thumbs and thinking long thoughts. Finally, frowning and troubled, he rose and went off to his bed.

"Is it," thought he, "because he gave his word not to make love until he had made good—or is it because he really doesn't give a damn about poor little Vi? If it's the first reason why, he's absolved from that promise, because he has made good, and every day he's making better. But if it's the second reason, why then this world is a wicked, dreary place. Poor little Vi—poor little Vi . . . only two things in the whole universe that she can't get—the moon and David—the moon and David——"

About noon the next day David requested speech with his chief.

"I haven't had a vacation in a year" said David. "Will you give me three weeks, sir?"

"Want to go back east and pay off your obligations?"

David nodded.

Mr. Grey smiled.

"I suppose you'll come back smoking like a chimney, drinking like a fish, betting like a bookmaker, and keeping a whole chorus in picture hats."

"I think I'll not even smoke," said David. "About a month ago the last traces of hankering left me, and I feel like a free man at last."

"But you'll be making love right and left," said Mr. Grey cheerfully, but with a shrewd eye upon the young man's expression of face.

David looked grave and troubled. He appeared to be turning over difficult matters in his mind. Then he smiled gayly.

"At least I shall be free to make love if I want to."

"Nonsense," said Mr. Grey. "People don't make love because they want to. They do it because they have to."

Again David looked troubled and a little sad, perhaps.

"True," said he. And he walked meditatively back to his own desk, took up a pen, meditated for a long time and then wrote:

"Best friend that any man ever had in the world! I shall be in Aiken on the 25th, bringing with me that which I owe and can pay, and deeply conscious of that deeper debt that I owe but never can hope to pay. But I will do what I can. I will not now take back the promises I gave, unless you wish; I will not do anything that you do not wish. And if all the service and devotion that is in me for the rest of time seem worth having to you, they are yours. But you know that.

"DAVID."

This, looking white, tired, and austere, he reread, folded, enveloped, stamped, sealed, and addressed to Miss Tennant.

……

Neither the hand which Miss Tennant laid on his nor the cigaret which she lighted for him completely mollified Mr. Billy McAllen. He was no longer young enough to dance with pleasure to a maiden's whims. The experience of dancing from New York to Newport and back and over the deep ocean and back and up and down Europe and back with the late Mrs. McAllen—now Mrs. Jimmie Greenleaf—had sufficed. He would walk to the altar any day with Miss Tennant but he would not dance.

"You have so many secrets with yourself," he complained, "and I'm so very reasonable."

"True, Billy," said Miss Tennant. "But if I put up with your secrets you should put up with mine."

"I have none," said he, "unless you are rudely referring to the fact that I gave my wife such grounds for divorce as every gentleman must be prepared to give to a lady who has tired of him. I might have contracted a pleasant liaison; but I didn't. I merely drove up and down Piccadilly with a notorious woman until the courts were sufficiently scandalized. You know that."

"But is it nothing," she said, "to have me feel this way toward you?" And she leaned and rested her lovely cheek against his.

"At least, Dolly," said he, more gently, "announce our engagement, and marry me inside of six months. I've been patient for eighteen. It would have been easy if you had given a good reason . . ."

"My reason," said he, "will be in Aiken tomorrow."

"And you'll tell me the reason tomorrow?"

She shook her head.

"Not tomorrow, Billy—now."

He made no comment, fearing that she might seize upon any as a pretext for putting him off. But he slipped an arm around her waist.

"Tighter if you like," she said. "I don't mind. My reason, Billy, is a young man. Don't let your arm slacken that way. I don't see any one or anything beyond you in any direction in this world. You know that. There is nothing in the expression 'a young man' to turn you suddenly cold toward me. Don't be a goose. . . . Not so tight." They laughed happily. "I will even tell you his name," she resumed—"David Larkin; and I was a little gone on him, and he was over ears with me. You weren't in Aiken the year he was. Well, he misbehaved something dreadful, Billy; betted himself into a deep, deep hole, and tried to float himself out. I took him in hand, loaned him money, and took his solemn word that he would not even make love until he had paid me back. There was no real understanding between us, only——"

"Only?" McAllen was troubled.

"Only I think he couldn't have changed suddenly from a little fool into a man if he hadn't felt that there was an understanding. And his letters, one every week, confirm that; though he's very careful, because of his promise, not to make love in them. . . . You see, he's been working his head off—there's no way out of it, Billy—for me. . . . If you hadn't crossed my humble path I think I should have possessed enough sentiment for David to have been—the reward."

"But why," said he, "when you got to care for me didn't you let this young man learn gradually in your letters to him that—that it was all off."

"I was afraid, don't you see," said she, "that if the incentive was suddenly taken away from him—he might go to pieces. And I was fond of him, and I am proud to think that he has made good for my sake, and the letters. . . . O, Billy, it's a dreadful mess.

"He will think me such a—a liar. And I'm not a liar, Billy, am I? I'm just unlucky."

"I don't believe," said he tenderly, "that you ever told a story in your whole sweet life."

"O," she cried, "I do love you when you say things like that to me. . . . Let's not talk about horrid things any more, and mistakes and bugbears. . . . If we're going to show up at the golf club tea. . . . It's Mrs. Carrol's today and we promised her to come."

"O," said McAllen, "we need not start for ten minutes. . . . When will you marry me?"

"In May," she said.

"Good girl," said he.

"Billy," she said presently, "it was all the first Mrs. Billy's fault—wasn't it?"

"No, dear," said he, "it wasn't. It's never all of anybody's fault. Do you care?"

"No."

"Are you afraid?"

"No."

"Do you love me?"

"Yes."

"How much?"

"So much," and she made the gesture that a baby makes when you ask, "How big's the baby?"

"What's your name?"

"Dolly."

"Whose girl are you?"

"I'm Billy McAllen's girl."

"All of you?"

She grew very serious in a moment.

"All of me, Billy—all that is straight in me, all that is crooked, all that is white, all that is black. . . ."

But he would not be serious.

"How about this hand? Is that mine?"

"Yours."

He kissed it.

"This cheek?"

"And this?"

"Yours."

"These eyes?"

"Yours."

"Both yours."

He closed them, first one, then the other.

Then a kind of trembling seized him, so that it was evident in his speech.

"This mouth, Dolly?"

"Mumm."

And so, as the romantic school has it, "the long day dragged slowly on."

……

Miss Tennant sat very low, with her hands clasped over her knees; a brocade and Irish lace workbag spilled its contents at her feet. She wore a twig of tea olive in her dress so that the whole room smelled of ripe peaches. She had never looked lovelier or more desirable.

"David!" she exclaimed. Her tone at once expressed delight at seeing him, and was an apology for remaining languidly seated. And she looked him over in a critical, maternal way.

"If you hadn't sent in your name," she said, "I should never have known you. You stand taller and broader, David. You filled the doorway. But you're not really much bigger, now that I look at you. It's your character that has grown. . . . I'm so proud of you."

David was very pale. It may have been from his long journey. But he at least did not know, because he said that he didn't when she asked him.

"And now," she said, "you must tell me all that you haven't written."

"Not quite yet," said David. "There is first a little matter of business. . . ."

"O—" she protested.

But David counted out his debt to her methodically, with the accrued interest.

"Put it in my workbag," she said.

"Did you ever expect to see it again?"

"Yes, David."

"Thank you," he said.

"But I," she said, "I, too, have things of yours to return."

"Of mine?" He lifted his eyebrows expectantly.

She waved a hand, white and clean as a cherry blossom, toward a claw footed table on which stood decanters, ice, soda, cigarets, cigars, and matches.

"Your collateral," she said.

"O," said David. "But I have decided not to be a backslider."

"I know," she said. "But in business—as a matter of form."

"O," said David, "if it's a matter of form, it must be complied with."

He stepped to the table, smiling charmingly, and poured from the nearest decanter into a glass, added ice and soda, and lifting the mixture touched it to his lips, and murmured, "To you."

Then he put a cigaret in his mouth, and after drawing the one breath that served to light it, flicked it, with perfect accuracy, half across the room and into the fireplace.

Still smiling, he walked slowly toward Miss Tennant, who was really excited to know what he would do next.

"Betcher two cents it snows tomorrow," said he.

"Done with you, David," she took him up merrily. And after that a painful silence came over them. David set his jaws.

"I gave you one more promise," he said. "Is that, too, returned?"

"Of course, she said, "all the promises you gave are herewith returned."

"Then I may make love?" he asked, very gently.

She did not answer for some moments, and then, steeling herself, for she thought that she must hurt him:

"Yes, David," she said slowly, "you may—as a matter of form."

"Only in that way?"

"In that way only, David—to me."

"I thought—I thought," said the young man in confusion.

"I made you think so," she said generously. "Let all of the punishment that can be heaped on me . . . David . . ." There was a deep appeal in her voice as for mercy and forgiveness.

"Then," said he, "you never did care—at all."

But even at this juncture Miss Tennant could not speak the truth.

"Never, David—never at all—at least not in that way," she said. "If I let you think so it was because I thought it would help you to be strong and to succeed. . . . God knows I think I was wrong to let you think so. . . ."

But she broke off suddenly a stream of extenuation that was welling in her mind; for David did not look like a man about to be cut off in the heyday of his youth by despair.

She had the tenderest heart; and in a moment the truth blossomed therein—a truth that brought her pleasure, bewilderment, and was not unmixed with mortification.

"The man," she said gently, "has found him another girl!"

The man bowed his head and blushed.

"But I have kept my promise, Dolly."

"Of course you have, you poor, dear, long suffering soul. O, David, when I think what I have been taking for granted I am humiliated, and ashamed—but I am glad, too. I cannot tell you how glad."

A pair of white gloves, still showing the shape of her hands, lay in the chair where Miss Tennant had tossed them. David brought her one of these gloves.

"Put it on," he said.

When she had done so, he took her gloved hand in his and kissed it.

"As a matter of form," he said.

She laughed easily, though the blush of humiliation had not yet left her cheeks.

"Tell me," she said, "what you would have done, David, if—if I did care."

"God punish me," he said gravely, "O, best best friend that ever a man had in the world, if I should not then have made you a good husband."

……

Not long after McAllen was with her.

"Well?" he said.

"Well," said she, "there was a train that he could catch. And I suppose he caught it."

"How did he—er, behave?"

"Considering the circumstances," said she, "he behaved very well."

"Is he hard hit?"

She considered a while, but the strict truth was not in that young lady.

"I think," she said, "that you may say that he is hard hit—very hard hit."

"Poor soul," said Billy tenderly.

"O, Billy!" she exclaimed, "I feel so false and so old."

"Old!" he cried. "You! You at 25 say that to me at ——"

"It isn't as if I was just 25, Billy," and she burst out laughing. "The terrible part of it is that I'm still 25."

But he only smiled and smiled. She seemed like a little child to him, all innocence, and inexperience, and candor.

"You are two days ahead of schedule, David. I'm glad to see you."

Though Uriah Grey's smile was bland and simple, beneath it lay a complicated maze of speculation; and the old man endeavored to read in the young man's face the answers to those questions which so greatly concerned him. Uriah Grey's eyesight was famous for two things—for its miraculous, almost chemical ability to detect the metals in ore and the gold in men. He sighed; but not so that David could hear. The magnate detected happiness where less than two weeks before he had read doubt, hesitation, and a kind of dumb misery.

"You have had a pleasant holiday?"

"A happy one, Mr. Grey." David's eyes twinkled and sparkled.

"Tell me about it."

"Well, sir, I paid my debts, and got back my collateral."

"Well, sir?"

"I tasted whisky," said David. "I lighted a cigaret, I registered a bet of 2 cents upon the weather, and I made love. I kissed the glove upon a lady's hand." He laughed. "It smelled of gasoline," he said.

Mr. Grey grunted.

"And what are your plans?"

"What!" cried David offendedly. "Are you through with me?"

"No, my boy—no."

David hesitated.

"Mr. Grey," he began, and paused.

"Well, sir?"

"It is now lawful for me to make love," said David; "but I should do so with a better grace if I had your permission and approval."

Mr. Grey was puzzled.

"What have I to do with it?"

"You have a granddaughter . . ."

"What!" thundered the old man. "You want to make love to my granddaughter!"

"Yes," said David boldly, "and I wonder what you are going to say"

"I have only one word to say—Hurry!"

……

"David!"

Spools of silk rattled from her lap to the floor. She was frankly and childishly delighted to see him again, and she hurried to him, and gave him both her hands. But he looked so happy that her heart misgave her for a moment, and then she read his eyes aright, just as long since he must have read the confession in hers. At this juncture in their lives there could not have been detected in either of them the least show of hesitation or embarrassment. It was as if two travelers in the desert, dying of thirst, should meet, and each conceive in hallucination that the other was a spring of sweet water.

Presently David was looking into the lovely face that he held between his hands. He had by this time squeezed her shoulders, patted her back, kissed her feet, her dress, her hands, her eyes and pawed her hair. They were both very short of breath.

"Violet," he gasped, "what is your name?"

"Violet."

"Whose girl are you?"

"I'm David Larkin's girl."

"All of you?"

"All—all—all——"

It was the beginning of another of those long, tedious afternoons. But to the young people concerned it seemed that never until then had such words as they spoke to each other been spoken, or such feelings of almost insupportable tenderness and adoration been experienced.

Yet back there in Aiken, Sapphira was experiencing the same feelings, and thinking the same thoughts about them; and so was Billy McAllen. And when you think that he had already been divorced once, and that Sapphira, as she herself (for once truthfully) confessed, was still 25, it gives you as high an opinion of the little bare god—as he deserves.

The TEENIE WEENIE

RUN-AWAYS are RESCUED.

BY
WM. DONAHEY.

"GENERAL, there's a strange mouse outside who wants to see you," announced the Cook, popping his head through the doorway of the Teenie Weenie sitting room where the General and the Doctor sat.

"I'll be right out," said the General, and putting aside the map he had been studying he hurried out on to the front porch, where he found a large mouse sitting at the foot of the steps surrounded by a crowd of curious Teenie Weenies.

"Wel, sir, what can I do for you?" asked the General.

"Are you the General?" said the mouse, eyeing the General's brilliant uniform.

"I am."

"Well, I have a message from the Dunce," said the mouse.

"From the Dunce!" exclaimed the General. "Is he all right? Where is he? Tell me all about it quick," and the General almost fell down the steps in his hurry to reach the mouse.

"They're locked in a cigar box. There's three of 'em," cried the mouse.

"Yes! Yes!" shouted the General. "There's Gogo, the Clown, and the Dunce."

"Well," continued the mouse, "an old man caught them and he had them locked up, and the Dunce asked me to come and tell you where they were."

The Teenie Weenies were much excited over the news and in a short time a rescue party was made up, and led by the mouse they set off to release the three prisoners.

"We've hunted every place we could think of," said the General, as the little party hurried along. "All the birds and squirrels for miles around have been looking for the lost Teenie Weenies, but we haven't a single trace of them."

"They ran away, didn't they?" asked the mouse.

"Yes," answered the General. "A little boy wrote us a letter and asked us to come and live with him, and the Dunce, Gogo, and the Clown thought it would be fun to live with a little boy, so they ran away."

Early the next morning the rescue party arrived at the old man's house, and, climbing up the steps, they crawled under the door into the house.

"There is the cigar box where the old man keeps them," cried the mouse, sitting up and pointing with one of his feet to a shelf which was fastened to the wall above the kitchen sink.

With the help of string, which the little men had brought, they soon climbed up to the shelf, where, talking through the air holes which the old man had bored in the box, they assured the prisoners that they would soon be rescued.

The old man had placed a large iron bolt on top of the box to keep the top down, and all the prying and pulling the Teenie Weenies could do would not move it.

"Well," said the Turk, "we'll have to send home and get some pulleys before we'll be able to move this bolt, and that will take two more days at the least."

"Vell, shust vate a minute," cried the Dutchman, looking thoughtfully at a paper oyster bucket that lay on the floor near the sink. "I tink dot I have a scheme vot vill be better yet un much easier."

"What is it, Dutchy?" asked the Cook.

"Vell, ve can take dot baper bucket un pull it up to der sink right under der schpigot un den make it fast by der bolt, un ven der bucket is full of vatter de bucket vill be heavier than der bolt un it vill pull der bolt down yet."

"That's what I call a brilliant idea," shouted the Old Soldier. "Dutchy, you've got a big brain in that fat head of yours."

The Teenie Weenies soon pulled the bucket up under the spigot, and fastening one end of the string to the bolt they sat down to watch the dripping water from the faucet fill the bucket. Slowly the bucket filled, and when the water in the bucket grew heavier than the bolt it fell to the sink, carrying the bolt with it.

The Teenie Weenies quickly lifted the lid of the cigar box and pulled out the three runaways, who were overjoyed to once more see their friends.

Two days later the Teenie Weenies arrived at Shoe Hurst, where the little runaways were given a royal welcome.

It has since been reported that the General and each of the runaways visited the Teenie Weenie woodshed, when they got home, and that Gogo, the Dunce, and the Clown received a good switching with a toothpick as a gentle reminder that it is very wrong to run away from home.

NOTEWORTHY in the attire of the winter garbed women who throng the streets and invade the stores in search of Christmas gifts is their gayly colored headgear. Red, always conspicuous, appears in many lovely shades. Delicate flesh pink as well as the bright American Beauty red and a host of other shades, including many lovely wine colors, are much worn. There are also fascinating shades of blue and gold. Interesting shapes, too, are characteristic of the modes now in vogue, and several attractive models are illustrated on this page.

Flesh velours is chosen for the clever little chapeau whose upturned brim is fashioned like a fan and forms a pleasing background for the slender silver feathers that fare forth from a bejeweled motif. To the left is another smart hat. This is developed in bronze velours and trimmed with inverted wings tipped with gold.

In the opposite corner is a particularly smart hat made of nattier blue velvet. The brim, folded back from the face, undergoes a novel extension on one side, so that a suitable foundation is secured for the tufted plumes that are attached like the widespread arms of a windmill. To the left of this creation is a severely tailored turban. In spite of its unbending outline it is decidedly chic, and the novel trimming of silver quills gives a dash of brilliance to the soft gray felt from which the chapeau is evolved.

Velours in a lovely soft shade of gray is selected for the attractive cap that is worn with the costume at the left. A charming veil is draped about the face and the exquisitely embroidered motif with which it is elaborated adds a decorative touch to the hat. The costume is made of gray jersey, whose practical qualities have won the indorsement of the smartly costumed woman on both sides of the Atlantic. The skirt is enriched with bands of gray rabbit, a trimming that also appears on the sleeves. Straps of leather are used to outline the fronts of the little jacket and are festooned on the sides of the skirt, while a deep leather girdle encircles the waist.

Accentuating the long lines that are now desired by fashion's followers, the model at the left reveals many delightful style features. This simple frock is originated in tan jersey with black and gold embroidery in checker style. Bands of putois are found on the sides of the apron, for this appendage has again been presented by Dame Fashion. The outstanding plaits are topped with embroidery and a narrow ribbon girdle with novel fastening marks the waist line. The foldaway collar with square cut opening suggests a pleasing finish for the neck, while the sleeves also possess interest from the style point of view. The flat, close fitting cap of putois is trimmed with ball beaded hatpins, and the veil is arranged so that the beauty of its embroidered pattern is fully revealed.

As wintery weather really necessitates furs, Fashion has generously conceded to the needs of her followers, and most exquisite fur sets are designed. A charming three piece set is the center of attraction on this page. The hat is made of ermine, with large fluffy pompons of white fox. The cape is designed with a deep collar that, when folded down, extends well over the shoulder. But it may be raised to any height that the wearer elects by the adjusting of the soft silk scarf which is finished with balls of snowy fox. A barrel muff—not too generous in size—completes a lovely fur set that will give a rich finish to the simplest costume.

MEN AND WOMEN

THE discussion of birth control among its adherents and opponents seems to be the livest topic of the conversation of the day. The expression of a New York Municipal court judge who advised women to conserve the energy they are expending on suffrage and turn it into childbirth advocation started an uproar and more frenzied action among the disciples of the new doctrine.

By adherents of the cause all the miseries of the world appear to find germ in unlimited families—poverty, divorce, criminality, idiocy, insanity, cripples, squalor, and so on.

Moral Dangers of Birth Control.

And with a hysteria characteristic of the early London suffragists a militant turn is being associated with the spreading of the information to the poor on how to restrict the sire of their families.

Reading over the names of the apostles of the doctrine as they are printed in connection with their willingness to go to jail rather than see the poor unenlightened on the subject, one wonders how consciences and effort can be so easily adapted to a movement that has in it such moral dangers as that of birth control.

Fundamentally, the problem is one of religion—not one of Catholicism or Protestantism nor Hebraic—but the recognition or denial of the right of a soul to be born, and the acknowledgment of the will of God or the will of man in working out one's salvation.

Again, if the conditions arising from uncontrolled births are gloomy, the proposed remedy of contraceptives lets down the bars and opens the gates for general and unspeakable debauchery. It provides a flowery path for sexual debauchees to travel.

Birth control, preached as promiscuously as it is in its present status, follows the premise that man is first and last an animal, with his animal instinct to be considered in itself the end. If society is to permit sexual intercourse without the natural result, which is the one and only justification for it, civilization will seem to have returned to a plane even lower than the animal plane, for nature has decreed the bearing of young with animal gratification.

The idea that man's passional nature must of necessity be indulged has been proved to be purely mythical. When the creation of new and healthy human beings is denied the relation develops into one of simple lust and marriage is thereby degraded from the highest of human relations to a condition of legalized vice.

The fact that poverty prevents the poor man from acquiring the knowledge of family restriction his wealthy brother has is no argument for helping to spread it among the poor.

It undoubtedly is true that if the poorest laborers would restrict the size of their families they could raise the standard of living and increase to some degree their material welfare. But they have within their power an entirely innocent means of keeping down the number of their offspring—conjugal abstinence.

Instead of birth control pamphlets, therefore, why not instruct both poor and well to do to a better self-control, to a higher moral and spiritual standard, to a realization of their moral relation to succeeding generations? It does not follow with the arguments for birth control that "anything is right which any individual thinks is useful for him" any more than you could apply the theory to an infringement upon any other of the laws of man, God, and nature.

Taking a comprehensive view of the situation, you find a general weakening of moral fiber where the capacity to endure and the ability to do without is denied. These two things will forever remain the essential conditions of achievement. The restriction of the number of children to one or two for the sake of ease and material comfort reduces fatally the power of endurance and the ability to carry on sustained and effective labor. The children born under these conditions are affected even more than the parents, for they are deprived of the necessary training in endurance and the luxury and ease loving parents are kept before them as bad examples.

As a solution of the divorce difficulty birth control is the frailest kind of argument, since statistics prove beyond question of a doubt that the divorces occur chiefly among childrenless couples.

Before and After Marriage.

"The Tribune" will pay $1 for every letter published on marriage disillusions. Address Doris Blake, "Chicago Sunday Tribune." Write on only one side of the paper.

From Grave to Gay.

After a long courtship I married a dignified professional man. I was considerably surprised when he donned my jacket the first week of our marriage, called it a "skirt effect," and proceeded with a vigorous exhibition of the highland fling.

Doris Blake Says

If you were born this week you are

Prophetic.

This department appears every day in "The Daily Tribune."

Have you a perplexing love affair in which you need the counsel of a friend? Write Doris Blake, care "The Sunday Tribune." If you wish a personal reply send stamped and addressed envelope.

BORN the week beginning today, you are still under the influence of the Archer, Sagittarius, so that you have the penetrating foresight and the prophetic intuition so characteristic to this period. You are the ones who "hit the mark" not only in games of skill but also when angered, your shafts of sarcasm are invariably aimed at the weakest spots in your opponents' armor.

One authority states: "The sign of Sagittarius in the mystic planisphere is symbolized by Joseph, the revealer of dreams, who, whether in prison or vice regent of Egypt, scents the coming danger and suggests how to meet it."

This innate love of the mysterious explains your desire to become affiliated with mystic orders, for you can keep a secret as well as mind your own business. You rarely make a mistake if you follow your own intuitions, but are almost sure to be led astray if you rely upon the judgment of others.

Your mind at times seems to reach far out beyond the present, and so it is that you are sometimes accused of not telling the truth. Always apt to speak out your conclusions, and to feel sure that you are right, you make enemies unconsciously. But there is such a power about what you have to say that, willing or not, the persons addressed are bound to listen. When your words are free from anger and resentment they often effect needed reforms.

With you an emergency is an inspiration; your courage rises to the highest point, whereas you may have been previously considered timid and afraid. It is seldom that any of you Sagittarius people will be found without money, for you can earn a dollar while others are deploring the need of one.

More than one thing at a time on your hands distresses you exceedingly: You are born busy and keep so under all circumstances, but always want to finish one thing before you start another. With whatever comes to your attention, you are the soul of carefulness. In fact, you throw your whole being into your work with such force, to the absolute exclusion of everything else, that you may wear out completely before the conclusion, or end a "bundle of nerves." And because your ideas are large, you often undertake more than you can accomplish. You should not despise the "day of small things." If you would but take a little more rest and more frequent recreation, you would save yourself much suffering.

Although you are domestic and love your home, yet you like to move and find change of scene. You lay a great deal of stress on outward appearances, but you can make more out of nothing than any of the other signs. Give you Sagittarius women a little space in your back yard, where you can have a patch of flowers, and there will always be flowers on your table; or a few bright colored scraps and flowers and lo! a marvel of the milliner's art will result.

Every one recognizes your natural taste and tries to copy with anything but satisfactory results. For you are artistic and musical as well; some of the finest musicians have been born in this sign. Besides this profession, you will be successful in commercial enterprises of all kinds, and of course as a milliner, dressmaker, decorator, or designer.

An unhappy marriage makes a complete wreck of your life, so it behooves you Sagittarius people to weigh your matrimonial step carefully. Your most harmonious union will probably be with Aries, March 22-April 20, or with Virgo, Aug. 24-Sept. 23; a peaceful union may also result in a marriage with Libra, Sept. 24-Oct. 23, and with Gemini, May 22-June 22.

You will be most fortunate in your own sign, but may have some misfortune during the week beginning June 27. Your colors are red, green, and gold; birthstone, turquoise.

What to Say.

"Dear Miss Blake: When a young man has taken a young lady to a theater or auto riding and she afterwards thanks him, what should he say in reply? Our club had an argument, and I know you can settle it. L. G. P."

When the young lady thanks the man for a pleasant evening he responds courteously with a "Thank you, Miss ——; the pleasure has been all mine."

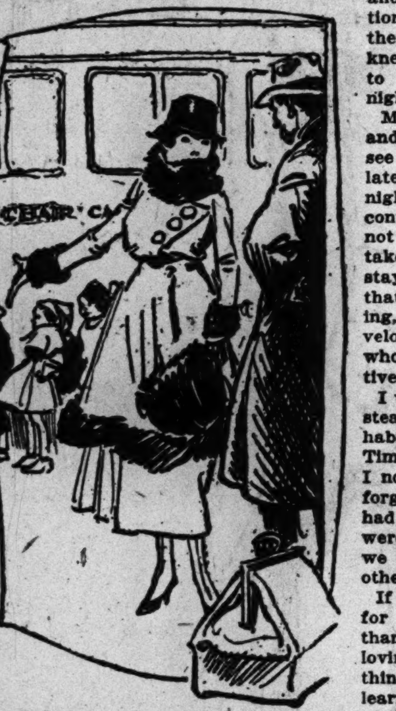
Real Love Stories

This department appears every day in "The Daily Tribune."

Do you know a real love story—one that is stranger than fiction? It is the idea that is wanted. No attention will be paid to literary style. "The Tribune" will pay $5 for every story published. Manuscripts will not be returned. Address Doris Blake, "The Tribune," Chicago.

A DAUGHTER BY ADOPTION.

A GIRL and I had been good friends for a year or more, though my mother disapproved of her. The girl, with her parents, moved to a distant town and occasionally, at lengthening intervals, I went to see her. However, she seemed less and less interesting and I seemed to be growing into mother's viewpoint. True, there was an undefinable charm about her that I could never analyze, but I had almost promised myself that this trip was positively the last.



She treated me cordially, as did her family. I had a pleasant time, and I flatter myself that I made her day enjoyable, too. But there was no spontaneity; something was lacking. We had nothing in common.

I was leaving on an early train after my rather colorless day. She was with me at the station, hoping to see a friend who was passing through before my train came in. The friend was not there. Instead we greeted a carload of orphans brought to the town for adoption.

They were a pathetic lot, those little waifs, whose parents had been swept away in a flood. The girl astonished me by her show of interest in the little unfortunates, and showed a wealth of sympathy and compassion quite unknown to me.

"Why don't you adopt one?" I asked, banteringly.

Her blue eyes darkened seriously. "I would if I had some one to clothe her."

"I'll do it." I spoke on the instant, expecting her to back out, but she did not and I was determined to be game. We hunted up the proper authorities and inquired the legal details of adoption. That would take several years, they said, but one of the caretakers knew the girl's parents and was glad to let her take a child home for the night, as accommodations were limited.

My train was allowed to whistle in and out without me, for I had decided to see the adventure through and take a later train that night. I missed the night train, too, for we had a hard time convincing her parents that we were not insane, and that we really meant to take care of the child ourselves. I stayed in that town a week, because that girl had suddenly become interesting, and the 2 year old baby girl was developing into a blossom. Of course, the whole town was curious and speculative, but that did not trouble us.

I went back home and settled down to steady work. I gave up all expensive habits and began saving with a purpose. Time that I had frittered away before I now spent in writing to the girl, not forgetting about our charge. We now had something in common in which we were so interested that, unconsciously, we became more interested in each other.

If I did my part in providing money for the child's clothes, that girl more than did her share in actual work and loving care. She had never done anything at home. Now she wanted to learn everything at once for the sake of the child. She learned sewing, cooking, washing, and sanitation. She read books on the care of children and made herself the baby's teacher and constant companion.

My mother, at first more displeased than ever, had finally become interested and made frequent visits to see the girl and our little charge. She was completely won by the charm and new competency of the girl. Her parents, too, had changed their estimate of me at the same time.

I was so busy that year that I made few trips, but we wrote, and her letters were a revelation of character and winsome womanhood. At the end of the year I was doing so well in business that I made a special trip and brought both girls home with me to provide for permanently.

Laugh When People Step On Your Feet

Wear those tight shoes! Read how to loosen a sore, tender corn so it lifts off with fingers

You reckless men and women who are pestered with corns and who have at least once a week invited an awful death from lockjaw or blood poison are now told by a Cincinnati authority to use a drug called freezone, which the moment a few drops are applied to any corn, the soreness is relieved and soon the entire corn, root and all, lifts out with the fingers. This new drug is a sticky substance which dries the moment it is applied and is said to simply shrivel the corn without inflaming or even irritating the surrounding tissue or skin. It is claimed that a quarter of an ounce of freezone will cost very little at any of the drug stores, but is sufficient to rid one's feet of every hard or soft corn or callus.

HOW TO COOK A DUCK.

DUCK is still an elite meat in its use but not in its price and scarcity. It promises to be the lowest in price this winter of any of the meats to which that adjective can be applied. The increased supply while lowering the price, has resulted also in a general increase in quality, a common phenomenon. When the great mass of people learn to eat duck, up the price will go, probably, as has the price of turkey, but at present it is, for the most part, the poor people and the rich who eat duck.

Unless one knows how to cook a duck, it is one of the most uneconomical of all birds, costing close up to a dollar or more a pound of actual edible meat. Poorly cooked and badly carved, probably a five pound duck would not yield as much as one pound of edible part. Rightly cooked a good fat five pound duck will yield nearly a pound of good fat for gravies, elegant slices for chafing dish use or to serve immediately after they are carved, a stock for a first gravy, made from the wings, gizzard, and heart, and a stock for vegetable cooking of its rack.

Here is the theme of good duck cookery or any good poultry cookery. Trussed birds ready for the pan and spit must be clean of every bit of down and pin feather. If these cannot be pulled off and out, they must be cut out. This may detract from the appearance of the roasted bird, but it is not possible to get meat of exquisite flavor without doing this work thoroughly. Whether the amount of work required to this end is worth while depends upon your point of view. "Manicuring" the bird is the term for this pin feather pulling in some households.

Duck at such elite prices as $2.50 an order from a public card, or any other publicly cooked poultry, is rarely worth the price charged for it. The only justification of such a price is exquisite flavor, not the fact that the hotel chef used the most expensive adjuncts to season the meat. The reason that I, who have trained my taste to penetrate almost any mask, cannot always enjoy these publicly cooked small meats is that I can sometimes taste the pin feathers and down. Roasted pin feather flavor gets thoroughly distributed, but even so thinned you can taste it. The natural flavor of some poultry is of the pin feather order, anyway, so that in cooking such meat we need to modify that flavor with vegetables rather than enhance it by feathers.

The fat of a young duck will melt in a dish on the top of an oven. Such low melting temperature is a sign of digestibility. Fat of beef has a high melting temperature, and, therefore, can be cooked at a higher temperature than can duck. Under the skin of a fine young duck there is nearly a half inch of fat. If the duck is cooked at the right temperature, not burned but well browned, this is like an exquisite crackling. The flavored fat from the roast may be used with any meat stock for all sorts of gravy, and remember, in making your plans, there is a good deal of it. Remember, also, that the character of the duck fat gives us the key to its cooking.

Because of its fat a duck shrinks a good deal in roasting, usually from a flat to a round frame, but for all that I would not stuff it. If celery or onions and a little sweet butter are hid within its frame, and it is cooked on a bed of vegetables, it may be a true sweet meat, comparable to the finest broiled chicken.

Orange, jelly, and wine flavored sauces (sherry wine usually), orange salad, mint, celery (cooked and uncooked), turnip, and spinach are the favorite accompaniments of duck. Their use is more seasonable now than when the one pound duckling of the summer season is the viand of the feast.

Cleaning and Trussing.

A little lighted alcohol is the cleanest fire to use for singeing poultry. Singe first or first pick out the pin feathers and any down that may remain in parts that will not be skinned. If there are little groups of pin feathers, as there are likely to be, and it is too interminable a job to remove them, I cut a little triangle just through the skin and remove the section filled with them. This causes more of the fat to cook out than is economical, so the fewer of these triangles the better, but it is better to have many than a pin feather flavor.

I believe in removing the "lights" and any other organs or tissues adhering to the backbone, and in washing out the bird until the water runs clean, as rapidly as possible. Water slips off the surface and cannot penetrate it, so I think it does no harm there. Wipe both outside and inside dry at once.

To truss it I tie the ends of the little drumsticks together, covering them with a little piece of new unbleached cotton if there is a bit of down around them, which it is next to impossible to remove. It is well to dedicate to the preparation of a duck one square of unbleached muslin, or one-fourth of one yard of this 5 cent cloth. The piece used to wipe may be dropped in the garbage without compunction. A little square may be used for the legs and another tied to a skewer may be used as a swab for the pan to get off all the brown for the gravy. If the wings have been removed there is no need of trussing that end of the frame, since the neck is negligible. If the skin around this is hard to clean I cut it off, though this may not be professional.

Vegetable Seasoning Bed.

Chop up two or three carrots, as many onions, part of a green pepper, a little celery, and other such seasonings as you think good, and put them on the bottom of the broiling pan, having removed the rack. An ounce of chopped ham and a little piece of ham fat is an addition. Bind these all with an ounce of sweet butter and spread them out in a thin cake. Add a little water and start them to cook directly over a burner, for the sake of having the pan hot through and through. The roasting is to be in the broiling oven with frequent turnings and bastings, so the duck will have much the same character as though cooked "a la broche" or on the spit.

One of the Gravies.

Scrape up the vegetables into a strainer and let the fat drain off them. Pour off the fat from the pan, being careful that the brown part at the bottom does not go with it. It will be best to pour this brown part and about a tablespoonful of fat to a cup of gravy into a frying or stew pan. Pour into the roasting pan a cup of the stock made of the wings, etc., and scrape off or rub with a swab the brown on the pan. Add to the fat and brown liquid a tablespoon of flour, and if the stock is cold add that without working fat and flour together.

You may get a smoother gravy in most cases by putting ingredients together cold and stirring all the time until the gravy boils, then turn the fire low and let it continue to cook until the flour is cooked—ten to twenty minutes. It may need a little salt.

This may be served separately or the duck may be sliced and reheated in it, if it is not carved and sent to the table straight from the oven. If made in the chafing dish the slices of duck complete a dish that is attractive.

Roast Duck.

Rub the trussed duck all over with a clove of garlic and then pour a little hot melted butter over it. A litttle butter with onions and celery is in the inside. Put the duck on its back on the bed of vegetables, and put the pan into the lowest slot in the broiling oven with the fire turned low. The fire should have been lighted for some time so that the oven is well seasoned with heat. There will be slow heat suitable for baking apples and other such things in the oven above.

At the end of ten minutes open the door—hope it opens down if you cook the duck in this fashion—and if the skin has browned a little turn and baste with the pan juices. If it has not browned as it should have done do not turn. Turn on back first and then on sides in turn, and baste every ten minutes for the hour or hour and ten minutes in which it is cooking. Good judgment is essential here, and a well basted bird may be cooked a little longer without harm than one not so treated. Scrape the vegetables well together so that they will not be blacked or, not until the duck is almost or quite done. It may be cooked in the same way in the oven, but the fire directly on it gives it that broiled quality which is an addition to flavor.

Add salt about ten minutes before removing from the oven. If the duck shrinks so that it will not lie in all the positions necessary, brace with vegetables. A piece of raw potato helps sometimes.

EASIER TO BUY THAN TO MAKE

NOW that we are in the midst of the annual Christmas rush—the rush of shopping and the rush of making and preparing gifts—I would like to say a word of warning to the girl who is employed to be careful in these next two weeks about overworking herself by laying too heavy a tax on her energy and vitality. She is the one who is going to feel most keenly the strain of the mad preparation for the holidays. As most of her waking hours are necessarily devoted to her job, the girl who works has scant time to prepare her gift list, which, by the way, is rarely a small one.

Garrett Price

A few weeks before Christmas, when her list is made up, she is often tempted, through a deeply rooted and an old fashioned idea of sentiment, to make with her own hands all the gifts she intends to bestow. It is a pretty sentiment and an ambitious one, but it is impractical and foolish for one with little leisure.

A few years ago, shortly after the holidays, I received a letter from a girl who had been employed. Just before Christmas, she wrote, she had worked so hard until a late hour every night making gifts for all her friends that her health had been undermined. At the time her letter was written she was so weak she was unable to work and was facing the bitter prospect of being an invalid for the rest of her life.

The letter was so pathetic and it impressed itself so on my mind thaat every year at this time when people are talking about the amount of work they are doing and are wondering how they are going to accomplish all they have to do before the 25th of December, I am reminded of the warning contained in this letter and feel impelled to pass it along.

If the pleasure and satisfaction which come to every girl through the giving and receiving of gifts at Christmas time are only to be gained by the worker at the expense of her health and means of livelihood, then it is up to her to forego that pleasure. However, if she sets about her task wisely by putting into it a bit of good judgment as well as sentiment, there is no reason why her list could not be well taken care of.

It is the spirit which prompted the giving of the gift that counts rather than the time, energy, and money spent for it. As much affection and good will might be represented in giving to some friend a pretty handkerchief or scarf which took only ten minutes to select and purchase as could be put into a gift which had been labored over every night for two weeks at the expense of nerves and eyesight.

With Perfect Health, a Heart, Brains, and a Genius for Work, Why Shouldn't Geraldine be the Beauty She is? asks

Antoinette Donnelly

This department appears every day in "The Daily Tribune."

MY first "offstage" view of Geraldine Farrar was from across the aisle and back a row at an afternoon rehearsal of the "Koenigskinder" at the Auditorium theater. The house was dark but for a half dozen outsiders, including myself. Miss Farrar was seated with Mr. Campanini a couple of rows back of the orchestra, aiding him in the work of directing the performance.

She was dressed in the little gray-blue dress of the "goosegirl," the rôle she plays in the Humperdinck opera. It wouldn't be an unkind appraisal to estimate the cost of the dress at a couple of dollars. For it doesn't require much material for a dress for the five foot five and about 135 pounds of our American songbird. Cut square at the neck and sleeves of nearly elbow length with a little gathering at the waist would describe the "lines" of the dress.

With her jet black hair, which waves naturally in large, soft undulations, brushed back off her pretty forehead and ending in a soft coil down on her neck and her small and shapely hands with artistically tapering fingers unjeweled she created a picture which I have tucked away in one of my mind lockets as something extremely welcome to cherish.

Her hands fascinated me as I watched her from across the aisle. They vie with her face in eloquence of expression.

"Alive" is the best word the dictionary could offer in summing up Geraldine Farrar. Her eyes, her smile, her hands, her brain prove the aptness of the word. When she got her cue to go on she jumped from Campanini's side and ran like a 12 year old over to the side of the house and back on the stage, displaying an agility one does not generally associate with a grand opera prima donna.

If you've never been back of the stage—of a grand opera stage at rehearsal, particularly—you won't be able to understand what a colossal test agility may be put to, for the scenery, not only of the rehearsing opera but of the evening's opera has to be dodged and "jumped." I followed her as best I could, but she had reached the spot behind the city gates through which she first burst upon the audience as "the goosegirl" and had her flock of geese subdued before I was released from the extended branches of a dead stage tree.

She said she would see me after the act in her dressing room, so I waited in the left wing. At the end of it she came running back. She never moves slowly, which undoubtedly keeps her young. A stage hand at my side who had been watching her stepped up to her and said: "O, Miss Farrar, that was beautiful!" She thanked him heartily and chatted with him for a minute, which produced a pleasant taste in my mouth and confirmed my suspicion that a very human being—one with a heart, is Miss Farrar.

We did some more jumping and vaulting and eventually landed in the dressing room of the beautiful American singer. "Just like herself," thought I, as we entered the room—simple, unaffected, unfrilled it was. Other stars we know would have demanded with due tempermental insistence curtains, more light, more comfortable chairs, and, maybe, a bigger star on the door.

"You are a pretty busy person," I said.

"O, but I love it," she said, meaning it.

"There's one genius I know I possess, and it is a genius for work," she added emphatically. "Perhaps it is because I am so healthy."

"You are healthy," I agreed wholeheartedly. "How do you keep yourself in such perfect physical trim?"

And here's where I got my first disappointment, as I had hoped to be able to tell you what exercises she did to keep her weight down, what she ate and what she didn't eat, and perhaps extract from her a secret formula for a life elixir, thereby making a friend for life of every woman who profited by the advice I would pass on.

Her skin is ivory tinted, fine grained, and firm. Her hair has the gloss that only good health imparts. And her figure is rounded out in graceful curves but not heavy. Not the slightest suspicion of that double chin wrinkle line one sees so frequently on singers—even on ones as young as Miss Farrar.

But what do you suppose she said when I asked her how she kept her weight down?

"What do I eat? O, everything I feel like eating. Of course, I don't eat things that I know would not agree with me," said Miss Farrar. "This impression of riotous eating and drinking and cigaret smoking that is attached to singers is all nonsense, as any one with common sense must realize that no voice can stand that for long, for the reason that a stomach disorder will betray itself first thing in the voice, and you can't drink and overeat without suffering digestive disturbances."

"I do keep regular hours," she added. "I never accept invitations to social affairs. I simply cannot do it and work. Of course, I know I lose out on friendships that I would like to keep up. But you know the demands of my work are exacting and I must content myself with the social side of life as I meet it in my work."

"About exercise?" I hinted.

"I never do a thing to exercise outside of my work, but that involves involuntary exercise and much of it," she said.

"I thought of that when I saw the way you were handled in 'Carmen,'" I said. "You touched the floor quite a few times—not exactly the way the physical culture exponents advise but—"

"I touched it with more than my finger tips," she laughed heartily.

"And then this summer in the movies," she added seriously, "I got in a lot of good exercise unconsciously."

"You ride horseback?" I questioned, her Joan of Arc picture in my mind.

"No I don't. I'm scared to death of a horse. I never was so frightened as on that horse. I thought any moment it would rear up and upset my dignity and a few bones, perhaps," she laughed.

"Do you swim or walk much?" I ventured further, it seeming impossible that this distinctly athletic looking person couldn't boast one pet athletic stunt.

"I know I ought to be athletic, but I'm not. I am more frightened of the water than of a horse. And I hate walking. I must have been born with an iron constitution," she added half apologetically.

I commented on the fact that during the rehearsal some of the singers kept furs around their throats while she went running around the theater with the thin, low necked dress.

"I never pamper myself that way," she said. "Of course, I wouldn't rush outdoors with my throat uncovered, but in here the air is at a pretty even temperature." And then I saw my last hope from a beauty editor's point of view fade away when she added like a bad little girl who knew she was saying something she shouldn't, "I hate fresh air."

"Are you fond of wearing jewels?" I asked.

"No. I have a lot of them, but I keep them locked up in the safe. I like a string of pearls and one ring, a diamond or some odd stone that harmonizes with the dress I am wearing. There are some types to whom jewels are becoming, but I'm not the type.

"I tell you what I like," she confided. "It is fur next my skin. I love the feel of it. I hate street clothes." And here comes the secret of why Geraldine doesn't walk more. She hates clothes that bind, or serges and goods with hard, rough finish, or stiff silks; she hates gloves and above all she hates street shoes. "This is the kind of shoe I like to wear," she demonstrated, pulling forth a pair of black satin pumps from under the big chair upon which she sat the entire interview in oriental fashion with her legs crossed under her. "I love clingy satins and velvets or any soft, slinky materials."

I asked her about the perfumes she liked best. And the answer of this inconsistently consistent young American was characteristic:

"I have no preference. One day I like oriental, heavy perfumes; another mignonette; another lily of the valley; another, something else again—just depends on the mood I'm in."

Color, Miss Farrar admitted, was a psychological influence upon her day and her mood. "Some colors depress me dreadfully," she said. "I love best the soft shell pinks, the varying shades of peacock blues, and the warm and lighter shades of green for clothes."

Just then a knock at the door, and a "come," and a hurried conversation in French, which the prima donna spoke fluently, and which interpreted meant that the act was going to be rehearsed over again and I must go! A handshake with a heart in it and a "thank you for coming to see me" from a woman with brains in her head and a delightful sense of humor and a thoroughly wholesome, unspoiled artist sent me out, saying: "What a rippingly nice person."

Just a word of warning to you, my sisters, in case you try to emulate Geraldine's disregard of health and beauty rules:

Napoleon got along on four hours' sleep, but there was only one Napoleon.

MARION HARLAND'S HELPING HAND

by MARION HARLAND

This department appears every day in "The Daily Tribune."

When an address or other information is wanted by mail a stamped, addressed envelope should accompany the request. Please do not send parcels to the office.

No Replies to Letters.

"I WONDER why the Cornerites dont' reply to us after they have sent in their requests. I have written many letters, wasting stamps, and so few reply. I answered one correspondent who offered worsted pieces in exchange for new cotton goods for quilts. I offered her eight yards. I have written twice and never received a reply, and have had several other experiences of the same sort. I have sent out the magazines to ten or twelve people and seeds to one or two and have offered seeds to others, but they did not reply. If they could only realize that we are wasting our stamps, paper, and time when we get no reply. You may send me a few more names for magazines. I have sent to all but two of the names you gave me or else written to them. P. F. H."

Is this experience that of many others of the constituency? Is there such carelessness and discourtesy common among our Cornerites? I would like to make excuses, such as nonreceipts of letters, sickness in the household, a press of work, etc., rather than believe that any one would write an application to the Corner, receive letters from those who wish to be of service, and calmly ignore such kindness. The least those can do who have taken our time, the space in the Corner, and the efforts of those who wish to aid them in getting their pleas answered, is to acknowledge the letters that come in reply to their printed appeals in the Helping Hand. The case is a little different of those who make an offer and get letters from those who do not take the trouble to inclose a stamp for reply. The woman who offers seeds or patches can hardly be blamed if when she receives a request to send these and no stamp is sent along she does not display great alacrity in putting up the parcel and paying postage on it herself. But when some one has asked for either of these articles and a Cornerite writes and expresses her willingness to supply them, the least that should be done would be to send an immediate answer to the generous offer. I am interested to know, as I said above, if this sort of rudeness is frequently met with in the Helping Hand.

Letters for Lonely Girl.

"I wonder if any of your lonely Cornerites would care to correspond with me. I would prefer girls between 17 and 25 years old, from the western states. "A. G."

This is a chance for a pleasant correspondence. Of course, the girls on each side would have to exchange references satisfactory to their parents or guardians. This is a necessary precaution we must exercise for the protection of the young girls of our constituency.

Asks Music for Daughter.

"Will you kindly let me have the address of Mrs. W. D. B., who so kindly offers music to some one? My daughter is struggling hard to keep up her practicing, but on account of sickness I cannot afford to buy her any music at present. I have made a lovely friend through the Corner. I sent her a few little articles and she has repaid me a thousandfold by her sweet words of appreciation and also by doing some lovely work for me. I have some post card views which I will send to any one desiring them. D. D. S."

Although Mrs. W. D. B. has given away the music to another Cornerite, I hope there may be some one else who can meet the wish of this correspondent. I am glad she has made a good friend through the Corner and I am sure she in turn has proved herself friendly.

Wants Sheet Music.

"Will you kindly inform me if the offers in the Helping Hand, such as sheet music, magazines, etc., are good for outsiders, as well as for those who live in the city? I am a shut-in in an insane hospital and would like some of the sheet music, if I am eligible to it. "Miss E. L. M."

There are no city limits or any other kind to those who are benefited by the members of the Helping Hand. The only claim is their need and you have a full right to the sheet music you crave. I shall hope to receive applications for your address from those who have the material with which to supply your desires.

Six Needy Children.

"I wish I could do something to help others, but have nothing except my labor. If any of the poor shut-ins have plain sewing they wish done and will send it to me and cut out what they wish made I shall be proud to help them and to do it for nothing. I have six children, from a boy of 10 years to a baby 16 months old, and if any of the Corner have discarded shoes and clothing that are not good enough for a city school I would be glad to pay postage on them. We find it hard to keep our children in school, as there is no place here where one can buy cheap clothing as one does in the city. I am a good seamstress and can make over almost anything to advantage. I would like especially to get an overcoat or raincoat for my two boys of 8 and 6 years of age. If they don't fit I would be happy to pass them on. We have had lots of sickness and just now have a hospital and operation bill to pay and so it keeps us busy trying to make ends meet. "J. M. T."

As I have said frequently before, I do not like to ask for clothing, but to me this seems a rather exceptional instance. The children are in need of articles to make them decent for school and it is the time of year when mothers are discovering that last year's garments have been outgrown while they are still whole and good. Will not some such mothers write to me for the address of J. M. T. and see if she cannot be helped? Her offer of plain sewing is the best she can do and should be extremely welcome to some one.

Gifts Promptly Acknowledged.

"The nice Bible came this morning and was gratefully received. I see so many nice, good deeds and helpful things reported in the Corner. Such kindness will reap a reward, here and hereafter. "L. B."

Here is a testimony from some one who evidently was not kept waiting for an answer to her appeal. I am glad to print her acknowledgment.

"Goodnight Corns! We Use 'Gets-It!'"
3 Drops in 2 Seconds. That's All. "GETS-IT" Does the Rest. Never Fails.
"Really, I never could see how some few people use the most difficult and painful way they can find to get rid of corns. They'll wrap their toes up with bandages into a package that fills their shoes full of feet and makes corns so painful they've got to walk sideways and wrinkle up their faces. Or they use salves that eat right into the toe and make it raw and sore, or they'll use plasters that make the corns bulge, or pick and gouge at their corns and make the toes bleed. Funny, isn't it? 'GETS-IT' is the simple, modern wonder for corns. Just put three drop on. It dries instantly. No pain, fuss or trouble. The corn, callus or wart loosens and comes off. Millions use nothing else."

IMPORTANT

THE present prices of The Encyclopaedia Britannica hold good only on orders sent in at once. We are sorry to state that on account of the higher cost of all materials for the making of books, the publishers are obliged to increase the price. The present low prices will, therefore, be advanced by from one to three monthly payments (from $3.00 to $9.00), according to the binding, on or before December 20th.

How long it will be possible to maintain these new prices without another increase is uncertain. In any case, if you wish to purchase The Encyclopaedia Britannica at the present low prices, act at once.

How to Order Your Clotilde Pattern.

In ordering a waist the size should be determined by the bust measure. Give the bust measure. In ordering a skirt the size of the hip is more important than the size of the waist, but give both the hip and the waist measure. Ten cents for each waist, coat, or skirt.

In ordering misses' patterns the age should be stated—12, 14, 16, or 18 years. Ten cents for each waist, coat, skirt, or dress.

In ordering children's regular patterns order them by the age of the child. Ten cents each.

Clotilde's patterns are made in New York exclusively for "The Chicago Sunday Tribune" and may be obtained through no other service. A Chicago distribution office has been opened, and following this announcement orders will be filled on the day of receipt. An extra 2 cent stamp will allow for letter postage and will thereby hasten delivery. Patrons are requested to send stamps instead of dimes, as money is frequently lst in the mails.

ETIQUETTE

by ELIZABETH VAN RENSSELAER

EGOTISM IN CONVERSATION.

EVERY one in the world needs a certain amount of independence and self-assurance, but with many it is an over-developed virtue, which perforce becomes a fault. Boasting tends to make a conversation uninteresting, particularly if it is a dialogue. People who have traveled a great deal and have had many thrilling experiences probably would be able to arouse the interest of their hearers by their unusual tales, but in general it is best to prevent the entrance of ego into our daily conversations. The man or woman who can listen attentively and say just what is necessary and sufficient quietly and firmly, will create about himself or herself an air of refinement and gentle breeding that is desirable. He has come to the realization of the fact that the things concerning himself and which may seem to him of the most vital interest are not always the things to talk about when with others. He knows that he is only one unit in a large, social world, and that the bonds of his community are not those that concern himself alone.

Any question on etiquette will be answered if you write to Elizabeth Van Rensselaer, "Chicago Sunday Tribune." If you wish a personal reply inclose a stamped, addressed envelope. Please write on one side of the paper only.

L. M. B.: For a wedding breakfast you might serve creamed chicken in patty shells, peas, ball potatoes, hot rolls, tomato jelly on lettuce with mayonnaise and hot coffee. It would be correct to seat the guests at two tables since one will not accommodate all. If you are to be married in your suit it is not necessary to wear the coat or your gloves. Your hat should be worn during the ceremony and may be left on for the wedding breakfast.

MARIE: At a reception given for her in the afternoon a minister's wife should wear an afternoon frock; in the evening an evening dress. A hat is not necessary in either case. Gloves may be worn with the evening gown. When introduced to the guests she need only smile and say, "How do you do, Mrs. ——." Nuts may be served at tea and dinner. A "lap lunch" may be served when guests come in to spend the evening with you.

* *

S. A. J.: At a luncheon the hostess should sit at the head of the table with the guest of honor at her right. Appropriate quotations written on the place cards would undoubtedly help to "break the ice" and would be permissible.

My Most Embarrassing Moment.

"The Tribune" will pay $1 for every letter published on the subject "The Most Embarrassing Moment of My Life Was When——." Address Embarrassing Moments Editor, "Sunday Tribune," Chicago. Write on only one side of the paper. No manuscripts will be returned.

Poor John, Poor John.

My name is John Skelton. I am not much of a praying man, at least not in public. Recently I had business in Chicago, and, being in the city on Sunday morning, I went to one of the big churches. Just as the usher had seated me the minister said: "We will now be led in prayer by John Skelton." Embarrassed? I was stunned! Just as the cold sweat began to break out all over me, some one in front began to pray. My life was saved! There was another John Skelton. PUT.

Embarrassment for Four.

It was mine, but it must have been theirs, too. On the hottest night of the year a girl friend and myself had been to the movies with two men, and, although we were thirsty an dhad stopped at a public fountain on a street corner for a drink of water, no invitations were offered for drinks. They took us home and after they had gone my friend and I went to the nearest confectionery store to treat ourselves. Our two gentlemen friends were seated in the store eating ice cream when we walked in. A. C. A.

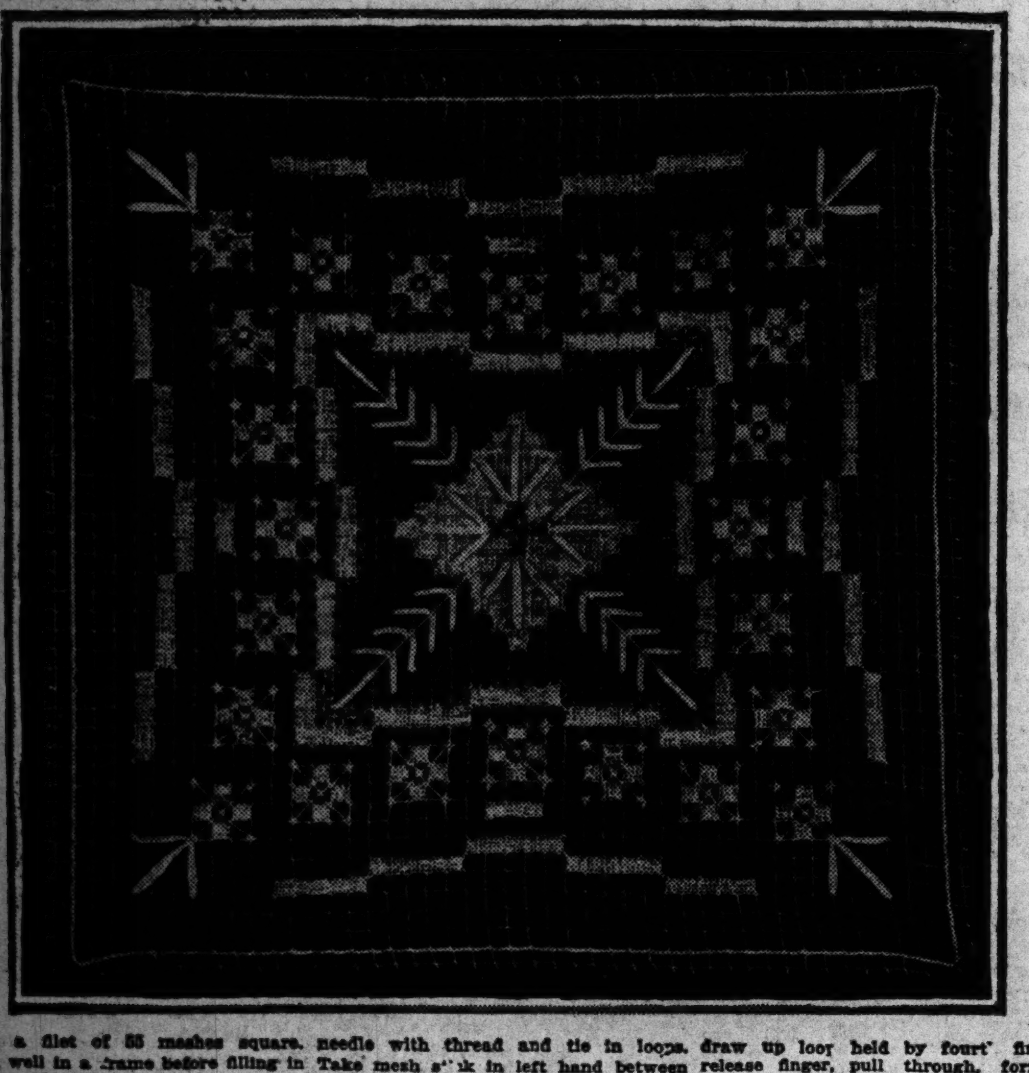
In Went Her Powder Puff.

It happened at one of the large cafeterias downtown. On my way down the aisle prior to leaving I opened my purse and took out my handkerchief in a hurry, when out jumped my powder puff, landing in the bowl of soup on a tray of a young man who was industriously finding a seat. To say I was embarrassed would be putting it mildly. A. B.

Real Filet-Lace Embroidery Design for Doilies.



Make a filet of 55 meshes square. Stretch well in a frame before filling in the stitches. Use mesh stick five-eighths of an inch, netting needle No. 14 or 16, and No. 35 Barbour's linen thread for the mesh, and No. 40 for the stitches. The darning stitch is used almost throughout the pattern. The leaves are made by stitching 2 loops of thread the length of the leaves and stems over the net and darning the loops back and forth till filled in full. Around the small figures make little spider web figures.

To make a netting knot, make a large loop of thread and pin securely to a cushion or table cover. Fill netting needle with thread and tie in loops. Take mesh stick in left hand between thumb and first finger. Bring thread down over mesh stick and second and third fingers. Bring thread up back of second and third fingers and mesh stick and across to the left and hold thread back with thumb, then bring thread to the right and down under first, second, and third fingers; place needle through loop on fingers under mesh stick and through foundation loop (keeping thread held back by thumb back of needle); draw needle through, holding second loop with fourth finger. Release thread from thumb and fingers in first loop, draw thread through loop, holding second loop firmly with the fourth finger; draw up loop held by fourth finger; release finger, pull through, forming knot close to stick.

To make a square of netting, tie thread to foundation loop and net 2 loops in foundation loop for first row. Now remove mesh stick from loops and net 3 loops for second row (to increase 1 loop for each row, net twice in last loop of each row). Remove mesh stick from loops to start each row. Increase each row 1 loop until you have 1 more loop than the square should number. When this is done, make 1 row without increasing or decreasing. In next row begin to decrease by 1 by netting the last 2 loops of each row together in a knot. Finish the last 2 loops over the thumb.

Bright Sayings of the Children

"The Tribune" will pay $1 for each childish saying printed. The story told must never have been printed in any magazine or paper. It is not possible to acknowledge or return unavailable contributions. Address bright sayings to Aunty Bee, "Tribune," Chicago.

This department appears every day in "The Daily Tribune."

Our little boy, Stanley, when 4 years old, used to hide behind the door, and then call out, "Mamma, where's Stanley gone?" And then his mother would pretend to look around before finally finding him. One day his mother was busy ironing, and when Stanley hid and then caled out the customary, "Where's Stanley gone?" his mother answered, "O, I'm busy!" Stanley was quiet a few seconds, and then said: "O, be a sport, mamma, where's Stanley gone?" B. J. H.

My little niece was at our house one evening when I had a party. All the young men flocked around her and asked her name and who she belonged to. She said she belonged to her Aunt Ruth. One young man took her on his lap and said, "Well, I'm your uncle." In a minute all of them, in a chorus, asked if they were not her uncle, and she threw up her hands and said, "Too many uncles!" S. P. R.

Freddie's mamma had been busy all day, and as she was preparng the evening meal had grown tired of his many questions. As she placed a pan of escalloped oysters in the oven Fred asked, "Does papa like oysters that way?" His mother, in an absent minded manner, said that she didn't know. "Well," said he, "I fink it about time you inqueried into his young tastings." N. F. S.

Louise was noted for her ability to have the last word. It happened one day after just finishing a stick of candy that a playmate came in.

"Look, Louise," he said, displaying some caramels, "I have a whole handful of candy."

"O, that's nothing," returned Louise without a moment's hesitation, "I have a whole stomach full." E. D. A.

We had been trying to teach our little boy how to tell time, so one day, late in the afternoon, I was taking a nap, when suddenly I awoke and heard him playing around all by himself in the back parlor. I called out to him: "Edward, what time is it?"

He replied: "A—A—it's up at da top and down at da bottom," meaning 6 o'clock. M. D.

One day 7 year old Howard was much annoyed by the persistent queries of his little 3 year old brother and exclaimed impatiently, "Don't ask so many questions, Johnny!"

His grandmother heard him and expostulated, "You used to ask lots of questions when you were a little boy like Johnny."

This was evidently a new idea to Howard, but after a moment's thought he said with conviction, "Then I must have been an awful nuisance." M. Z.

Richard went marketing with his mother and was given a piece of stick candy. He promised to keep it until he reached home, but he could not resist putting it in his mouth. His mother noticed it and said, "But, Richard, you are eating the candy."

"No, mamee, I am not eating it, I am just eating the gravy off of it." E. A. M.

How I Won My Mate.

How did you win the love of your mate? What measures, if any, did you adopt? "The Tribune" will pay $1 for every letter published on "How I Won My Mate." Write on one side of the paper. No manuscripts returned. Address Doris Blake, "The Sunday Tribune," Chicago.

Digging Up the Dandelions.

In going to the schoolhouse I passed my sweetheart's home four times a day.

and how badly the dandelions needed attention, for every nice day he was out in the yard digging up the pests. But there was always time to talk a little while and frequently time to walk as far as the schoolhouse with me. His father remarked about the well kept state of the lawn, and the whole family had great jokes about the amount of attention the lawn needed at certain times of the day. Now the dandelions run riot in our yard—but that's a different story. F. W. L.

The Worst Slam I Ever Got.

Sometime, somewhere, somebody gave you a "slam" that nearly bowled you over. Tell the worst one you ever received. The stories must be original, written on one side of the paper, and confined to 300 words. Address them to Slam Editor, "The Sunday Tribune." For every letter published "The Tribune" will pay $1. No letters can be returned.

No Flattery Here.

I was teaching in high school and the president of the Federation of Women's Clubs in the city called me up and asked me to address her organization on a certain subject. "The occasion requires no talent or ability," she explained cheerfully, "and yet we looked high and low before we thought of you." Wouldn't that take the alabaster off your teeth? I told he I thought she'd better assume the duty herself. MRS. A. E. R.

Suitors' Mistakes Contest.

Did you make a mistake that cost you the one you wanted to win more than any other? Was it an unkind remark, a selfish deed, a mean or careless one, an error or tendency of your past come to light? "The Tribune" will pay $1 for every letter published on "The Mistake That Cost Me the One I Wanted Most to Win." Address Doris Blake, "Chicago Tribune."

She Took Lemonade.

I lost out, much to my bitter regret, trying to teach the one man the saving habit. He seemed to get excitement and pleasure in spending his money on me, but I always put a damper on his oft repeated requests to see the best show, etc. When he produced violets, candy, and magazines my enthusiasm was a minus quantity.

One night a girl friend called on me, and he took us for soda. I ordered lemonade, 5 cents, and she ordered a Lovers' Delight (all whipped cream, cherries, and nuts), 25 cents. The next night he didn't come, nor any after that.

I heard he bought her a sealskin coat with an ermine collar for a wedding present. I married a stingy man, who expects me to get my hats for about 10 cents. B. S.

SEVERE ITCHING OF ECZEMA ON FEET

And Limbs. Impossible to Keep From Scratching. Could Not Sleep at Night. Completely

HEALED BY CUTICURA SOAP AND OINTMENT

"I was afflicted with eczema which began with hot sensations in my feet and limbs, and then followed a rash and itching. The itching was so severe that it was impossible to keep from scratching, and the skin was very much inflamed and red. I could hardly wear my shoes and I could not sleep at night. My clothing aggravated the trouble.

"I got no relief until I used Cuticura Soap and Ointment. I used four boxes of Ointment together with the Cuticura Soap and I was healed completely." (Signed) Mrs. C. Carleton, 730 Christiana Ave., Chicago, Ill., Jan. 3, 1916.

With 32-p. Skin Book on request. Address post-card: "Cuticura, Dept. T, Boston." Sold throughout the world.

Curls Will Last

Says hair stays curly and wavy for a long time and appears natural too.

Girls! Try this!! Before curling or waving your hair with pins, papers or a heated iron, just moisten each strand with atalpa water and you will be delighted how natural the curls and waves appear and how long they last in spite of wind, dampness or perspiration. A few ounces of atalpa water will cost very little at any drug store and there is nothing better to help retain the curls and waves or to soften, gloss or fluff the hair and to make it look thick and abundant.—Advertisement.

Mother! Look at Your Child's Tongue

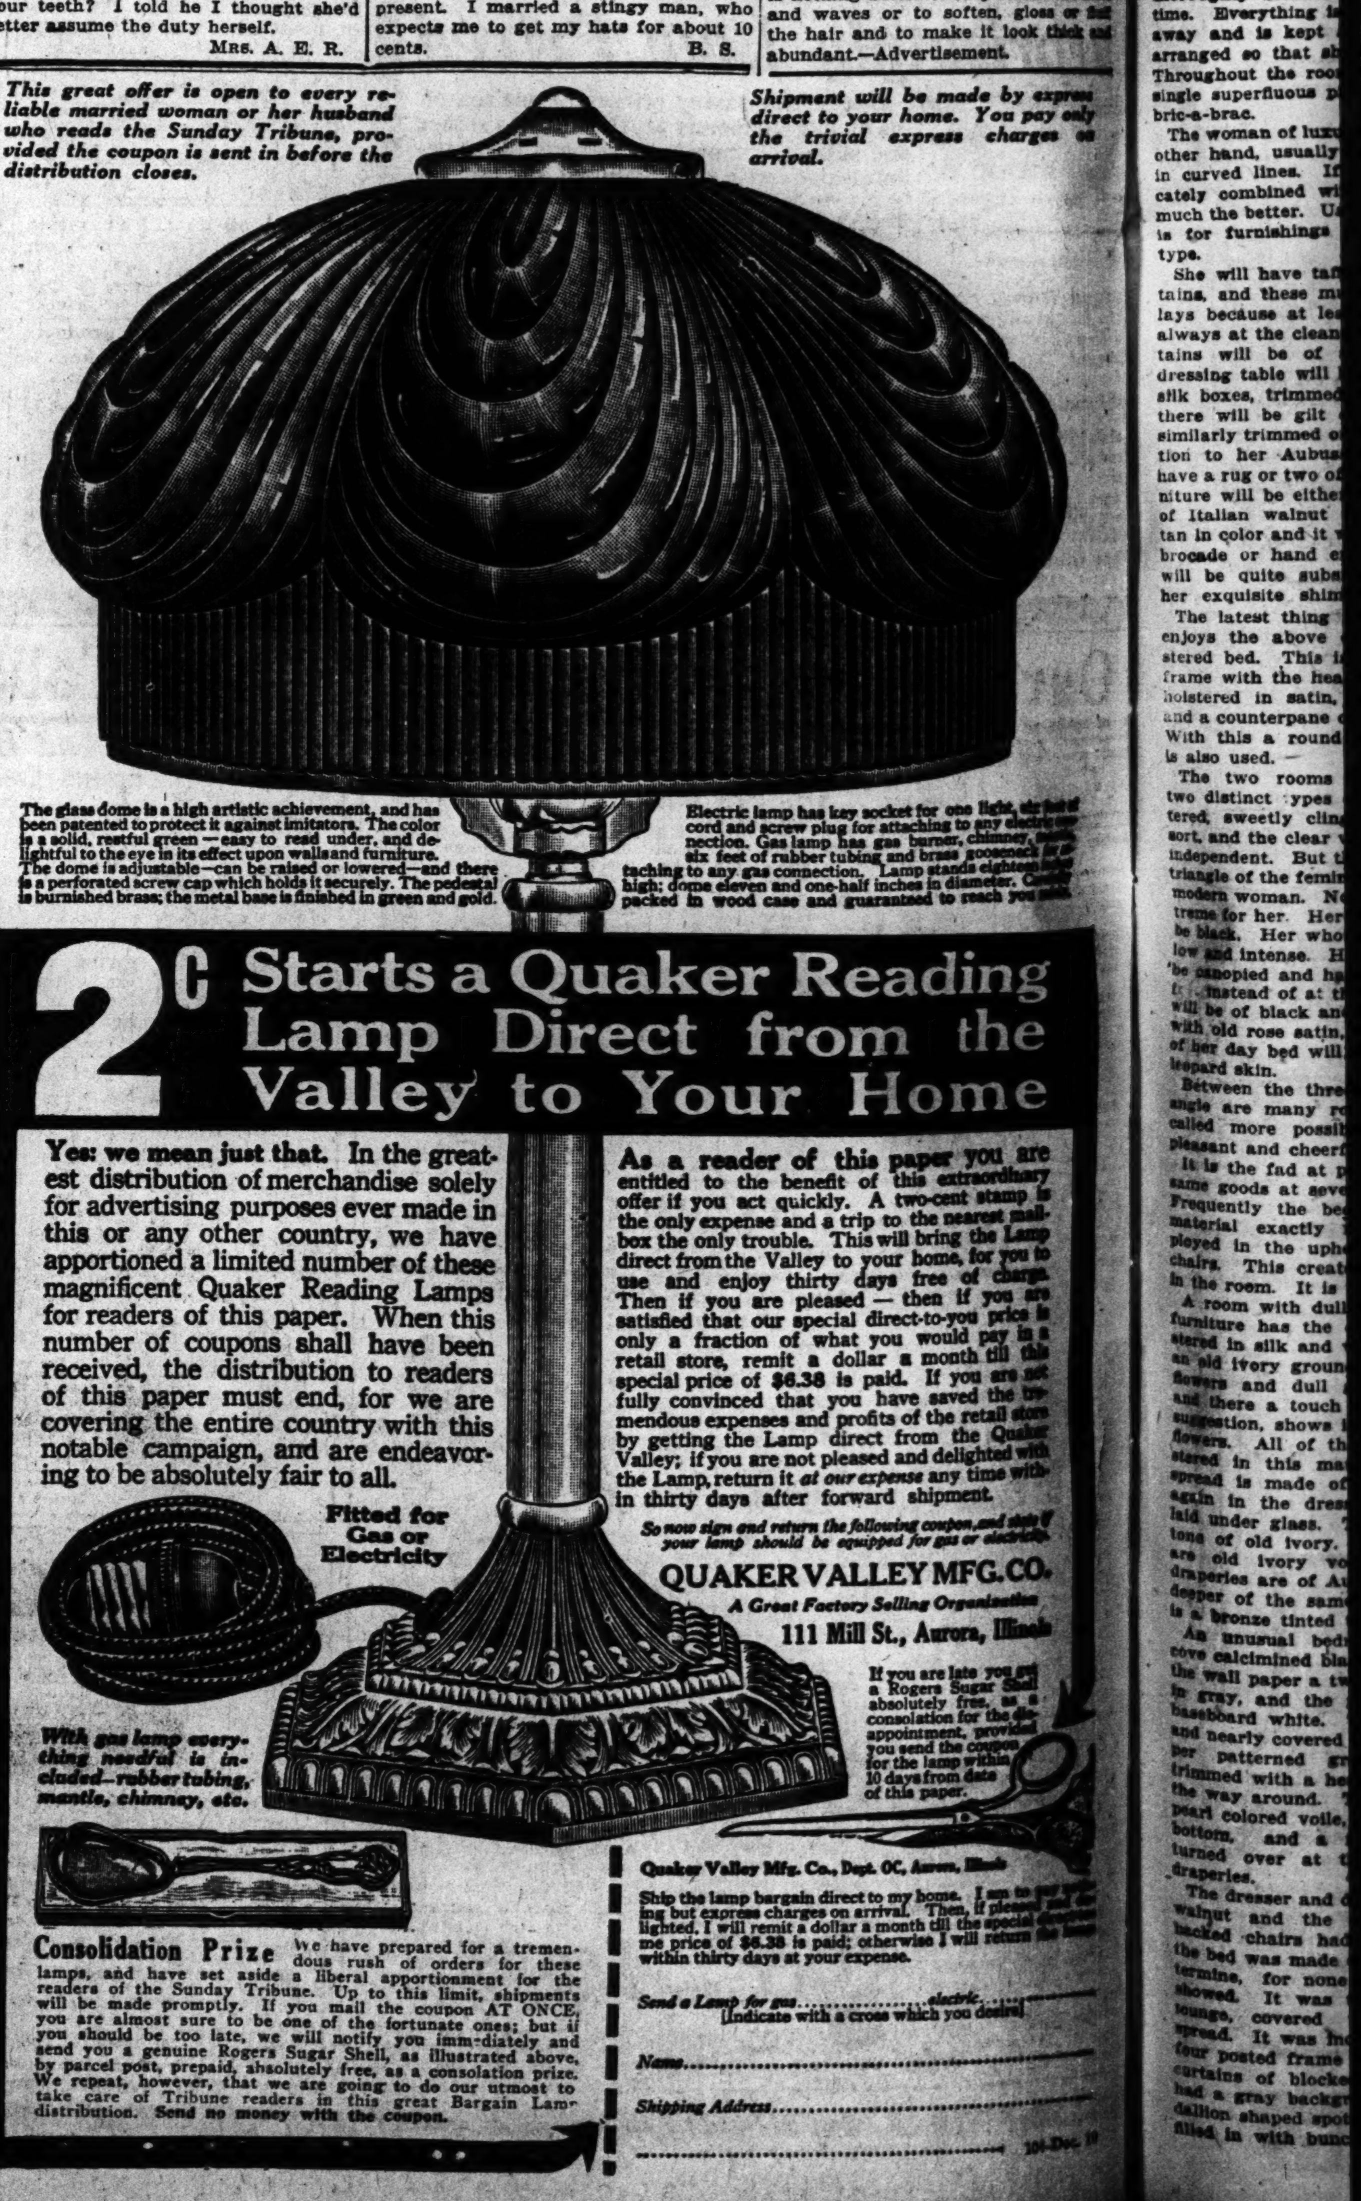
Give "California Syrup of Figs" if Cross, Feverish, Sick, Bilious, Constipated—They Love It

Watch Children Now! Guard Against Colds, Grippe, Sore Throat and Sickness by Keeping Liver and Bowels Free from Poisons

A laxative today saves a sick child tomorrow. Children simply will not take the time from play to empty their bowels, which become clogged up with waste; liver gets sluggish; stomach sour.

Look at the tongue, mother! If coated, or your child is listless, cross, feverish, breath bad, restless, doesn't eat heartily, full of cold or has the grippe or a sore throat or any other children's ailment, give a teaspoonful of "California Syrup of Figs," then don't worry, because it is perfectly harmless, and in a few hours all this constipation poison, sour bile and fermenting waste will gently move out of the bowels, and you have a well, playful child again. A thorough "inside cleansing" is ofttimes all that is necessary. It should be the first treatment given in any sickness.

Beware of counterfeit fig syrups. Ask your druggist for a 50-cent bottle of "California Syrup of Figs, which has full directions for babies, children of all ages and for grown-ups plainly printed on the bottle. See that it is made by the "California Fig Syrup Company." Don't merely ask for Syrup of Figs, but ask for "California Syrup of Figs." Remember, "California."—Advertisement.



This great offer is open to every reliable married woman or her husband who reads the Sunday Tribune, provided the coupon is sent in before the distribution closes.

Shipment will be made by express direct to your home. You pay only the trivial express charges on arrival.

The glass dome is a high artistic achievement, and has been patented to protect it against imitators. The color is a solid, restful green—easy to read under, and delightful to the eye in its effect upon walls and furniture. The dome is adjustable—can be raised or lowered—and there is a perforated screw cap which holds it securely. The pedestal is burnished brass; the metal base is finished in green and gold.

Electric lamp has key socket for one light, six feet of cord and screw plug for attaching to any electric connection. Gas lamp has gas burner, chimney, mantle, six feet of rubber tubing and brass gooseneck for attaching to any gas connection. Lamp stands eighteen inches high; dome eleven and one-half inches in diameter. Carefully packed in wood case and guaranteed to reach you safely.

2c Starts a Quaker Reading Lamp Direct from the Valley to Your Home

Yes: we mean just that. In the greatest distribution of merchandise solely for advertising purposes ever made in this or any other country, we have apportioned a limited number of these magnificent Quaker Reading Lamps for readers of this paper. When this number of coupons shall have been received, the distribution to readers of this paper must end, for we are covering the entire country with this notable campaign, and are endeavoring to be absolutely fair to all.

Fitted for Gas or Electricity

With gas lamp everything needful is included—rubber tubing, mantle, chimney, etc.

As a reader of this paper you are entitled to the benefit of this extraordinary offer if you act quickly. A two-cent stamp is the only expense and a trip to the nearest mailbox the only trouble. This will bring the Lamp direct from the Valley to your home, for you to use and enjoy thirty days free of charge. Then if you are pleased—then if you are satisfied that our special direct-to-you price is only a fraction of what you would pay in a retail store, remit a dollar a month till this special price of $6.38 is paid. If you are not fully convinced that you have saved the tremendous expenses and profits of the retail store by getting the Lamp direct from the Quaker Valley; if you are not pleased and delighted with the Lamp, return it at our expense any time within thirty days after forward shipment.

So now sign and return the following coupon, and state if your lamp should be equipped for gas or electricity.

QUAKER VALLEY MFG. CO.

111 Mill St., Aurora, Illinois

If you are late you get a Rogers Sugar Shell absolutely free, as a consolation for the disappointment, provided you send the coupon for the lamp within 10 days from date of this paper.

Consolation Prize We have prepared for a tremendous rush of orders for these lamps, and have set aside a liberal apportionment for the readers of the Sunday Tribune. Up to this limit, shipments will be made promptly. If you mail the coupon AT ONCE, you are almost sure to be one of the fortunate ones; but if you should be too late, we will notify you immediately and send you a genuine Rogers Sugar Shell, as illustrated above, by parcel post, prepaid, absolutely free, as a consolation prize. We repeat, however, that we are going to do our utmost to take care of Tribune readers in this great Bargain Lamp distribution. Send no money with the coupon.

Quaker Valley Mfg. Co., Dept. OC, Aurora, Illinois

Ship the lamp bargain direct to my home. I am to pay nothing but express charges on arrival. Then, if pleased and delighted, I will remit a dollar a month till the special direct-to-me price of $6.38 is paid; otherwise I will return the lamp within thirty days at your expense.

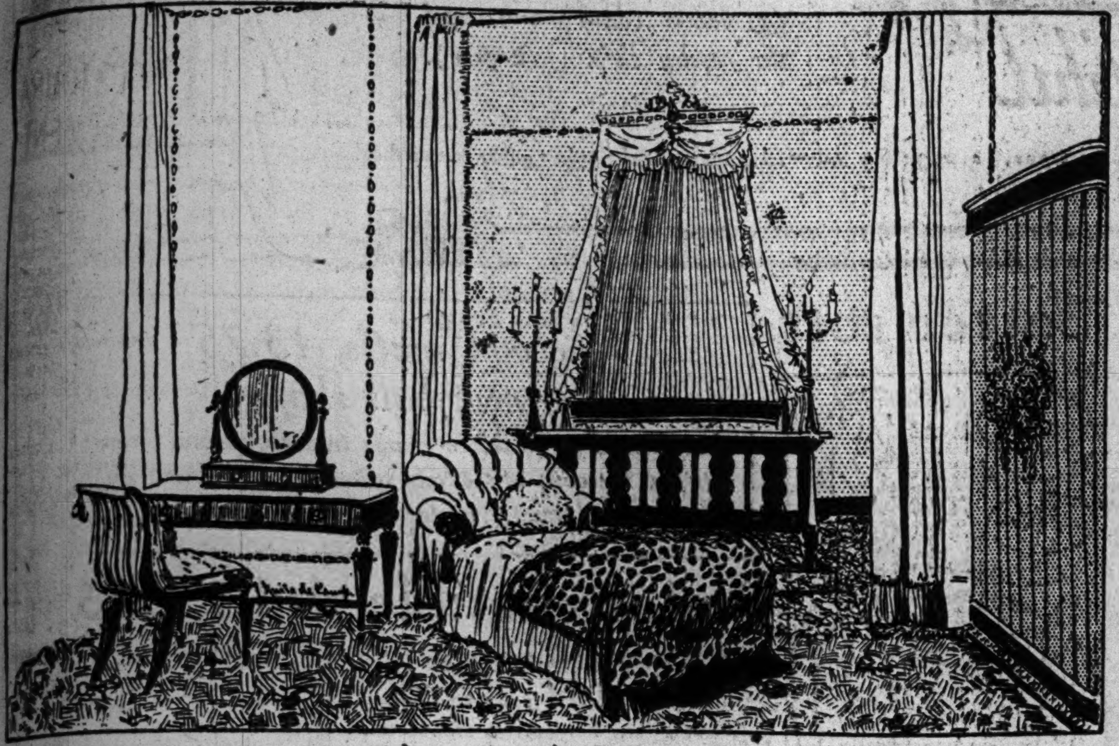
The Home Harmonious

Three Types of Bedrooms

Anita de Campi



Miss de Campi will be glad to assist the home maker in any problems pertaining to interior decorations. Address your letter to Miss Anita de Campi, "Sunday Tribune," Chicago. Inclose a stamped, addressed envelope if you wish a personal reply.

So varied in style are the latest masterpieces in bedrooms that it is hard to tell where to begin in describing them.

The business woman often shows a preference for straight line furnishings and these can be neat without being too severe. They correspond in a way with the trim tailor made clothes which become her so well and in which she spends most of her time.

For this type woman built-in furniture has an especial appeal. To her the fittings of the room are ideal only if they are made an integral part of the room. A chest of drawers is built into her window sill; her dressing mirror with an electric light adjusted to either side of it is placed not near the window, but in it, so she is sure of equally good light in the performance of her toilet by day and night.

Convenience with her takes precedence even to the point of superseding comfort. If you glance about her room you can see that the whole place could be thoroughly cleaned in half an hour's time. Everything is picked up and put away and is kept so. Her lights are arranged so that she can read in bed. Throughout the room there is hardly a single superfluous piece of furniture or bric-a-brac.

The woman of luxurious leisure, on the other hand, usually likes her furniture in curved lines. If these can be delicately combined with straight lines so much the better. Usually her preference is for furnishings of the Louis XVI. type.

She will have taffeta covers and curtains, and these must be bought in relays because at least one pair will be always at the cleaner's. Her glass curtains will be of silk [illegible]. On her dressing table will be innumerable little silk boxes, trimmed with gilt lace, and there will be gilt candles with shades similarly trimmed on her table. In addition to her Aubusson carpet she will have a rug or two of white fur. Her furniture will be either of ivory enamel or of Italian walnut that is almost pale tan in color and it will be upholstered in brocade or hand embroidery. All this will be quite subsidiary to herself in her exquisite shimmering negligee.

The latest thing for the woman who enjoys the above effect is the upholstered bed. This is an ivory enameled frame with the head and footboard upholstered in satin, taffeta, or brocade and a counterpane of the same material. With this a round upholstered bolster is also used.

The two rooms described represent two distinct types of women, the sheltered, sweetly clinging, and dependent sort, and the clear visioned, refreshingly independent. But there is a third in the triangle of the feminine world—the ultra-modern woman. Nothing can be too extreme for her. Her choice will probably be black. Her whole color scale will be low and intense. Her bed on a dais will be canopied and have dim lights at the foot instead of at the head. Her spread will be of black and gold brocade, lined with old rose satin, and across the foot of her day bed will be a throw made of leopard skin.

Between the three points of this triangle are many rooms that might be called more possible rooms that are pleasant and cheerfully commonplace.

It is the fad at present to repeat the same goods at several points in rooms. Frequently the bedspread is made of material exactly matching that employed in the upholstery work of the chairs. This creates a distinct unison in the room. It is pleasing.

A room with dull turquoise enameled furniture has the chair frames upholstered in silk and wool fabric, showing an old ivory ground with peacock blue flowers and dull green leaves. Here and there a touch of yellow, barely a suggestion, shows in the centers of the flowers. All of the chairs are upholstered in this material and the bedspread is made of it. It is repeated again in the dresser covers that are laid under glass. The wall is in a flat tone of old ivory. The glass curtains are old ivory voile and the inside draperies are of Austrian cloth a shade deeper of the same color. The carpet is a bronze tinted taupe.

An unusual bedroom had the wide cove calcimined black, the ceiling pearl, the wall paper a two tone floral pattern in gray, and the picture molding and baseboard white. The floor was black and nearly covered with a two tone diaper patterned gray rug that was trimmed with a heavy tufted fringe all the way around. The curtains were of pearl colored voile, with a ruffle at the bottom and a flounce edged ruffle turned over at the top. No inside draperies.

The dresser and dressing table were of walnut and the tall, narrow ladder backed chairs had rush seats. What the bed was made of it was hard to determine, for none of the framework showed. It was the shape of a box couch, covered with a voluminous spread. It was inclosed, however, in a four posted frame to which were hung curtains of blocked linen. This linen had a gray background with huge medallion shaped spots of white brilliantly lined in with bunches of flowers. The curtains were lined with Du Barry rose silk. A rose silk counterpane covered the bed and was set off by a breadth of the flowered linen laid across the pillows.

Answers to Inquiries.

MRS. W. H. P.: A plan that has obtained favor in some of the best decorative studios is to gild or bronze wicker. I cannot tell you that I approve of this, but only that it meets with the approval of some of the best decorators. Personally I prefer the brown stain that you now have.

* *

M. E. L.: I believe that children usually have a preference for light yellow, which is the most joyous color. You say you wish blue for your own room; then let the other rooms be in tint of these combined colors, that is, in various shades of lighter grayed green. A light gray would be nice for your living rooms. Repeat this in the dining room. Gray and green chintz would do for your portieres if they are heavily lined.

* *

R. B. P.: I congratulate you on the possession of your real old fashioned furniture. Use ecru and old blue draperies in the room with them. Somewhere in the room have a coral cushion, also one of old gold. Have your portieres on concealed rings with pulleys, so that they may be easily drawn well back. If you use a scarf for the buffet, let it be a simple one, and do not place a scarf on top of the bookcase. Small mats are used under candlesticks, vases, etc.

GIRLS! BEAUTIFY YOUR HAIR WITH "DANDERINE"

Get a 25 Cent Bottle! Freshen Your Scalp! Stop Falling Hair! Remove Dandruff! Grow Lots of Wavy, Glossy, Beautiful Hair—You Can!

If you care for heavy hair, that glistens with beauty and is radiant with life; has an incomparable softness and is fluffy and lustrous, try Danderine.

Just one application doubles the beauty of your hair, besides it immediately dissolves every particle of dandruff; you can not have nice, heavy, healthy hair if you have dandruff. This destructive scurf robs the hair of its lustre, its strength and its very life, and if not overcome it produces a feverishness and itching of the scalp; the hair roots famish, loosen and die; then the hair falls out fast.

If your hair has been neglected and is thin, faded, dry, scraggy or too oily, get a 25-cent bottle of Knowlton's Danderine at any drug store or toilet counter; apply a little as directed and ten minutes after you will say this was the best investment you ever made.

We sincerely believe, regardless of everything else advertised, that if you desire soft, lustrous, beautiful hair and lots of it—no dandruff—no itching scalp and no more falling hair—you must use Knowlton's Danderine. If eventually—why not now?—Advertisement.

On a Purchase of Seats for a Benefit by Sir Herbert

By Percy Hammond.

THOUGH by no means notorious in the matter of affluence I am going to buy on Tuesday afternoon at least two seats for Sir Herbert Tree's benefit for the Red Cross. I am not an eleemosynary person. Being cold to the relation of distant miseries, my charity concerns itself with benefactions to such adjacent distresses as render me personally uncomfortable. A tubercular Chicago laundress with three small children and an ailing husband selfishly disturb me much more than a homeless Belgian baby or a wet poilu in the Douaumont trenches. I grieve for them, but still they are away, and the white, pathetic face of a Chicago washerwoman confronts me twice a week as she takes my shirts and as she brings them back. Her story, if she could tell it, is just as vendible as theirs except that her battle is the sordid everyday thing, while theirs has the glamour of the distance which lends enchantment.

So hospitality rather than philanthropy invites me to buy my seats for the Tuesday performance of Sir Herbert Tree. Putting aside for a moment the virtues of his entertainment he is a fine Englishman on a foreign shore, anxious, as he must be, about the incredible things that are happening at home. While he is playing Wolsey to a more or less appreciative midland audience at the Illinois, battles are lost and peace recedes. Helpless he yearns for the war to be over and wonders what will be afterward. As a knight of his unhappy empire he is distressed that he is not wanted in his great theater, His Majesty's in London, and that it is given over to a modern harlequinade with jokes and dancing. On his heels at the Illinois Mr. Ziegfeld's Follies will tread. Like John the Baptist he has caught the eyes of his generation watching the twinkling feet of the daughter of Herodias. You may like to know that he went to Mr. H. G. Wells and asked him, as the artist best fitted to do so, to write a drama for the great day when peace shall come. "Let us," said he, "greet it with anthems rather than with comic songs." The nature of Mr. Wells' response is not available for publication.

None of which has aught to do with the proud and generous show at the Illinois. Sir Herbert is a hospitable guest. His spectacle is an animated and opulent counterfeit, in which there is rhetoric, drama and acting as well as parade. I think I am through with sentiment before I say that his supers are less knock-kneed and cotton-tighted than those of the comic entourage of Mr. Sothern or Mr. Mantell. His Wolsey is vividly arrogant, weak, and pontifical; his King Henry is the royal satyr that he should be; his Queen Katherine is the handsome, moaning, rythmic outline of Shakespeare and history, and his Anne Boleyn a gorgeous and youthful confederation of all the feminine charms. If, as it is said, we are a fine, big-hearted, Association-of-Commerce community, let us welcome this visit of Sir Herbert in a material manner. It means much more to us as an urban neighborhood than the petty gropings of many small-town aldermen. Better a month of Tree than a cycle of those who infest the village hall. By the way, Sir Herbert is the wit who said that "Genius is an infinite capacity for not having to take pains." Without intending to disparage the art of acting I should prefer to be the author of that paraphrase than to be the player of any majestic and hapless prelate in "King Henry VIII."

Careless Caroline!

ONE of Miss Laurette Taylor's acute observations pertaining to the theater had to do with the habitués of dramatic criticism. Said she: "They do not understand and they have no patience with qualifying words or phrases—a thing is either good or bad. Critics should say 'This play is awful' or 'This play is great' and let it go at that. The slightest exception or reservation perplexes newspaper readers and is a waste of their time and yours."

I am impelled to this reminiscence by a large placard on the façade of the Olympic theater. This bally-hoo in black and white proclaims that I gave utterance to the joyous outcry "IMMENSE!" after having been a witness to "Her Market Value." Now, a careful study of my ruminations concerning that melodrama shows me that I wrote that "Her Market Value" was "immense" only in the judgment of the Sunday night chicle set but that in my own mind it was somewhat otherwise. Since my knowledge of the management's probity in such matters assures me that misquotation is not among its vices, the instance is submitted, simply, as evidence of the fallacy of Miss Taylor's theory of criticism.

A week or two ago some remarks were made in this publication by Madame X concerning my report of "Mrs. Warren's Profession." Madame X, as you know, is the Sunday Holinshed of the fashionable north side, a gracious chronicler of its intercourses, solemn and gay. Her function, naturally, leads her into esthetic by-paths, and she writes resolutely of many artistic things, from the decor of a ballroom to a painting by Mrs. McGann or Inness or a drama by Mrs. Aldis. Her brief estimations, while final, are not offensively arbitrary. A thing is good or it is bad; she says so, and I always believe her. I wonder how Madame X would feel if, after highly appraising the poetry of Mr. William Gamble, one should write that she spoke of it in a spirit of deprecation. Yet that, approximately, is what she did to me. I liked the performance of "Mrs. Warren's Profession" and I said so with cautious enthusiasm, suggesting, however, that it was not salubrious entertainment for some boys and some girls. With what dismay did I read in the causerie of Madame X that I did not care for the excellent fashion in which Mr. Shaw's play was acted! My judgment was irrevocably impeached, my taste irrevocably impugned in the minds of her myriad readers! Both in sorrow and in anger I reproached Madame X for her lack of concentration. She said, "If you wrote more entertainingly I should read more carefully."

News

When Miss Elsie Ferguson appears this month at the Hudson theater, New York, in "Shirley Kaye" she will be supported by the original Chicago cast.

At tonight's benefit for the unhappy French players at The Playhouse, Miss Elsie Mackaye, the radiant Anne Boleyn of "King Henry VIII.," will act Trilby for the first time. Miss Mackaye is Australian by birth and English by residence, and she prepared for the stage in Sir Herbert Tree's dramatic school at His Majesty's theater.

They say, and that is no reason to doubt the statement, that the advance sale for "The Boomerang" is upwards of [illegible].

Burns Mantle's New York Letter

NEW YORK.—[Special correspondence.]—You probably could not find a dozen people in a day's walk who would attach any real significance to the fact that Mme. Sarah Bernhardt of Paris, France, is at this moment planning a farewell engagement in New York City.

It has become such a common practice of Madame Sarah's that one quite reasonably looks forward to it, as one does to the annual appearance of John Drew or Maude Adams or the announcement that the subways will shortly be completed.

We are bound to smile, however, when we think that ten years ago we first began to take the Bernhardt farewells seriously. Even then she was saving herself as much as she possibly could. on the stage. We noted, for instance, that in "Camille" she no longer paced the scene with the elder Duval, but sat at the table and gained her effects by vigorously pounding the board to emphasize her first refusal to give up Armand.

Then came the Barnumized tour in 1910-11, when she played draughty town halls and circus tents and we had a haunting fear each time we glanced at a headline that we should read of an attack of pneumonia that had brought her to bed in Tucson, Ariz., or Albuquerque, N. M.

In 1912 (the year she had the automobile accident in California) we helped present her with a farewell wreath on the stage of the Palace theater in New York—helped, at least, by standing with one foot in the light trough while the committee made speeches and 2,000 spectators out front applauded and wept. And as she smiled a wan smile through her tears we, too, gave a very excellent imitation of a mourner at the last sad rites attending the passing of a beloved friend.

But, far from retiring, the dear old lady merely trotted back home to have a limb amputated and now she is back to say "good-by" all over again. If Bernhardt were less an artist than she is, we probably, in common with many others, would be inclined to resent this commercializing of a very sincere sentiment. But just as she completely dominates every scene in which she appears, whether she stand or walk or sit still, so long as she has the use of her eloquent arms and her hauntingly fine voice, so does she completely commend a respect that encompasses nothing less than the reverent adulation of her American following.

This particular farewell tour, of course, is made additionally glorious because of the added opportunity it gives Americans to indicate their devoted loyalty to France at war. Monday night's audience at the Empire was vibrant with sympathy. That the occasion should result in a veritable demonstration was anticipated, but neither the measure of its spontaneity nor the exact form it would take could be foreseen.

There had been some talk of postponing the opening because of the report from Wilmington of Bernhardt's failure to appear there the previous Saturday night, much to the disappointment of the Du Ponts and all the powder boys, who had bought boxes and heaps of flowers. But, although she hardly could speak above a whisper all day Sunday, the actress insisted upon appearing in New York Monday.

When the curtain rose and revealed her as Cleopatra, lying full length upon her couch, the applause broke forth. She leaned forward and smiled as she bowed her acknowledgments. Then, as the applause continued and grew in volume,

On the Record of the Opera Season To-Date

By Frederick Donaghey.

SUNDAYS INCLUDED, as the theater-ads say, today's "Götterdämmerung" is the twenty-second opera staged in the twenty-eight days that make up the season so far as it is gone. The calculation considers as separate items the four short operas made up into two "double-bills": "Hänsel and Gretel" with "Madeleine," and "Cavalleria Rusticana" with "I' Pagliacci." This may or may not represent a record requiring rubrics; but the figures express a prodigious feat: one, I should say, out of consonance with the resources of the opera-house and with, perhaps, the real opera-appetite of this community.

The Metropolitan Opera, also starting four weeks ago, checked up last Monday night with sixteen operas in sixteen days: a higher percentage than Mr. Campanini's, but a smaller achievement, with Sunday out of the schedule, and the use of the theater for the rehearsal of one "wing" while another, Tuesday nights, is in Philadelphia.

This, however, is giving consideration to an aspect of merchandising opera which has, doubtless, no interest for the laity. The point of the comparative data is that Mr. Campanini will have given twenty-eight performances in a period involving twenty by Mr. Gatti-Casazza, whose equivalent for the former's half-price Saturday nights is to cross to Brooklyn and repeat an opera already used in the Metropolitan's schedule.

The half-price schedule so far has not been labor-saving: three of the four Saturday-night bills in the Auditorium have been of first-time-this-season operas, with one item, "Madeleine," not only new to all concerned in its performance, but also urgent in the matter of the orchestra.

Five first-time-this-season operas will have been added to the score when, on the 18th, "Falstaff" is mounted: an average of better than five a week for five weeks, with five of the twenty-seven new in the repertoire of the organization.

This is, doubtless, the proper place to make a proud gesture indicative of Chicago's being a greater operatic center—if that be the right locution—than Manhattan; this being one of the arguments not involved in the foregoing array of data. For weeks and weeks and weeks—ten, at least—after the Auditorium forces shall have disintegrated, opera will be fare at least five times a week in New York. Chicago is given more in the ten weeks in which the seasons are parallel: that is, I think, about as far as comparison may be gratifying.

Nobody seeking to prepare an authentic inventory of contemporary affinities in the David-and-Jonathan manner would juxtapose Mr. Campanini's name and mine; so, I may be credited with a measure of sincerity in anything I print in praise of the activities in the Auditorium. Prodigious, although used above, seems the one sane adjective for what has been undertaken and achieved in four weeks. To say that the performances have been better than last season's were the nadir of approval: the latter could not conceivably have been worse. This season's average high: surprisingly high, as ensembles, in view of the number and variety undertaken; while there are individual exhibitions, as by Galli-Curci and Muratore, which may not now be matched in any other opera-house in the world.

Optimist and bull in my attitude toward opera, I have for many seasons been in alignment with the pitiful few who believe that it is a commodity which may be merchandised without loss, if not with profit, in the community's normal periods. The record, of course, runs against such faith: the record, that is, of emprises at five dollars the seat, with celebrities on the stage, somebodies in direction, good society in the boxes, and efficiency in the counting-room.

Mr. Otto Kahn and his associates annually bid farewell, a long farewell, to one thousand, one million, or one billion dollars: the sum of the deficit varies with the narrator. True, Mr. Kahn has not been apprised of Mr. Julian Mason's first-page panacea against loss: advertising the Opera in the playbills of the movie-theaters. The solution is dazzling in its allure for those who would have song with solvency [illegible], the cinema adulant, stirred by the printed evange[illegible] but to pass up fifty Pickford or Chaplin releases at ten cents apiece to have saved the price of a main-floor seat for Miss Farrar or Mr. Muratore, both also of the movies.

MISS PAWLOSKA will be a Rhinemaiden in the last division, as she was three weeks ago in first, of The Ring. She is, maybe, happier in other employment: for example, Musetta in "La Boheme," in which Melba, last season, praised the young woman; or Lola in yesterday's "Cavalleria"; or Stephano in next Friday's seven-dollar "Romeo and Juliet." Miss Pawloska first took attention from Chicago theater-goers two seasons ago in the operetta called "Sari," in which she sang when Mizzi Hajos was not looking. She is, off-stage, a Chicagoan as Mrs. Carew.

Miss Easton is to be Gutrune in today's "Götterdämmerung": the picture is "in character." This will be her third part in Chicago: she was, last season and this, Brünnhilde in "Siegfried" and, this season only, Nedda in "Pagliacci." She is clever, an Englishwoman, and, out of the opera-house, the wife of a tenor, Francis Maclennan.

Zandonai's "Francesca da Rimini," with a "book" made from the D'Annunzio play, is to be mounted Jan. 5 by Mr. Campanini with Miss Raisa in the name-part. The Metropolitan Opera also lists "Francesca," as yet unknown in this country; and the outlook now is that Chicago will hear it before New York.

Although the Metropolitan has a new soprano of its own, Claudio Muzio, she is, seemingly, not enough: Galli-Curci has been invited to consider the advantages of a Broadway hearing. So also have Miss Raisa and Mr. Crimi. Miss Muzio is engaged to take the place of the luckless Lucrezia Bori, made voiceless, it is said, by inexpert surgery. She got her first hearing last Monday, in "Tosca," with Caruso and Scotti. Some of the critics liked her singing: those who did not were rhapsodic as to her acting.

Caruso, from all accounts, is the sole dependence of the Metropolitan when it is a question of the singer rather than of the opera: when he is in the bill, the house is full. None of the Metropolitan women can effect like results. If Miss Raisa should go there at the end of the Chicago season, she would fill the hole made by Destinn's enforced stay in Europe. The former has most of the equipment of a great dramatic soprano: she seems to lack the precise trick of what, on the speaking stage, is known as "getting over." She [illegible] looking forward to "Francesca" as the utensil of her real triumph in Chicago.

NEWS of the THEATERS

Sir Rabindranath Tagore will make his farewell appearance in Chicago Tuesday evening, Dec. 19, at Orchestra hall, when he will read from "Gitanjali," "The Crescent Moon," "The Gardener," and other works. He will sail for India next month.

Rudolph Friml and Otto Hauerbach, authors of "Katinka," have undertaken to compose a song for the University of Wisconsin.

Miss Maxine Elliott is en route to America to recuperate from her two years' service among the wounded soldiers in Belgium.

"Her Soldier Boy," last season's most pronounced "flivver" in Chicago, is, according to newspaper accounts, a distinguished success in New York City. Clifton Crawford is in it there; Arthur Albro was in it here.

John Cumberland, whose inebriety in "Fair and Warmer" is one of the popular features of that farce, is an author. He has written for Miss Rose Coghlan's use in vaudeville a sketch called "Temper and Temperament."

The late Lewis Waller's rôle in America by John Miltern.

Speaking to the first night audience of "The Master" Arnold Daly professed a doubt that the play would succeed. "It has one fatal Jonah," said he. "I like it."

From the muse of Miss Iris Tree, the interesting daughter of Sir Herbert:

"Now is the evening knee-dipped in blood,
And the dun hills stand fearful in their place,
With burdens of vainglory on our backs,
Spinning with spider hands the miser's web."

Mrs. Jack Norworth, maintaining the tradition established by her predecessors, Miss Louise Dresser and Miss Nora Bayes, has sued Mr. Norworth for a divorce.

Through These Columns We Will Announce the Dedication of

Guyon's Paradise

The World's Most Magnificent Dancing Palace

A monument to the triumphant success of Professor Guyon's ceaseless struggle, started four years ago, to throttle the increase of Immoral Dancing in our fair city, the success of which has been possible only through the constant and loyal support of the finest people in the world—the Chicago Dancing Public—which has permitted the development of an apparently hopeless birth of an idea, from a vague, intangible dream conceived years ago, into a genuine, virile actuality—teeming with life, music, brilliance and clean gayety—with a patronage of only clean, healthy-minded manhood and womanhood. The DREAM HAS COME TRUE (Aladdin and his wonderful lamp have nothing on us), and Guyon is able to present to you A DANCING PALACE three times as large as any now in existence—a safe haven for the music-loving, laughter-loving, dance-loving Chicago public—absolutely free from the contaminating influence of the cafe or cabaret, which will positively outstrip any recreation edifice ever erected, from time immemorial.

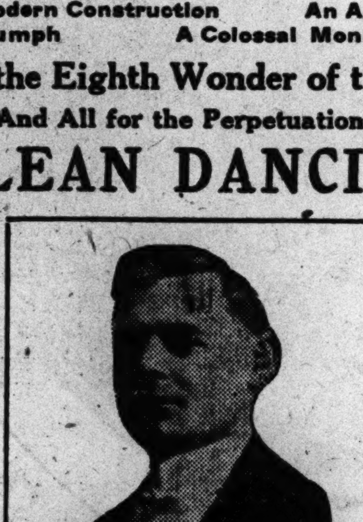
Truly the Eighth Wonder of the World

And All for the Perpetuation of

CLEAN DANCING



Prof. J. Louis Guyon

Prof. Guyon wishes it distinctly understood that any credit due for the final accomplishment of this gigantic undertaking is to be awarded, not to him, but to the generous, loyal Chicago people, and he is most happy to offer them a fitting tribute to their unswerving loyalty and support—cheers mingled with the handclapping. Bernhardt deftly shifted a bolsterlike pillow to hide her missing limb, swung off the couch and rose to the greeting. As she stood, so did the audience, and there was more and more applause.

The golden voice was missing. It was plainly painful for her to talk, and yet with much the old spirit she played an episode in the great queen's life as a queen might have played it, and died gloriously with the assistance of the asp. Curiously it did not seem to be an aged actress with a husky voice playing a part, but Cleopatra with a cold. One all but wondered if Egypt's queen had not been careless about her flannels.

At the conclusion of this first play there was a second demonstration, in the midst of which Rose Coghlan, speaking for actors of the American stage, presented a wreath and was sweetly kissed upon the cheek by the divine one.

Laurette Taylor's welcome home was not quite so exciting as Bernardt's, but it was just as sincere, so far as it went. No young woman can make the friends Miss Taylor made with her 600-odd performances of "Peg o' My Heart" in New York and be forgotten in so short a time as two years—not, at least, with a good publicity promoter on the job.

The favorite American comedienne has a new play this season, called "The Harp of Life," written for her by her husband, J. Hartley Manners, and dealing exclusively with the problems faced by a young mother in the bringing up of a son.

Determined to prove that she could play some other kind of character than that of Peg, Miss Taylor deliberately selected this rôle of a 36 year old matron for her reëntrance here. Of course, she doesn't look 36, for all that she doubtless could prove she is that old at home. She looked no more than a fair 23 with her blonde hair combed back after the fashion of a saucy youth at college. But she is true enough artist to make you believe anything she tells you to believe, and her mother's problems immediately become quite serious problems to you because they are so genuinely serious to her.

It is with her son's first affair with the sirens that she has principally to deal. She had brought him up as fairly and as sanely as she knew how. She had not overlooked the modern theories of sex hygiene. She had talked plainly to him of the mysteries of life and the sacredness of women as the mothers of the race. She had made herself as much his pal as she could, and kept as closely in touch with him as a young mother may keep in touch with a son. And yet he had somehow slipped away from her, and one night the revelation came—the first night she "exercised her mother's prerogative and sat up for him" until daylight.

When he did come in next morning, looking a litle white about the gills, it was to confess to her that he was going to be married to the most wonderful woman in the world. She received the announcement calmly, but she can't quite understand why her future daughter-in-law has never been brought to the house, or what there is so wonderful about her that she must be kept in hiding—until she learns through a friend that the lad has picked a famous divorcee for his mate. Then she understands quite well.

In the last act she visits the lad's fiancée in one of those purple parlors in which stage sirens usually live and finds her true to all the traditions of stage and fiction. With her the mother pleads that her boy be given back to her; not hysterically, but quietly and sanely, throwing herself rather on the mercy of the scarlet one. And, of course, the wicked lady's heart is touched. She does not grow maudlin nor rampageous, but she agrees to let the boy make his own choice after she has told him of her amatory adventures with his several predecessors. Quickly the boy's illusion is dispelled.

Probably in real life he would have clung the closer to so experienced a lady and bade his sorrowing mother go home while he continued to live his own life, like any independent feminist. But this is not that kind of a play.

The first two acts, burdened somewhat with the philosophy of the maternal feminine, are still simple and natural and acted most appealingly by Miss Tayolr. Thanks to her own performance, even the garish and inconsistent last act cannot kill the play. "The Harp of Life" looks at this writing not like another success as great as that of "Peg," but like one that will keep Miss Taylor playing on Broadway all the rest of this season at least.

In her support Philip Merrivale plays the husband and Dion Titheradge, a brother of Madge of that name and "A Butterfly on the Wheel" fame, is the son. A little English girl, Lynn Fontanne, scored an overnight Broadway success in a small emotional rôle, that of a young girl arrived at "the delightful age when they are all bones and blushes," as the text has it, by playing her scenes as forcefully and as sincerely as Miss Taylor herself could have done.

Oliver Morosco, continuing his campaign to place New York on a par with his native Los Angeles as a producing center, introduced his third comedy of the season to Broadway last week. The other two, first the Hattons' "Upstairs and Down," and second, the musical play, "So Long Letty" are both prosperous, despite the fact that neither was received with any marked enthusiasm by the local experts. The new one got away to quite as poor a start, and now it, too, has better than a fair chance of surviving. Indicating that Mr. Morosco is a pretty fair guesser.

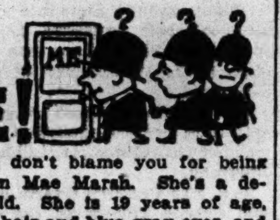
ASK ME! ASK ME!



Mae Tinee's answers to movie fans will be found every day in "The Daily Tribune."

HELEN W.: In "Silks and Satins" Vernon Steel played opposite Marguerite Clarke. You are entirely welcome.

ELIZABETH M.: In "The Caveman" Fay Wallace played opposite Robert Edeson. Not a bit of bother.

BILLIE M. V. R. E.: I haven't space to tell you all my views in this column. If you will send a stamped, addressed envelope I shall mail you a list that will stagger you. Mrs. Fiske probably meant what she said. Because I didn't want to. You're welcome.

E. Y.: I shall take great pleasure in sending you the printed material I have on scenario writing and a list of firms that accept scenarios, if you will mail me a stamped, addressed envelope.

L. H. M.: Did you get the article on scenario writing? I do hope it will help you. I am pretty proud, I tell you, to hear about that circassian walnut frame! Thank you, and write again soon, please!

B. M.: I don't blame you for being interested in Mae Marsh. She's a delightful child. She is 19 years of age, has auburn hair and blue-gray eyes, and is not married. She is one of a large family of children.

M. M.: The cast of "True Nobility" is as follows: Phil Burton, E. Forrest Taylor; Effie Marsh, Helen Rosson; Countess Niassino, Eugenie Forde; Lord Devlin, Harry Van Meter; Jean Bradford, Lisette Thorne.

W. S. E.: I am sorry, but as you did not mention the name of the company that produced the play in which you are interested, I am unable to give you the information you wish.

GAY: George Walsh is with the Fox Film company, 130 West Forty-sixth street, New York. A letter addressed to the gentleman care of the above mentioned company will reach him. Y'wekkum.

EASY RATIS: I'm passionately fond of corned beef and cabbage, so expect me in to dinner the next time I'm in Montana. I'm glad to have heard from you again. Write s'more sm'time.

MUTUAL GETS NANCE O'NEIL.

THE brief announcement that the Mutual has signed up Nance O'Neil induces revery. To begin with, one remembers that the charming name was not the one she was given at birth. Her father and mother were Lamsons, and, of course, she was a Lamson, too, her first name being the decidedly old fashioned one, Gertrude.

Miss Nance O'Neil (Captured by Mutual)
MOFFETT PHOTO

As the girl grew and developed, however, ideas of her own grew and developed in her. She was a quaint, thoughtful child, always cherishing a desire to go on the stage. She regarded with reverance the work of two actresses of a former generation. These were Nance Oldfield and Eliza O'Neil. Because of her admiration for, and her desire to emulate the work of these two women, she named herself for both of them.

"They are my patron saints," she said one day to an interviewer. "At least I call them so." The two photographs she kept and carried with her as conscientiously as would a devotee cherish the insignia of his or her religion. Though she developed into a most remarkable tragedienne and was everywhere acknowledged a great beauty, she wasn't even pretty when she first appeared before McKee Rankin at his office in the Alcazar theater in San Francisco, at the age of 18, and asked to be placed on the stage:

Says Mr. Rankin of her: "She was awkward and nearly tongue tied and a half-fledged schoolgirl. I had to say to her what every girl hears from the manager when she wants to go on the stage: 'I haven't anything now.' Her personality haunted me, however, and later I put her to work."

Probably the rôle in which she was most famous was Magda. She appeared in Thomas Bailey Aldrich's drama, "Judeth and Bethulia," in the screen version of which Blanche Sweet, you remember, played the lead.

It seems to me that opportunities have been overlooked regarding Miss O'Neil. I don't see why with proper direction she could not have made a smashing success in pictures. As it is she has been but little heard of. Her first work with the Mutual will be in the picturization of Gertrude Atherton's novel, "Mrs. Balfame." Mrs. Atherton has said: "I consider Miss O'Neil as the one actress in America particularly suited for the portrayal of this character."

William S. Hart and his company expect to leave this week for the international boundary between the United States and Mexico for the purpose of filming a herd of 63,000 head of cattle.

"Intolerance" continues to do a rushing business at the Colonial theater.

"War on Three Fronts," which is being conducted under the auspices of the German and Austro-Hungarian Relief association for their benefit, will remain at the Playhouse for another week.

Mr. Linder is working on his first "Made in America" comedy. It is said that only blonde actresses will be allowed to play with him, as he desires to provide contrast for his dark and manly beauty. He will, too, it is said, have his own players and his own technical staff, even to property men. Mr. Linder works with two interpreters, one his secretary and the other acting as his assistant director. He says—in English—that in three months he will be saying everything in English. Well, "everything" is some word!

William Fox is the recipient of a letter from Gov. George W. P. Hunt of Arizona praising "The Honor System." Says the governor: "I congratulate you upon filming 'The Honor System.' It will do good to suffering men throughout this country. It will awaken our public to a sense of responsibility toward men behind the bars." One of the actors in this production is—we speak softly—a cockroach. The producers declare it to be a real Henry Irving of a cockroach. The actor in question is used to carry messages from one prisoner to another.

Nell Shipman, it is said, has accepted an offer of $2,500 for five weeks for her time in connection with the pictures for Vitigraph, "God's Country and the Woman" and "Through the Wall." It will be Miss Shipman's duty to appear in connection with the pictures.

Lee Moran is ill with pneumonia.

The American Film company wants scenarios for Mary Miles Minter, scripts for William Russell, and dramas for Helen Holmes. If you want more detailed information write in and I'll tell you all about the requirements.

"An Enemy to the King" will be shown another week at the Ziegfeld. E. H. Sothern and Edith Storey are costars in the production.

Harold Lockwood and his automobile had an argument with a motor truck last week and the motor truck proved conclusively that it's was the strength if not the logic.

Says Cleo Madison of Mary Pickford: "One of the reasons Miss Pickford has been so successful is the fact that she plays in happy pictures and the audience never leaves the theater after a Pickford picture with a dark brown taste in the mouth."

Betty Schade has found her father. She lost him when the war started and, like Little Bo-Peep, she didn't know where to find him. Miss Schade received a letter from her father, who is now safe and sound in his Chicago home. He says he was in the trenches for two years and that during the time of his service he never once was ill or wounded. Bully for papa!

A Sargent Portrait of New Chicagoan

(INTERNATIONAL FILM SERVICE PHOTO)

Mrs. Marshall Field III. is rapidly winning her way into the hearts of Chicagoans by the interest and enthusiasm she displays in regard to the affairs of her adopted home. She is prominently identified with the plans for the allied bazaar, and is coming back from New York after the holidays to help in the War Relief Clearing House booth. This booth is under the active management of Mrs. Frederick Upham and Miss Martha Wilson, and is to be an electric shop selling all sorts of up to date electric appliances. The photograph is taken from a portrait by the artist, John Sargent.

By Mme. X.

THE adaptability of this country to the inconveniences inevitably incident to a great world war (even today those last two words sound preposterous and incredible) is manifested in many and various ways. We are beginning to solve the problems of dyes, thus emancipating us from dependence on German "farbenfabriken." Our dressmakers are using their own imaginations and putting their own stamp on fashions in clothes, which means that we are no longer led by the great French modistes, though a return to that tutelage at the end of the war can be safely prophesied.

And now one more foreign yoke is to be displaced by native enterprise. A great English touring concern no longer arranges world tours, no longer insures comfort and safety to the luxurious, but enterprising wanderer. But does that confine American tourists to the narrow confines of their own continent? It does not. The English concern's local counterpart is one Hugh McBirney, who is to head a personally conducted band of Chicago's bravest, fairest, most highly "cultured" citizens into the wilds of China.

He has not yet chartered a steamer for the expedition. That is left as a solution of such possible later developments as a decision on the part of most of the residents on the Lake Shore drive and adjacent streets to cross the Pacific with the McBirneys. That the number of candidates to join in this pilgrimage should grow seems inevitable as the season's cares and fatigues increase. We confess that, were it not for the difficulty of breaking home ties, the X family would go.

This company of wayfarers, as at present constituted, includes, besides Mr. and Mrs. Hugh McBirney, Day McBirney, Mrs. Caroline M. Ely, a noted traveler and collector of rare and beautiful objects; Howard Shaw, and his lovely debutante daughter, Miss Sylvia Shaw, and the Arthur Aldises.

The plan is to make a brief stay at Honolulu, look at Japan, and then attempt the hazards of an extended tour in China, exploring the little known interior of the Celestial kingdom via the various interesting and picturesque river routes.

Return in the Spring.

Starting in January these modern Canterbury pilgrims will not return before April or May. There will probably be a distinctly Chinese aspect to our architecture, gardens, interior decorations, sculpture, poetry, and drama after they come back.

Howard Shaw is one of Chicago's foremost architects; the village square at Lake Forest, his work, is the favorite illustration in art magazines all over the country and has attracted widespread attention and comment.

Mrs. McBirney stands in the forefront of local gardeners; the grounds around her Lake Forest home, the "House of the Four Winds," make it one of the show places of that fashionable and beautiful suburb.

Mrs. Ely is one of our great authorities in interior decoration. Were she not so thoroughly fortified from the lean and hungry wolf she would undoubtedly have made this form of art her profession. As it is, both her town apartment at 936 Lake Shore drive and her quaint Georgian house at Lake Forest are perfection in taste and luxurious appointment.

Miss Shaw is a sculptor of extraordinary promise. She has a most effective piece in the present collection of sculpture at the Art Institute and has another on exhibit in New York.

Mrs. Aldis as a poet has a nation-wide fame. Her recently published volume of poems has attracted an unusual amount of comment from the first literary critics in the country.

Arthur Aldis' position as patron and main prop of the higher drama is too well known to need comment here. He has what is undoubtedly the most comprehensive collection in the country of books of modern plays and has devoted himself and his purse to the support of the cause of better drama.

Could old Chaucer himself collect a troupe of choicer spirits than this band of Mr. McBirney's? I trow not.

But China and Japan are not the only countries left open to the enterprising American traveler. Mr. and Mrs. Carter Harrison left New Orleans yesterday on what Mrs. Harrison calls their second honeymoon and are going first to Panama. Mr. Harrison regarded the present international situation as too fraught with dangerous possibilities to risk getting a circular ticket taking in all of South America. But he and Mrs. Harrison hope to accomplish such a trip before their return in the spring.

Arctic Explorer in Chicago.

But what are the adventures and enterprises of our little local Sir John and Lady Mandevilles in comparison wth the past achievements and future plans of the world's most famous explorer, Capt. Raoul Amundsen? Capt. Amundsen is at present in Chicago collecting supplies for another arctic expedition which he plans to take north of Siberia, a trip which he says will certainly take three years, "or possibly even four or five," this with a shrug of the shoulders, as if a couple of extra years in the polar regions were a trifling matter.

Although he discovered the northwest passage, the ambition and objective of every great arctic adventurer since the days of Queen Elizabeth, and though he is still more famous as being the first to plant a banner on the south pole, Capt. Amundsen is no rugged, frost scarred, weather bitten seafarer. He is essentially the man of the world, polished, agreeable, suave, of distinguished appearance. He is smooth shaven, gray haired, of medium height, with a hawk's beak of a nose.

He is furthermore and pre-eminently a scientist. The year before he actually navigated the northwest passage he was up at the ice-bound eastern entrance to it studying the problem of the magnetic pole. An unprecedented ten days' thaw opened the passage before him. He knew that he had only to turn the prow of his ship up that lane of black, bitter sea water to accomplish the ardent desire of all his predecessors, the northern passage from the Atlantic to the Pacific. But he resolutely abstained and instead devoted himself to the task to which he had dedicated his expedition. The following summer, when, his work done, the same opportunity presented itself to him, he reaped his reward by being the first that ever burst upon that inland sea and out of it again.

Dinner to Debutantes.

The week's prinicpal society event was the dinner of 185 guests given on Wednesday evening by Mr. and Mrs. Robert Dunham at the Casino club in honor of the three debutantes, Miss Lolita Armour, Miss Ermina Carry, and Miss Eleanor Holden. The debutante set, some fifty strong, sat at a long, flower bedight table in the center of the "salle de danse," while the older guests dined at the narrow, black, glass topped tables that rim the big room. It was a gay and festive throng.

Tomorrow evening Mrs. Harry Gordon Selfridge gives a dinner-dance for her daughter, Miss Violette Selfridge, at that attractive haunt of the lover of the dance, the Opera club, next door to the Blackstone theater. It is to be a southern "chicken" dinner, and the place itself is to be turned into a riverside tea garden at Henley with the Thames, boat covered and crowded, as a background. The guests will sit under gayly striped umbrellas, and Miss Selfridge's uncle, Frank Chandler, is having the hall wired so as to produce some marvellous electrical effects.

Once again the Butchers and Bakers and Candlestick Makers are called upon to celebrate Twelfth Night at some mysterious spot not to be divulged until the evening of the ball. This is always one of the winter's gayest affairs. The same mysterious twelve knights, at 76 East Monroe street, are designated as repositories for the acceptances or regrets, and there are few of the latter.

America Gives Least.

It was a precise statement of facts that was made by Edgar Rickard and Dr. Robert Arrowsmith at the luncheon given at the Blackstone last Tuesday by the Chicago committee of the Belgian relief commission, and the guests of the occasion, 200 of the most prominent and public spirited Chicagoans, could hardly have left the gathering without a sense that, as a nation, we had not toed the line.

Put briefly, the message brought us by these two men, workers who have for over two years devoted themselves body and soul without any remuneration to the service of the famous Hoover commission, was that, while the commission had, since it undertook the relief of the starving Belgians, expended over $200,000,000, with over $125,000,000 of this spent in America, this country had given only $8,000,000 of this sum. England pays monthly $5,000,000 to the commission; France gives $2,000,000 a month. Italy, Australia, Canada, New Zealand, South Africa all contribute more per capita than we do. And yet the Belgians give all the credit to us. We shine with a light that is not ours.

The work of the Hoover commission is the most remarkable by-product of the war. When he organized his staff of co-workers, Herbert C. Hoover said that he didn't want any one who was not a $25,000 a year man—that is, a man who could command that salary. He got what he wanted, a band of as able men as you could find anywhere, each one of whom has been devoting his time and strength to this work entirely free of charge ever since.

In spite of the splendid accomplishment of these men want has set its mark on what was before the war the most industrious, prosperous, thickly settled little country in the world. Among the undernourished children tuberculosis is working a devastation which can only be arrested by more and better food. If Belgium is to be saved from the fate of Poland it will only be by the whole hearted and generous support of the Hoover commission by the American people.

The great event of the luncheon was the singing of the Marseillaise by Muratore, a passionate, dramatic burst of song which touched and stirred every heart present. It certainly is the most thrilling of national hymns and Muratore the greatest of tenors. It was some comfort to some of the Americans there, who mumble through all but the first verses of any of our patriotic songs, to se that Muratore had to use notes for the second and third stanzas of his national song.

Among those present were the Watson Blairs, Hugh McBirneys, Marshall Fields III., Walter Brewsters, George Higginsons, Samuel Insulls, George McKinlocks, and Arthur Aldises.

Autographed Copies For Sale.

The Allied bazaar bulletins are issued regularly and with great precision by that queen of press agents, Mrs. Morris Johnston, whose work in this direction deserves especial mention because of its effective industry. She distributes among us newspaper people interesting items with an even handed justice that compels respect and admiration.

To this column has been assigned the privilege of announcing that Mrs. Russell Tyson, head of the French war shop, will have in her booth autographed copes of books by Arnold Bennett, Rudyard Kipling, and Henry Van Dyke. The last named distinguished author includes in his contribution a hitherto unpublished poem which the buyer will own body and soul, or original and copyright. It is a great chance for the collector of such additions to a library.

The question as to keeping the bazaar open on the one Sunday that occurs in the ten days allotted to it has been decided in favor of so doing. It is argued that Sunday would be doubly sanctified by using it to work for such a cause. There are no Sundays in those terrible trenches. At the same time, those who really object to so employing the Sabbath can close their booths.

Lecture Dates Changed.

Changes in two coming lecture dates in popular courses are announced. Instead of the talk by Henry Waite which was billed for last Tuesday in the Chicago Equal Suffrage association series Thomas Mott Osborne will give a discourse on prison reform next Thursday evening in Mrs. Cyrus Hall McCormick's beautiful, tapestried drawing room, at 50 East Huron street. It is expected that many men will avail themselves of this opportunity of hearing and meeting this well known authority on this subject.

Another postponed affair is that of Mrs. Marks' (better known as Josephine Preston Peabody) talk at the Sunday evening poetry symposium at the Little theater which was scheduled for next Sunday. On account of illness Mrs. Marks will not be here until later in the winter. She was to have been the guest of another poet, Mrs. Otto Freer, whose nom de plume, Agnes Lea, is perhaps more familiar to many because of the capital prose and poetical writings signed by this name.

Next Thursday evening in the Cyrus H. McCormick's beautiful tapestried drawing room Thomas Mott Osborne will give a talk on prison reform. There will be great contrast between subject and environment. This discourse takes the place in the Chicago Equal Suffrage association's lecture course of Henry Waite's talk scheduled for last Tuesday.

Miss Marjorie Westerland is one of the young women who will serve at the anniversary of the Bonnie Hame association, which will be held tomorrow evening at the residence of Mr. and Mrs. William H. Fahrney, 6171 Sheridan road. There will be dancing, cards, and a program.

Miss Marion Sausser is secretary of the auxiliary of the Catholic Woman's club of Rogers Park, which is giving a dance at the Edgewater Beach hotel on Dec. 19.

Woodlawn Club a Leader in Social Service

By Hazel Whitaker.

CO-OPERATION seems to have been the word that has spelled success to the Woodlawn Woman's club, for only a splendid working force could have accomplished what it has done in its twenty-one years' existence.

December is a busy month for the club, even though this season does include so many extra activities. Reciprocity day will be celebrated on Tuesday afternoon at the regular headquarters in the Masonic Temple building, and the twenty-one presidents from the second district will be the guests of honor. Horace J. Bridges, leader of the Catholic Ethical society, will talk on "Inspiration, What It is and How to Get It." Other talks will be made by Mrs. W. J. Hardy and Mrs. Frederick A. Dow, state secretary of the General Federation of Women's Clubs. S. Heller, baritone, will sing.

The day after Christmas the annual party for the children will be given; there will be games and dancing, and Dr. Lewis W. Bremerman will illustrate "Unique Illusions."

Both the art and literature and the history and travel departments hold morning meetings during this month, the former on Tuesday and the latter on Dec. 19. The art and literature program, under the leadership of Mrs. Frank Pearson, will study H. G. Wells' book, "The Wife of Sir Isaac Harmon," and Herbert Hammond will talk on "Verse Making as a Busines Man's Recreation." Mrs. Richard B. Wilson is the leader of the travel day, and the subject will be "Commerce and Government of South America."

Mrs. Charles Henrotin helped organize the Woodlawn Woman's club in 1894, and Mrs. Corinne Brown was the first president. From the start the club has emphasized social service work. During the presidency of Mrs. Emmet L. Bay a series of assembly dances were given for the pleasure of the working girls and boys in the neighborhood. The community dance on New Year's from 4 p. m. till 12 o'clock has, through the club's efforts, become a yearly affair. Regular volunteer services are given by the members at Fellowship house and at the South Chicago settlement. Half hour entertainments and talks are given at noon at factories all over the city. Evening affairs are also held for these factory girls.

The club has the record of having contributed more to the United Charities last year than any other similar organization. It financed a branch library in Woodlawn for six months, until the city took it over. Social center work is being done at the John Fiske and the Hyde Park High schools.

Besides the contribution to the United Charities the following are listed among the club's regular donations: The Municipal Art league, the Drama league, the Illinois congress of mothers, the South Chicago Day nursery, the Infant Welfare society, and local charities of all kinds.

Miss Mary E. Adkins is chairman of the bureau of volunteer social service, which hopes to start a series of entertainments in January at the new Y. W. C. A., and to help organize classes there. Extensive plans are also under way to work in coöperation with the other twenty-one clubs of the district to make the Hyde Park High school the largest social center on the south side. This club has already pledged $100 toward the work, and a theater party will be given in January to further add to this fund.

Besides those already mentioned, the club chorus, of which Mrs. Charles H. Miller is chairman, is another active department, as is also the home and education section, with Mrs. C. A. Walton in charge.

The present officers are: Mrs. Charles S. Cornelius, president; Mrs. Richard B. Wilson, first vice president; Mrs. Milton H. Mack, second vice president; Mrs. John S. Maurer, recording secretary; Mrs. Robert J. Coyne, corresponding secretary; Mrs. M. D. Miler, treasurer. Directors: Mrs. A. K. Frain, Mrs. Harold B. Maryott, Mrs. Frank C. Cady, and Mrs. Edward J. Thorne.

DOWNTOWN CLUBS

The Chicago Woman's club literary study class of the art and literature department will meet on Wednesday at 10:30 a. m. in Recital hall. Mrs. Luigi Shears-Carnovale will speak on "The Poets of Italy." The regular literary meeting of the club will be held in Recital hall on Wednesday at 2 p. m. Charlotte Perkins Gilman will speak on "How to Make World Citizens." On Thursday Thomas Mott Osborne will speak before the club in the Blackstone theater at 2 p. m. on "New Ideals in Prison Reform." On Friday the art study class of the art and literature department will meet at 10:30 a. m. Miss Samuella Crosby will speak on "The Moslem in India" and there will be stereopticon illustrations. The home department will give a Christmas luncheon in the clubrooms on Saturday at 12:30 p. m. The board of managers will meet on Tuesday at 10 a. m. in the board rooms.

A formal college dance will be held next Saturday evening by the Chicago College club in its rooms in the Stevens building. Supper will be served at 10:30 p. m. The regular tea will take place on Friday afternoon.

Tomorrow the associates of the Chicago Culture club will give a surprise program at 2 o'clock at the Hotel La Salle. The young women, with Miss Mabel Evans as their chairman and Mrs. J. G. Budde as chaperon, are making the arrangements. The associates have an "at home" day once a month in the different homes of their members.

At the Central Eleanor club, 16 North Wabash avenue, this afternoon, Miss Sarah E. Griswold will speak and Miss Naomi Nazor, soprano, will supply the music. The program at 4 p. m. will be followed by a social hour.

Thursday will be "philanthropy day" for the Chicago colony of New England Women. At the Blackstone hotel at 2:30 p. m. there will be given an illustrated musical on "Real American Music." The lecture will be presented by Allen Ray Carpenter, with illustrations by a mixed quartet. The proceeds will go to charity.

On Wednesday the Elmira College club will hold its annual business meeting at the Chicago College clubroom at 3 p. m.

Mrs. Franklin S. Wilson has been elected president of the Chicago chapter of Mt. St. Joseph college alumnæ. The chapter will meet bimonthly and continue to work for the scholarship fund.

The Woman's Catholic league charity ball is to be held in the gold room at the Congress on Dec. 29. The various committees are making a special effort to insure not only the social success of this ball but to make it a financial success as well, as the many charities to which the funds are devoted are in need of assistance. Mrs. A. H. Lamm is chairman of the ball commitee.

"Hors d'Oeuvres and Entrées" will be the subject of the demonstration at the School of Domestic Arts and Science, 6 North Michigan avenue, tomorrow at 2 p. m., repeated especially for cooks on Thursday at 2:30 and 7:30 p. m., and on Friday at 10:30 a. m. There will be a free lecture on Wednesday at 11 a. m. on "Foods and Food Distribution" by O. C. Ericson.

The Gen. Henry Dearborn chapter, D. A. R., holds its annual white breakfast on Tuesday in the Goldroom of the Congress hotel. Mrs. Horace C. McConnell is chairman. Addresses will be made by Francis W. Shepardson and John Temple Graves. Guests of honor will be Mrs. Frank C. Bahusen, state regent of Illinois; Mrs. George C. Squires, state regent of Minnesota; Mrs. William Butterworth, Mrs. Willard T. Block, Mrs. John C. Amis, Mrs. Franklin C. Prince, and Mrs. Dwight W. Graves.

The Twenty-seventh ward branch of the Woman's City club will meet on Tuesday at 2 p. m. in room 201 of the Carl Schurz High school. The speaker is Harry De Joannis on "Coöperative Buying as a Remedy for the High Cost of Living."

The civic and legislative departments of the Chicago Political Equality league will hold a joint meeting on Saturday at 2 p. m. in the Florentine room of the Congress hotel. William B. Hale, president of the Civil Service Reform association, will speak on "The Merit System," Sigmund Zeisler on "Civil Service," Russell Whitman on "Civil Service Reform," and Charles F. Clyne, United States district attorney, on "The High Cost of Living." Mrs. Albert H. Schweizer is chairman of the legislative department and Mrs. Judith Weill Loewenthal of the civics department.

Under the auspices of the department of philanthropy, the Catholic Woman's league will meet on Saturday at 2:30 p. m. in the assembly room of the Fine Arts building. Miss Margaret O'Connor will preside. Dr. S. R. Pietrowicz will speak on "The Problem of the Backward Child." An address on "The Social Unfit" will be given by Dr. Mary O'Brien Porter. Reports will be given as follows: St. Anne's day nursery, Mrs. John J. Geraghty; St. Elizabeth's day nursery, Mrs. William T. J. Plummer; St. Julianna's day nursery, Mrs. Frank Ellsworth.

The Virginia colony of the Illinois Colony club will hold its annual card party tomorrow at 2 p. m. at Mandel's tea room. This event is for the Christmas fund to provide baskets for a number of poor families. Mrs. A. E. Kaltenbrun is chief and Mrs. William Driver chairman of the ways and means committee of the club. Mrs. H. M. Tenney is chairman of the philanthropy committee.

The British American Woman's club will hold its regular meeting at the Auditorium hotel on Wednesday at 2 p. m. The club will hold a card party and dance at the Gladstone hotel on Wednesday evening. The proceeds will go to the bazaar fund.

On Wednesday the regular meeting of the Baron Hirsch Woman's club and coworkers will take place at 2 p. m. in the Auditorium hotel. It will be "Children's day" and a playette called "Children at Home" will be presented by children under 12 years of age under the direction of Miss K. Kind. Hostesses of the afternoon will be Mrs. Abe Kohn and Mrs. S. Lande. Mrs. B. M. Englehardt is president of the woman's club and Miss Angelia Haslacher of the coworkers.

On Tuesday evening the regular meeting of the Fashion Art League of America will be held in the Auditorium hotel. Mrs. Herman J. Hall will lecture on "Form and Composition" in relation to dress. The president, Mrs. A. E. Bailey, will preside.

"Federation day" will be observed by the woman's auxiliary of the Hungarian Charity society on Tuesday at 2 p. m. in the Kaiserhof hotel. Mrs. Harry E. Chamberlain will speak on "Glimpses of the Federation."

On Tuesday evening the Playgoers' club will have a meeting at the Hotel La Salle to hear Prof. Benedict Papot lecture on "Recent French Plays."

The woman's organization of the Chicago Retail Druggists' association will meet on Tuesday at the Hotel La Salle at 2 p. m. "Housewives Problems" will be the subject of a talk by Mrs. John Bley.

Eddy Brown will be the guest of honor at a meeting of the American Guild of Violinists which will be held Friday evening at Kuntz-Remmler's restaurant.

Tomorrow the drama study class of the Dorothy Meadows' Drama circle will meet at 11 a. m. in studio 612 in the Fine Arts building.

The next regular meeting of Rothschild & Co. Employés' Social club will be an open one and will be held on Thursday evening in the Masonic temple club rooms. A Christmas party will follow the regular business meeting.

—a Piano
—an Inner-Player Piano
—a Victrola

Last year's small presents are forgotten—scarce remembered even by yourself. Concentrate this year's Christmas purse upon a really substantial, satisfying gift—a piano, a player-piano or a Victrola.

Come NOW. You'll be surprised by the amazing scope of our holiday stocks. You'll be pleased with the reasonableness of our prices. Only a few shopping days remain. Make your selection AT ONCE. We'll arrange Easy Terms of Payment if you like.

Mason & Hamlin Grands make the most beautiful and welcome gifts imaginable. Our holiday exhibit of these famous instruments will be rapidly depleted. Immediate reservation alone will enable you to avoid disappointment.

Conover Grand Pianos are exquisite instruments, the art product of our own great factories. If we built and sold but two, three or even five thousand pianos a year, then certainly the CONOVER would cost you at least $100 more than we ask. Easy payments.

Cable Midget Grands for apartments and small homes. A $725 tone value at $585. Terms of $15 a month if desired.

SoloCarola Inner-Player The Miracle Player—the only player ever made that can accent accompaniment or solo notes either independently or together anywhere upon the keyboard.

Euphona Inner-Player $200 lower in price than any former Inner-Player Piano. We have a type and finish of this marvelous player as low as $395, and another style which is motor driven. Easy payments.

Edison's Most Sublime Gift to Man

Anna Case

Metropolitan Opera Star

Singing in Direct Comparison With Her Re-created Voice on The New Edison.

THOMAS A. Edison, the world's greatest inventor, has re-created music. He has established a new art.

His Re-Creation of music has been tested before two hundred thousand people side by side with the living singer or instrumentalist. Their ears could not tell which was real and which the re-created!

Over 200 trained music critics—men who have listened for years to all that is greatest and best in music—were also unable to detect any difference. In the columns of their newspapers they said:

> "It was actually impossible to distinguish between the singer's living voice and its Re-Creation by the instrument," Boston Herald; "As near human as mortal can imagine," Columbus Dispatch; "Not a person in the audience was able to say whether Miss Miller was singing or the instrument was playing," St. Louis Globe Democrat; "Edison snares the soul of music," New York Tribune; "Only by watching the singers motionless lips did one know that she was not singing," New Orleans Times-Picayune.

It is a daring—an astonishing test. But it is overwhelmingly convincing. Mr. Edison alone has ventured it. Nothing less than "Music's Re-Creation" could pass this acid test.

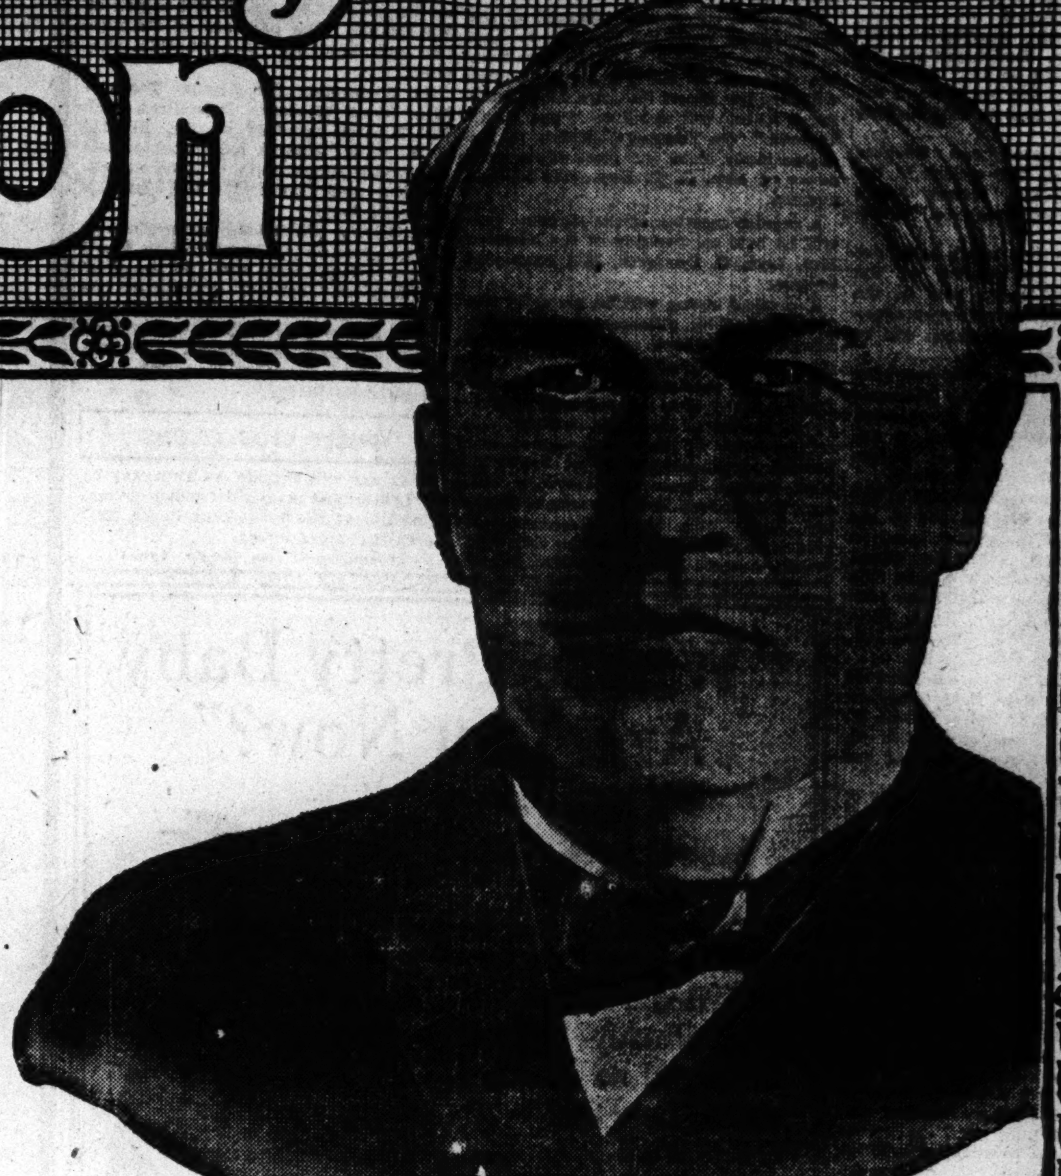
Is it not true, then, that this is Mr. Edison's most sublime gift to man? It brings you music, genuine and true. Think what five minutes each day with this genuine music would mean to your life! How your soul would grow and expand! What a new being it would make you!

The season of good cheer and good will is near. What could be a nobler gift to the loved ones than this new art. What better time than this to bring into their lives an influence through which they and you will live a broader, finer life?

Will you not decide now to go and experience the joy of this re-created music. Realize what it means to you. Every one of Mr. Edison's representatives will be glad to introduce you to this new art.

The New Edison

Where You May Hear The New Edison



NO matter where you live this opportunity is at your door—to experience the joy of the master inventor's new art. Grasp it now! Any of Mr. Edison's representatives, named below, will be glad to play the New Edison for you. Some of them are giving special Christmas concerts now. Pick out the one nearest you. Visit him at once and learn what this Re-Created Music means in your life and in your home.

Have Hair that Wont Blow Off

There is a feeling of comfort and self assurance in the thought that one's hair won't come off.

Every woman, with reasonably good health, may have that kind of hair provided she will give it care and attention.

The scalp must be kept clean and free from dandruff. For this purpose there is nothing superior to Newbro's Herpicide. Used intelligently, the effect of Herpicide is quickly apparent in the increased life, luster and luxuriance of the hair.

Beautiful hair and Newbro's Herpicide are almost invariably associated. Herpicide eradicates dandruff, checks falling hair, stops itching of the scalp. The odor is delightful.

Love's Struggle Throughout the Ages

Through it all goes ever—perfect love—from the tender redeeming sentiment of the winsome little girl of the modern story, The Dear One, to the deep, barbaric, perfumed passion of Belshazzar, the very young King of Babylon, and Princess Beloved, rarest of his pearls, who die clinging to each other's lips as Babylon—mighty Babylon—falls.

See in the end of the last act the terrific race between the beautiful mountain girl of Babylon in a chariot with the flower of the great army of Cyrus in her attempt to save Babylon from destruction, while paralleling this at the same time in a manner that intensifies the suspense is the effort of a high-powered racing automobile to overtake an express train as the Dear One rushes to save her sweetheart.

NEW YORK SOCIETY by MME. Y.

Big Events Get an Early Start in Social Season.

NEW YORK.—[Special Correspondence.]—This is such an unusual season that I believe it has taken even such a veteran observer of social happenings as I by surprise. I think that on two separate and distinct occasions I observed in these columns that the season opened the week before. I was referring to different weeks. The Metropolitan opera opening and the horse show were the cause of one such generalization on my part and the Allied ball the other.

This is to say that there is no wonder I am confused; all of New York is, and the oldest stagers are talking about it. Never before have we had so much social history at this time of year. Always previously we have merely served our time at the opera and the horse show and have bowed to a few debutantes. Our date books have contained invitations to a lot of debutante things and a few weddings. We have left blank spaces and lots of them for the spring dates, for we have expected to fill up with the bigger affairs then.

But never before have we pulled off such an elaborate entertainment in the first lap of the season as was the ball of the allies. I heard Vincent Astor and Hermann Oelrichs talking it over the other day at Sherry's to the accompaniment of what is politely called "a cup of tea." If anybody ought to know social customs it ought to be the scions of these particular houses, and they were exclaiming on what a season this was going to be.

By the way, did you know that Mr. Oelrichs has secured a place in the German embassy and is going to sail soon to fill it? Dear me, what a dramatic bit! A handsome young man of ancient name and accumulated millions of whom the world expected nothing more than that he should make some deserving, young, hard working debutante happy by bestowing these prizes on her—and he is taking up politics. He is going to help his country at a salary probably of nothing at all.

What was I telling last week about the smart set taking up politics? But, O, the bad technique on the part of all of the debutantes of this and preceding seasons to let this greatest of prizes escape to a foreign country where a Gretchen of alien nationality may, in the words of the street, "cop him off." There are none too many such prizes in this country, and I think that unless a certain rumor be true, the young women of the smart set deserve a reproach for faulty workmanship for letting him depart unlassoed. At the same time, I have heard that he is engaged. Maybe before the season ends I shall have to take back these severe words of mine.

But to get back to the record of society in this, its third week, just over and its fourth to come. The season has resumed its old accustomedness of other years. We have the young women with us—debutantes and brides. You never heard of as many luncheons in your entire life as were perpetrated on the debutants this last week. It seems to have become quite the thing, indeed, to feed the young women long and fashionably in their first weeks.

Mrs. Drexel Dahlgren gave a large luncheon for her awfully attractive debutante daughter, Miss Ulricha Dahlgren, at Sherry's, and it was a charming affair. My mind refuses to dwell on it, however, and insists on lodging on Mrs. Dahlgren herself, who has the big task before her of bringing out one daughter this winter and marrying another off. Imagine it, all you who think you are overworked because you have a mere office job to hold down and you others who merely have a house to keep. On Jan. 8 Mrs. Dahlgren is going to marry her daughter, Miss Katherine, to Richard Smith Emmett.

The wedding of the week was that of Miss Jennie Emmet and W. Barton French. As a function the ceremony was small, to be sure, for it took place in the chapel of St. Bartholomew's, but no smarter gathering will come together this season than the one assembled there on that occasion. Everybody loves the boy and the girl who plighted their troth, with the result that the smart set there assembled was in its softest, tenderest mood. The occasion, therefore, is a lovely one to remember.

The bridegroom, who recently reached his twenty-first birthday, has bought from his mother Barton lodge, her handsome villa, and the accompanying estate at the Virginia Hot Springs, where a large part of the honeymoon will be spent.

He is the grandson of the late John Walker Fearn, at one time our minister to Greece, Roumania, and Serbia.

The bride made her debut about three years ago. She is a sister of Mrs. Harold F. Hadden. For the wedding pots of growing pink roses and trails of roses and foliage with great clusters of pink Japanese lilies fastened in sheaves to the walls transformed the chapel into a garden. The Rev. Dr. Leighton S. Parks performed the ceremony.

STOMACH UPSET?

Get at the Real Cause—Take Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets.

That's what thousands of stomach sufferers are doing now. Instead of taking tonics, or trying to patch up a poor digestion, they are attacking the real cause of the ailment—clogged liver and disordered bowels.

Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets arouse the liver in a soothing, healing way. When the liver and bowels are performing their natural functions, away goes indigestion and stomach troubles.

If you have a bad taste in your mouth, tongue coated, appetite poor, lazy, don't-care feeling, no ambition or energy, troubled with undigested foods, you should take Olive Tablets, the substitute for calomel.

Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets are a purely vegetable compound mixed with olive oil. You will know them by their olive color. They do the work without griping, cramps or pain.

Take one or two at bedtime for quick relief, so you can eat what you like. 10c and 25c per box. All druggists.

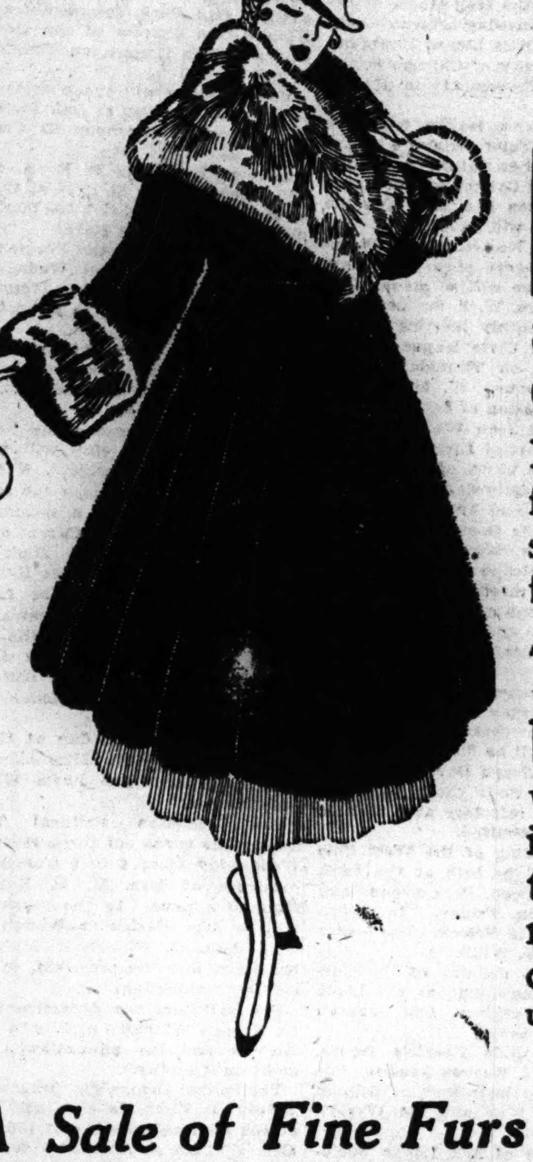
The Credit Store That's Different

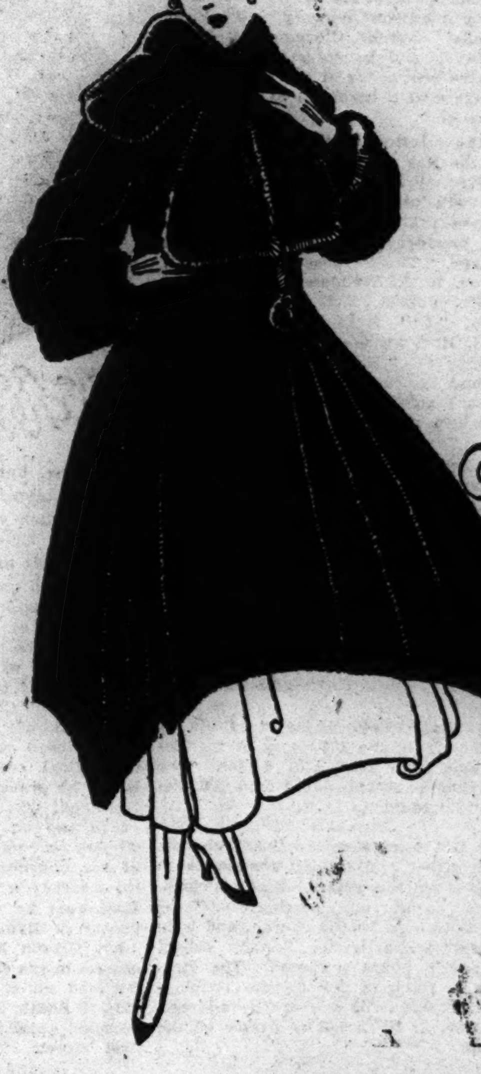
Chas. Glanz, Furrier Is Going Out of the Retail Business



One of Chicago's oldest fur houses—established in 1849—announces a remarkable closing-out sale of quality furs.

FOR 50 years we have sold fine furs at retail. We have conducted this business of manufacturing women's furs as an adjunct to our wholesale business in raw and dressed furs.

This retail business has been a hobby of ours, but we find its complexities are preventing us from devoting proper attention to our wholesale—always the main and most profitable branch of our business. So, we are giving up our retail business completely and finally.



A Sale of Fine Furs Without Precedent in the History of Chicago

Below you will find a list of representative values from our large stock. We urge you to scan every one of these items. Due to the abnormal weather conditions this fall, we have a singularly complete showing of the newest styles and latest novelties, in addition to more conservative designs. Each and every one is an actual, honest, genuine bargain. We have not added a single coat, muff, stole, or throw to our present stock for this sale, and we will not do so.

For instance, there is one coat in this sale which was formerly priced at $350 and is now reduced to $250. Our cost on this coat was $297; yet this is no unusual or remarkable value we have singled out—the same unrelenting reductions have been followed throughout. We can honestly tell you that, in almost every instance, the furs in this sale are being sold below actual cost.

If the Glanz reputation as expert furriers and honorable dealing and straightforward business methods for over half a century mean anything to the buying public, our show rooms will be crowded with eager buyers tomorrow.

Those of our many patrons who have been accustomed to have us make over their furs are urged to bring them in at once so that we can take care of their orders, as we will have no facilities for doing so once we have discontinued our retail business.

News of the Religious World

Bible Society's Anniversary to Be Celebrated Today.

By the Rev. W. B. Norton.

THE celebration of the one hundredth anniversary of the organization of the American Bible society will be held at 3 o'clock today in the Moody tabernacle, North avenue and North Clark street.

The Rev. William I. Haven of New York, corresponding secretary of the American society, will be the principal speaker. Dr. Haven will also speak in the First Methodist Episcopal church, Evanston, at 10:30 o'clock today, and will address the Methodist ministers' meeting tomorrow morning in the First Methodist church, Chicago, at 10:30. Dr. Haven will be entertained by the executive committee of the Chicago Bible society at a luncheon at the Union League club.

At the meeting in the Moody tabernacle the Rev. J. N. Lucoock, pastor of the First Presbyterian church, Oak Park, will preside, and the following will speak: The Rev. James G. K. McClure, president McCormick Theological seminary, "The Purpose of the Bible"; the Rev. W. R. Wedderspoon, pastor of the St. James Methodist Episcopal church, "Life from the Bible"; the Rev. J. M. Gray, dean of the Moody Bible institute, "How to Study the Bible," and Dr. Haven, "The Whole Bible for the Whole World." The music will be led by a chorus choir of several hundred.

The centennial celebration of the organization of the American Bible society began with a great demonstration in Washington, D. C., when President Wilson, Vice President Marshall, Senator W. R. Jones, and Bishop W. F. McDowell, then of Chicago, now of Washington, spoke. W. J. Bryan, C. W. Fairbanks, Henry J. Allen, the Rev. F. W. Gunsaulus, and other men prominent in the church and state have spoken at anniversary celebrations of a like character.

The total circulation of the Bible by the society in the 100 years of its history has been 117,687,591 copies. The Bible has been translated into 150 different languages.

The Grayland Congregational church, Byron street and Lamon avenue, is to be dedicated this afternoon at 3 o'clock. This is the first unit, costing $10,000, of what is to be a $40,000 church, and is to be used primarily for Sunday school and parish house purposes. The Rev. Ozora A. Davis of the Chicago Theological seminary will deliver the address. The Rev. J. K. Arnot is pastor of the church.

The Rev. Samuel M. Gibson, D. D., is the successor of the Rt. Rev. Charles Edward Cheney as the rector of Christ's Reformed Episcopal church, Twenty-fourth street and Michigan avenue.

Dr. Gibson was called to Christ church as the assistant to Bishop Cheney in 1905. After serving in this capacity for four years he was made associate rector, sharing with Bishop Cheney in the responsibility of caring for the parish. Upon Bishop Cheney's death last month he was at once made rector.

Dr. Gibson received his academic and theological education in Philadelphia, where he graduated from the Reformed Episcopal Theological seminary. Two years ago he was nominated as missionary bishop by the general council of the church, but declined the honor in order to remain at Christ church. Last year he was given the degree of doctor of divinity by his alma mater.

Dr. Gibson has been unusually successful in the development of the Neighborhood guild, a settlement located at 2714-16 South Canal street. The Neighborhood guild was first known as Tyng first street. The railroad bought the first street. The railroad bouhgt the property and the mission was moved to 2512 Wentworth avenue. It soon outgrew these quarters and then was located at the present place, occupying what was formerly Immanuel Reformed Episcopal church.

Dr. Gibson has conducted a Sunday school at 9:30 o'clock every Sunday morning and preached there Sunday nights. Miss Agnes B. Ewart, a graduate of Dennison university and of the Chicago school of civics and philanthropy, is head resident, and Miss Marian Alexander, also a graduate of the school of civics, is assistant.

Dr. Gibson says he expects Christ church to remain where it is and to continue the work maintained there by Bishop Cheney for over fifty-six years.

A reception in honor of the Rev. William J. Kinsella, who has recently been appointed spiritual director of the Catholic Total Abstinence Union of Illinois, by Archbishop Mundelein, will be held in the parlors of the Auditorium hotel on Tuesday at 8:30 p. m. Among those who will attend are the Rev. Thomas F. Quinn, president; the Rev. John Webster Melody, P. B. Flanigan, Mrs. D. K. Brooks, Miss S. K. Wilson, Miss Sallie G. Gaynor, Prof. and Mrs. William H. Cahill, the Misses Carey, Miss Mary L. Hickey, Miss Alida H. O'Connor, Miss Frances Martell, Miss Mary A. Carney, Charles O'Donnell, Hugh J. Syron, and Mr. and Mrs. B. G. Elser.

The Disciples of Christ are asking that subscriptions may be completed by next Friday for the erection of a community house in Chicago for work among immigrants. The matter is in charge of G. W. Muckley, church extension secretary.

The Rev. Albert M. Heilman has accepted the call to the pastorate of the Grace English Evangelical Lutheran church, Larrabee street and Belden avenue, as successor of the Rev. Dr. Thomas F. Dornblaser, who resigned at 76 years of age and enlisted as chaplain in the army. The new pastor comes from a pastorate in the east.

Archbishop G. W. Mundelein will address the annual meeting of the conferences of the Society of St. Vincent de Paul of Chicago and near-by towns at 3 o'clock today in the Holy Name Cathedral school hall, Cass street and Chicago avenue. The conferences of the St. Vincent de Paul society devote themselves to charity work among the poor.

The quarterly meeting of the archdiocese union of the Holy Name society of Chicago will be held today in St. Brendan's parish hall, Marquette road and Racine avenue, at 2:30 o'clock. The Rt. Rev. A. J. McGavick and Former Judge MichaelP. Girten will speak.

News Notes on the Open Road.

With the completion of the concrete road in Twelfth street, motorists are now given an excellent new exit from the western limits of Chicago. The new road, which is five and one-half miles long and connects with the Wheaton road, was opened to traffic on Friday.

A bond issue of $45,000 has been voted by the Kenosha county board to wipe out "the shame of Wisconsin"—that stretch of Sheridan road which lies between the Illinois state line and the city of Kenosha. The stretch in question is five miles long and for several years has been one of the worst pieces of lake shore road between Chicago and Milwaukee.

A report from G. S. Hoag, Nevada state consul of the Lincoln Highway association, that snow on the route of the transcontinental road in the Sierras is blocking traffic, indicates that the cross country touring season for 1916 is at an end. The Lincoln highway reaches a high altitude at the Nevada-California state line in crossing the Sierra Nevada mountains, where heavy snowfalls are naturally to be expected at a relatively early part of the winter. The Lincoln highway will again be open to traffic in June.

Dec. 23 has been selected by the Sheridan Road Improvement association as the date for the dedication of the new brick pavement between Central avenue and the north limits of Wilmette. Three barriers are to be taken down and motorists then will be enabled to make a continuous run over permanent pavements from Chicago to Winnetka.

Several nearby county roads that have been under construction and closed for several months are now finished and will be opened to traffic within the next few days. All are concrete roads. A stretch of one mile in Western avenue in the village of Homewood is to be opened on Tuesday and three miles in Archer avenue, between Lemont and Spring Forest, will be opened Dec. 18.

Al as a River Pilot.

THE Hyatt Roller Bearing company of Detroit comes to bat with a little new trade monthly of its own, called the Quieterion—"dedicated to things that are quiet." B. G. Koether writes it and in the entire fourteen pages of text he has mentioned the name of the Hyatt company but once! Here's a bit of his vers libre, or whatever you call it:

I walked into
The D. A. C. and Saw Al Bush
And as a river pilot
I think
Al is a darn good engineer
Because on the Last cruise of
The Noronic we Changed to the Waubic so we Could cruise among
The Thirty Thousand islands
And I know what
You think I'm going
To pull about Al—
Something about
His saying he Hadn't counted
Them,
Or his wife spending
Her vacation there
A week on each
Island or something
Funny like
That
But I'm not Because what Al
Did say was just
This:
He said he knew
Every rock in the Channel
And a few more
And the pilot let Al
Take the wheel
Because
He thought
That
Al knew what he was Talking about
And Al did
And he steered all right for About ten feet
And then he hit
A rock an awful
Wallop,
And Al said that
There was one of the rocks
Right away
And as an Auto engineer
Think Al
Is a
Darn poor
River pilot.

An interesting demonstration of what a moderate priced motor can do was made recently by H. S. Ames, a Chicago owner of a Saxon. Mr. Ames drove from Benton Harbor, Mich., to Toronto, Canada, in thirty hours, covering 489 miles on the trip. The roads were bad, and at times it was necessary to drive in ditches at such an angle that a large and topheavy car would have turned over.

In the short time since he and his associates purchased the Jeffery company President C. W. Nash of the Nash Motors company, has so thoroughly installed Nash manufacturing principles at the Kenosha plant that he has not only produced by far the biggest manufacturing and shipping month in the entire history of the Jeffery institution but at the same time has reduced manufacturing cost by installing the methods for which he has been so well known throughout the automobile world.

One of the new cars on exhibition in Chicago is the Crow-Elkhart 1917 sedan, being displayed at the Chicago salesrooms, 2029 Michigan avenue. The car accommodates four passengers and is perfectly appointed. Gray whipcord upholstery and gray silk curtains are used and the purchaser has the choice of ten distinctive body colors without extra charge.

A MESSAGE FROM GOOD FELLOW HEADQUARTERS

IS there a happy hum to the old motor of late?

Does she drum prettily when you step on the cutout?

Is she just "rahring to go"?

Be a Good Fellow then.

Put a Christmas basket and a load of joy in the old tonneau.

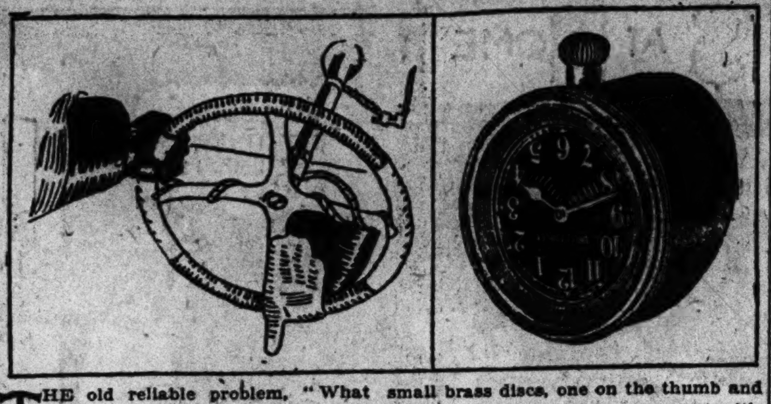
Get the name and address of a poor family from the Good Fellow department, room 1106 THE TRIBUNE.

And on Christmas eve, steer the old boat down into Woe alley and play Santa Claus to some poor kiddies.

Your car may be the first one they ever saw.

Be a Good Fellow.

The Motorist's Christmas.

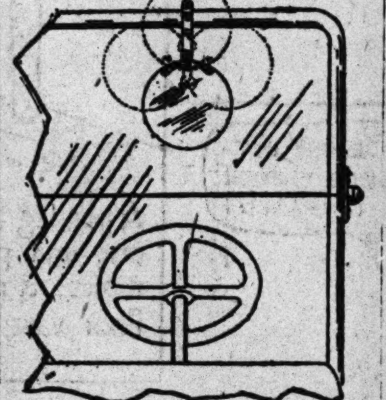


THE old reliable problem, "What shall I give for Christmas?" is easily solved this year if the recipient is to be uses an automobile. For the man or woman who drives or rides the shops offer an almost unlimited array of appropriate and in many cases surprisingly inexpensive gifts.

One of the newest wrinkles is an auto clock the hands and numerals of which are coated with a phosphorus-like substance, which makes them glow so they can be read in the dark. The motorist who has found his clock useless at night because the dash light doesn't shine on it should welcome an instrument of this type. They are to be had now in forms which may be attached to either steering wheel or dash, and are priced as low as $1.50.

Another novelty is a heel protector for women who drive. This is a compact little contrivance of composition leather which fits closely over the back of the shoe and is designed to prevent "scuffing" of the leather in manipulating clutch, brake, and accelerator. A pair costs $1.50.

To guard against frequent danger from the other fellow's glaring headlights on country roads there is a glare shield—a small disk of amber colored material connected by a frictional device with a bracket that may be fastened anywhere on the windshield. When not in use it is thrust easily out of the way. It is useful in the daytime as well as at night, for it may be used to dim the sharp rays of the sun.



A specially curved leather back cushion, designed to stay in place without being strapped, is offered for folks who can't quite reach the control pedals. It is to be had in different sizes at $4 and $4.50.

Electrically warmed gloves contribute an interesting item to winter luxury. A heating element is distributed through the fingers and back of both hands. Two small brass discs, one on the thumb and the other on the forefinger, connect with contact plates laced at either side of the steering wheel, so that the current flows and the gloves are heated only when the wheel is grasped. No cords are needed on the gloves to interfere with free use of the hands. When you want to stop the heat you just move your forefinger. Gloves of this type are priced at $8 and gauntlets at $10.

Odd Features in Cars.

FROM the day the automobile was perfected as a pleasure vehicle designers have seen fit to push their cars—i. e., the power has been applied to the rear wheels. Now comes the first American passenger car to apply its energy to the front wheels, leaving those in the rear to roll along meekly behind with no function except to hold up their end of the car.

In the front drive Laughlin, built by a Los Angeles concern, an eight cylinder motor, mounted under a hood in front in the usual way, is connected through friction discs, a jackshaft, and silent chains to sprockets on the front axle. Specially constructed universal joints between the wheels and the driving sprockets permit the free movement needed for steering.

The designers, who have been experimenting with the new type for several years, claim for the front drive a stability such that they have found it impossible to make the car skid. All working parts are in front and therefore easily accessible. Moreover, it is declared, the front drive plan gives easy riding over the most difficult roads.

How the idea will work out on a pleasure vehicle remains to be seen. It is no new on racing cars. Harry Knight built a front drive machine which he called the Rovan, and it was in this car that he was killed at Columbus, O. A designer named Christie constructed a ponderous front drive affair some time ago in which Barney Oldfield broke several records, and which he exhibited at the opening of the Chicago speedway. These curious contraptions always were objects of puzzled interest, and the men who are offering a modification of them to the general public are daring, to say the least.

Another oddity which has just arrived is the Eagle, a light car carrying a motor in which the cylinders, instead of being stationery, revolve about an axis, as do those in the much used Gnome motor for aeroplanes. There is no particular similarity to the Gnome, however, for whereas the Gnome cylinders radiate from the axis, like the spokes of a wheel, those of the Macomber engine, so-called, lie parallel to it, like the staves of a rolling barrel.

Conservative designers will set down the Laughlin and the Eagle as "freak" cars—which, of course, they are. Sometimes the "freak" car of today is the standard car of tomorrow. Sometimes it isn't.

OWEN MAGNETIC

Riding and Driving Sensation

- Enjoy soon the indescribable riding and driving sensation of the Owen Magnetic.
- "The feel" of this wonderful car is so exceptional at any instant of a thousand speeds that you will marvel—then desire its continuance above any experience in motoring.
- The Owen Magnetic floats along like coasting under simple, easy, but most positive control by a little finger-lever on the steering wheel.
- Elasticity of control, constant torque, safety, smooth riding at any speed—others have sought these by multiplying cylinders and by other devices which merely minimized the imperfections of geared transmission.
- In one magnetic unit of the simplified Owen Magnetic car is embodied all mechanism heretofore requiring extra parts and operation by cumbersome self-starting and lighting apparatus, clutch, clutch-pedal, fly-wheel, gear-shifting and braking. It is the only gas car with an electric brake.
- The coach-work may be compared only with the finest European cars.
- Limousine, Town Car and Landau Models from $4200 to $5000. Touring Cars and Roadsters from $3150 to $3750.

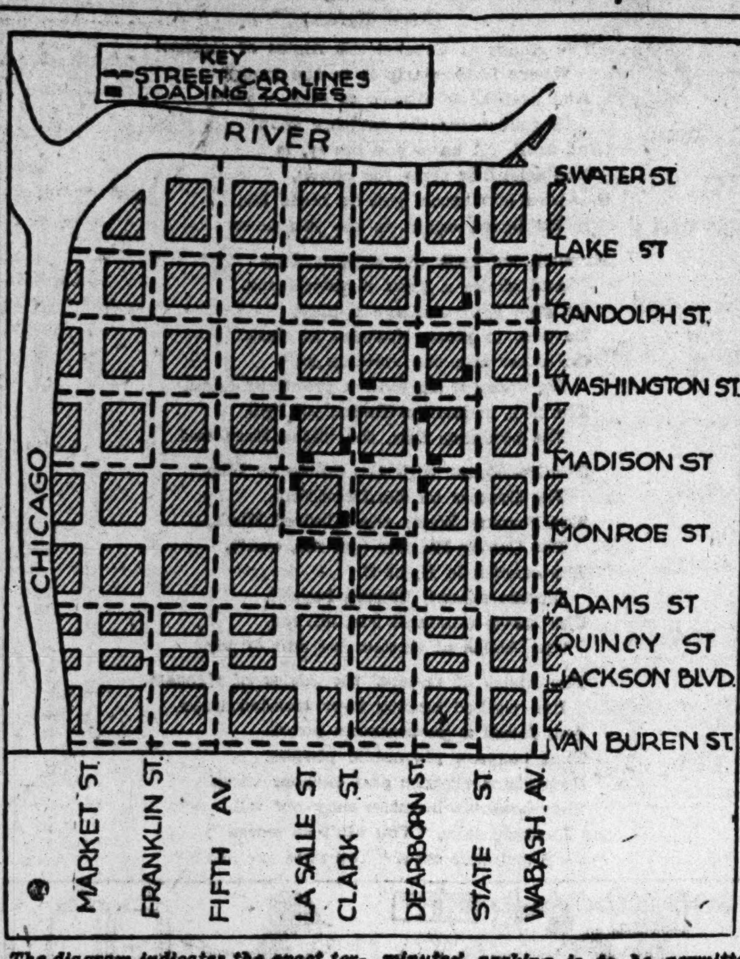
AUTOMOBILES Conducted by SHEPPARD BUTLER MOTORCYCLES

Plan Rigid New Traffic Rules for the Loop.



The diagram indicates the exact territory affected by the anti-parking ordinances which may be passed by the council this week. The clear streets (those which do not have car lines) are the only ones on which even thirty minutes' parking is to be permitted during rush hours from Jan. 1 to July 1 and after that during the entire day. In street car loading zones, indicated by the black rectangles, vehicles are not to stop at all except at the traffic policeman's signal.

Few of the world's cities have emulated Chicago in the blithe unconcern with which it has permitted its downtown district to drift into an apparently inextricable [illegible] knot of traffic. And no one knows it better than the motorist. For sheer nerve racking adventure there [illegible] many experiences that compare with the nightmare of gear shifting the [illegible] must face when he makes his [illegible] trip through the loop.

Now, all of a sudden, the men who guide the city's destinies appear to have ended the years of more or less watchful waiting. Abruptly and from several [illegible] they have swooped down on the [illegible] highways and declared themselves ready to straighten them out in a hurry.

There is talk of subways to be built at some time in the rosy future, but [illegible]. Legal obstructions to the Michigan avenue "boulevard link" have been removed so that the president of the board of local improvements expects to "get busy with the pick and shovel by the first of next July."

A third project, which may become a reality this week, is of supreme interest to every Chicago automobile owner who drives downtown. This comprises two [illegible] ordinances which are extremely likely to be passed by the council at its next meeting and which, if they do pass, will impose on motorists the most drastic restrictions they have confronted heretofore.

In a nutshell, the aldermen propose to decree that—

After Dec. 31, 1916, no vehicle may be parked on a downtown street where street cars are operated during rush hours—i. e., between 7 and 10 a. m. and between 4 and 7 p. m.

After June 30, 1917, no vehicle may be parked on a downtown car line street at any time during the day.

By "no parking" the aldermen mean exactly what they say. The new measure directs that, within the limits prescribed, no vehicle shall be permitted to stand "for a longer period at any one time than will be reasonably necessary for such vehicle to load or unload its occupants, baggage, or merchandise." In other words, you can't step out of your car, leave it to do an errand, and come back. Unless friend wife, your chauffeur, or some one else is there to keep the machine moving they'll have the law on you.

The territory affected by the regulation includes the loop and quite a bit more, the district named being bounded on the north and west by the river, on the east by the east line of Wabash avenue, and on the south by the south line of Van Buren street.

This bars parking privileges on ninety-one blocks where thirty minutes or more is now permitted. It leaves forty-two downtown blocks where there are no street cars and where machines may be parked under the restrictions now in effect. Of these forty-two blocks sixteen are in the loop—in Jackson boulevard, Quincy street, parts of Monroe and La Salle streets, and most of the east and west streets in the block between Wabash avenue and State street.

The foregoing is comprised in an amendment to the present parking ordinance. A new ordinance, designed to go into effect Jan. 1, proposes an additional restriction. This is that no vehicle may stop under any circumstances (except at a crossing policeman's whistle) in sections of downtown streets where passengers board or alight from street cars.

The "loading zones," as they are called, are specified in detail and are indicated by black rectangles on the accompanying diagram. In each case, of course, they comprise only the side of the roadway used by street car passengers—the east side for north bound street cars, and so on.

The question as to how far back from the corner each zone is to extend is left to the commissioner of public service and the chief of police. If a recent recommendation of the board of supervising engineers is carried out the zone will be the length of two street cars and will be indicated by white strips painted on the pavement.

These two measures were recommended the other day by a special subcommittee of the committee on local transportation and passed the full committee without any paricular opposition and, as it happened, without any great degree of publicity.

They are ready now for the council, and folks who know say they will be passed. There will be no chance for further discussion except by aldermen unless there should be enough votes to refer them back to the committee.

There are two sides to the question of opposition. Motorists who are familiar with the proposed ordinances have been highly indignant over the curtailment of their parking privileges. The new régime will, to be sure, appear a hardship to the man who likes to drive to his office and leave his car for a time at the curb.

On the other hand, folks who find it necessary to drive THROUGH the loop will find the perplexing mass of downtown traffic vastly simplified. Comparatively clear streets along the car lines will be decidedly different from the present succession of inert vehicles along the side of every roadway.

In any case, the city fathers who are urging the measures say something must be done and it might as well be this. They call attention to the surprisingly large number of downtown streets where the roadways are so narrow or so impeded by elevated railway supports that, as things are now, no vehicle can get through except on the car tracks. They offer you figures about the growth of traffic—such as the increase in the number of Chicago motor vehicle licenses from 7,000 in 1909 to 41,000 in 1915. They say the present thirty minute parking rule can't be enforced unless you fill the loop with "spotters" to watch every machine.

Maybe they're right. Maybe, on the other hand, a better solution is to be found in the setting aside of certain streets for one way traffic, as is done in New York, Philadelphia, and many other cities. Maybe we'll have to revive former Mayor Harrison's plan for an underground municipal garage in Grant park.

Or maybe the subways will help. It remains to be seen.

Exhaust Echoes

With the Harkness trophy race at the Sheepshead Bay speedway, Eddie Rickenbacher closed his second season of competition at the wheel of a car designed by Ray Harroun and built under the latter's supervision at Detroit. Before leaving for California to engage in the Vanderbilt cup road race Rickenbacher wrote Harroun: "It occurs to me that you might be interested to know what I have done with my recent prize money. I've invested it in an automobile company run by an old friend of mine named Ray Harroun. I know something about this man. For two years I've been riding in racing cars that he designed and built, and I'm here to write about it, still intact—arms, legs, ribs, and everything. There has hardly been a day in the racing season that I haven't bet my life on the skill of this engineer. He hasn't failed me."

A new six cylinder car of many refinements has just been announced by the Willys-Overland company, to be known to the automobile world as the Willys six. In body design it shows certain radical departures from accepted standards, the 125 inch wheel base being accentuated by the straight lines and roll edge of the body, giving the car a pronounced long, low appearance. It is built for seven passengers and is finished in a deep French blue, with black fenders and gray wheels.

Another remarkable touring record was established by a stock Maxwell touring car when Ray McNamara piloted a car from Indianapolis to Chicago and return, 376 miles, in nine hours flat. The unusual average of 41.7 miles per hour was maintained over roads that were not in the best of condition, due to recent rains, followed by cold weather. The run was made to establish an official record for the Hoosier Motor club and it was officially observed by officers of that organization. On both legs of the journey the Maxwell made better time than the swifest trains between Indianapolis and Chicago.

A sixteen valve, four cylinder motor of the high speed type is the innovation on which the White company is just beginning production at the Cleveland factory. Each cylinder has four valves instead of two—a pair of intakes and a pair of exhausts. High engine efficiency is the object of the construction, the White company summing up its idea in the words: "Valve efficiency is more important than the number of cylinders." Many interesting changes are incorporated in other parts of the new car models.

The capital to capital Hupmobile which is touring the United States is reported in Texas, well on its way to Austin, its thirty-sixth capital. The car has been making excellent time since it got through the snow regions of the Rockies.

Out in Los Angeles there is a Dodge Brothers car that is establishing a record for consistent performance. Used as a "jitney" by P. E. Kritch, it has regularly covered 1,000 miles per week for twenty weeks and bids fair to continue to travel at the same rate for many weeks to come. During the 20,000 miles he has averaged slightly more than twenty miles to the gallon of distillate, which he uses in place of gasoline.

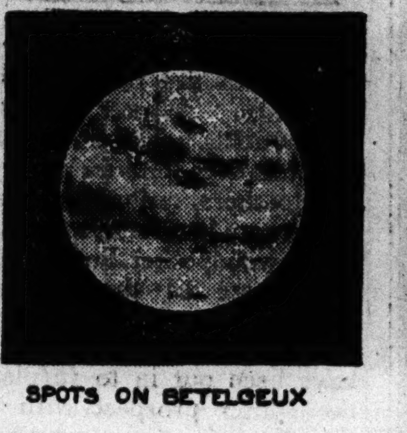
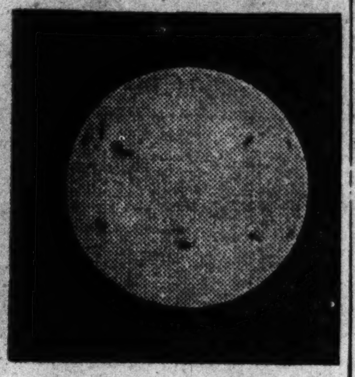
BETELGEUX IN ORION

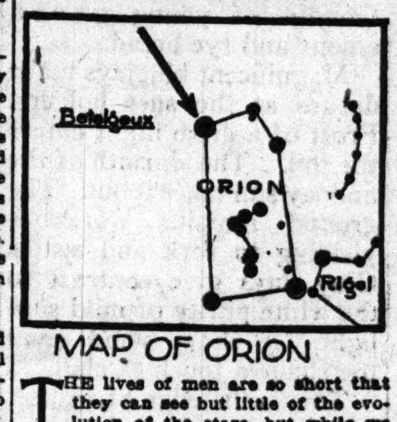
DRAWINGS by S.F. MAXWELL



SPOTS ON BETELGEUX



SPOTS ON THE SUN



MAP OF ORION

The lives of men are so short that they can see but little of the evolution of the stars, but while we cannot observe the changes in the face of the heavens, we know that there are changes. Scattered over the celestial vault are suns in all stages of growth, young nebulous Orion stars, white hot Sirian stars, Solar stars already on the decline, and stars in considerable numbers which glow red and dull, and seem to be expiring. The waning, flickering light from these stars in boundless space gives us a glimpse of the struggle which is going on between the stellar fires and the ever encroaching cold of the void between star and star.

Betelgeux, while appearing to us in the constellation of Orion, is in reality not one of its suns, but lies in front of them. Its distance has never been accurately measured, but we know that in actual dimentions the star is enormous, certainly rivaling Arcturus, the giant of the northern skies. We can learn but little from the physical aspect of the star, but its light, analyzed, yields much information regarding its source.

Betelgeux is a sun much more advanced than our own. Instead of being white or yellow, the light is orange red, and fluctuates, making the star a variable of no definite period.

At times Betelgeux rivals Capella, and at others it is fainter than Aldebaran. The spectroscope suggests that the whole surface of the star is covered by spots, like those of the sun, but on a much more extensive scale. When there are many spots, the light grows dim, and when there are few the brilliancy increases. The shifting disturbances, and possibly an axial rotation as well, constitute the causes of the irregularities in brightness which we have observed.

In Betelgeux the future of our own sun is revealed. There will come a time when the solar heat will no longer be sufficient to keep the metallic clouds above the sun in a state of vapor. Slowly, but ever surely, the vapors will turn to drops, and these will condense to solids and fall upon the red hot surface. This is the genesis of a world as we know it.

One-Power Cars Must Yield First Place to the Woods Dual-Power

The logical evolution of motor development, embodied in this epoch-making, two-power car, marks a revolution in the automobile industry. No longer can any one-power car, gasoline or electric, claim the limit of achievement.

The Dual-Power employs both forces in a marvelous combination—a design that gives a new meaning to the terms simplicity and efficiency—

—Affording the speed and mileage of the gasoline car with electric simplicity and reliability.

Gasoline Car and Electric Combined

The Dual-Power is equipped with a small gasoline motor, an electric motor-generator and a battery only half the size required in electric cars, material reduction in weight.

This gasoline motor adds 40 per cent to speed and keeps the battery constantly charged within the safety zone, greatly increasing the life of the battery.

Thus owners are relieved of the expense and inconvenience of charging in the old way, without involving noticeable fuel expense.

The Dual-Power motor gets double mileage per gallon. With gasoline becoming both scarce and expensive, this is another important item.

Effortless Driving

The two great forces harnessed for you in the Dual-Power are controlled by a finger touch. Two finger-controlled levers on the steering wheel start, stop and regulate speed. There are no gears, no levers, no clutch pedal. The obedient stream of adequate power is transmitted direct to the wheels. Stalling is impossible; magnetic braking practically eliminates skidding.

Acceleration is instantaneous. You can creep through traffic—then pick up to 35 miles, smoothly, steadily, without noticeable vibration. Your progress is as buoyant as if equipped with wings.

Expert Body Work

The body work for the Dual-Power is in keeping with the Woods reputation for superfine finish and luxurious appointments. Every detail is worthy of this triumphal car.

Thus in beauty and elegance and mechanical supremacy the Dual-Power is the supreme motor achievement—

—At a price no higher than that of less efficient cars similar in design.

The Dual-Power is fully described and illustrated in literature which we will gladly send on request.

Demonstration by appointment.

Winter Storage FOR YOUR BATTERY

The Vesta Square Deal Plan

We open your battery for your full inspection and advise you of its exact condition.

If it is in good condition we will put it in "dry storage". The storage is FREE and you will be charged only for the new set of wooden separators that will be necessary.

If other repair is necessary, and you authorize it, the work will be done when the battery is assembled in the Spring, at our usual reasonable charges. All charges are payable only when your battery is returned to you. Your battery will be ready when you want it.

If your battery is beyond repair we will give you Letter of Credit covering our exchange allowance for it. This is good at any time to apply against the purchase of a new Vesta Double Life Battery.

What Is Meant by Dry Storage

A storage battery is an electro chemical combination. Storing the battery over the winter with the acid in it means that the chemical action taking place is deteriorating your battery without doing the equivalent in work for you.

In Dry Storage the plates are taken out of the acid. The chemical action being suspended, the useful life of the battery is lengthened for you.

To do this the battery must be completely taken down.

If you wish us to simply store your battery without taking it down, we will do so, keeping it charged once a month as it requires. For this you are to pay only for each charge at our usual rates.

It is apparent that charging a battery and allowing it to discharge itself without doing work and at the same time naturally ageing itself, is not ECONOMY.

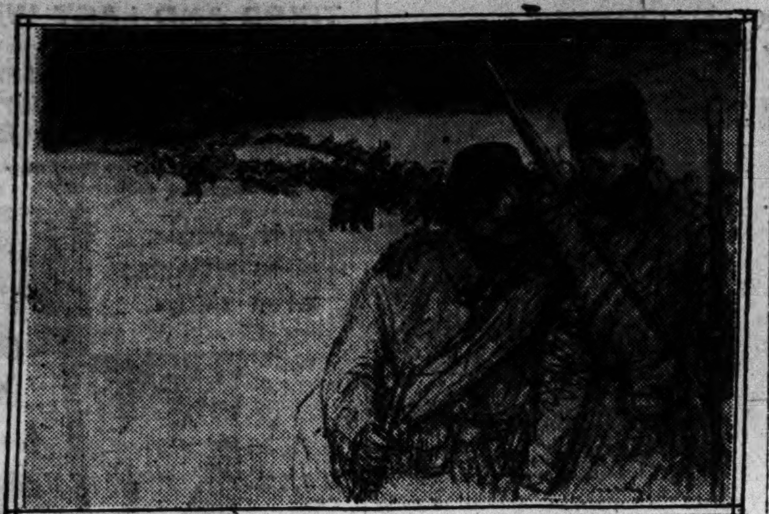
ART by Louise James Bargelt

TO add to the joy of this approaching holiday time comes a group of seven exhibitions, all of them opening at the Art institute on Tuesday. They will remain there until Jan. 1.

The first of these will comprise a splendid collection of the workes of the late John W. Alexander. Lovers of the Golden state will be especially interested in the fifty paintings by California artists which have been brought together by J. Nilsen Laurvik, director of the Art Association of California. The well known Chicagoan, Wilson Irvine, will have twenty-five Connecticut landscapes, Edward Redfield will have thirty paintings of Center Bridge, Pa., and Maurice Sterne of New York will show paintings and etchings. Abram Poole will exhibit his cartoons which he has gathered in France, and Chester Beach will have a special display of sculpture.

During the month of January six special exhibitions will be installed. One of them of especial importance is the collection which belongs to the government of France and is now known as the Luxembourg collection. This was exhibited in the French and Belgian pavilion at the Panama-Pacific exposition. At the close of that exposition the paintings, tapestries, bronzes, and porcelains sent from the Luxembourg museum to the fair were separated into two sections, one of which went to the department of fine arts of the Carnegie institute at Pittsburgh. This division, consisting of sixty paintings, is now on exhibition at the Albright Art gallery in Buffalo. The other division, comprising tapestries, bronzes, and porcelains, was forwarded from San Francisco to the Panama-Pacific exposition in San Diego. Both of these divisions will probably be brought together early in 1917 at the institute.

Another exhibition which will be at the institute during December is the collection of paintings and sketches brought here by the Hindu poet, Rabindranath Tagore. There is a series of poetic water colors, some wash drawings, and a number of delightful illustrations of Tagore's poems and stories.



Serbian Retreat by Steinlen

Those who have a liking for effective designs of any soft would have been much interested in the lecture given by Claude Bragdon at the Art institute last week. He spoke on the "Song and Light Festival," which, it will be remembered, took place in Central park, New York, last summer. It was Mr. Bragdon who designed the lighting of the park on that night. All of his designs are based on geometrical figures, and the results which he achieves are marvels of rare and striking charm.

No matter what the purpose of the design—whether it serves a simple use, as of a bedspread or the trimming of a woman's frock, or whether it is to adorn as a gate the entrance of some important park or citadel—it is founded on the figures of geometry.

The lecturers now available in the Art institute department of extension have been increased to nine. Their lectures, arranged by the extension department, of which Ross Crane is the head, have been planned to emphasize the claims of art not only as a record of real human achievement, but also as a vital and important factor in the formation of the character of the individual, an absolute essential in the education of the child and a potent force in the welfare of the community.

There will be traveling exhibits of paintings, sculpture, architecture, pottery, etchings, prints, arts and crafts products, home furnishings, and landscape architecture. Lecturers will illustrate these exhibits and in the exhibitions of the arts and crafts of each community particular attention will be given to the work of the schools.

Among those lecturers now available are:

Dr. Wilhelm Miller, former editor of Country Life in America, on "The City Beautiful" (illustrated).

Mrs. Herman J. Hall, head of the department of gallery instruction, Art institute, on "Oriental Art" (illustrated).

Miss Nellie V. Walker, sculptor, on "Sculptors of Chicago" (illustrated).

John Devereaux York, architect, on "Medieval Period in Architecture."

Charles H. Burkholder, curator of the temporary exhibition of the Art institute, on "The Old Masters" (illustrated).

Ross Crane, architect and lecturer, on "The Fine Art of Building a Home" (illustrated).

Today the concert at the Art institute will be "Pagliacci." Next Sunday "Carmen" will be given. Dec. 24, which is the Christmas program, is the Carolers and soloists, and on Dec. 31 "Die Königskinder."

These opera evenings owe their popularity to the essentially appealing nature of the programs they offer. There is an informal lecture on the opera described and this lecture is fully illustrated by instrumental and vocal selections. Miss Henriette Weber, who gives the lecture, is largely responsible for the pleasing charm of the entertainment.

The Carolers, which is a new organization and an outgrowth of these opera evening activities, will sing in front of the institute on Christmas eve.

Three Best Sellers in Music.

The most popular Victor records were:

"Babes in the Wood" and "Bachelor Girl and Boy."

"Flora Bella" and "Girl from Brazil."

"Don Giovanni."

The best sellers among Pathe records were:

"On Lake Champlain" and "Come Back, Let's Be Sweethearts Once More."

"And They Called It Dixieland" and "Bachelor Girl and Boy."

"Air de la fleur" and "Ah, leve toi soleil."

The three best sellers among Edison records were:

"I Want All the World to Know" and "Rachety Coo."

"Pretty Edelweiss" and "Teach Me to Smile."

"Kangaroo Hop" and "Setting the Pace."

The following list is made up of the three best selling sheet music numbers of the current week:

"Ev'ry Little While."

"Katinka."

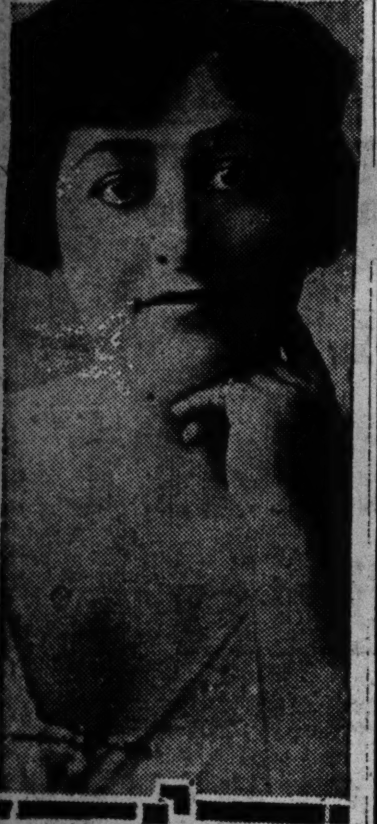
"Naughty! Naughty! Naughty!"

The three best sellers in player rolls were:

"Mammy's Little Coal Black Rose."

"I'm Down in Honolulu Looking Them Over."

"Honolulu, America Loves You."



Margarete Matzenauer
© MISHKIN

UNKNOWN hereabout as an opera-singer until she was the Bruennhilde of "The Valkyrie" in this season's revival in the Auditorium, she made good with the public in a great part. She comes back this afternoon to be Bruennhilde in "Goetterdaemmerung." Her repute until two years ago rested on the fact that she was, off-stage, the wife of Ferrari-Fontana, the tenor; he, today, is referred to as Mme. Matzenauer's husband—and he will not be that for long if the courts listen to her plea.

The TRIBUNE'S WEEKLY ALMANACK

DECEMBER

THE brown December woods are full of sociable life. Winter brings communistic habits. A flock of chickadees joins the downy woodpeckers, redheaded sapsuckers, and nuthatches. The hairy woodpecker hovers on the fringe of the family. Juncoes run over the newly turned earth where onion sets have been put in to furnish the winter prospect with a thought of young green onions and rye bread.

Magnificent bluejays make dashes at the suet holders. Frost of a crisp night enters the soil. The warmth of the midday sun takes it out. The ground remains workable, yielding to fork and spade. Gray days give contrast to the white purity of mild sunlight. A sharp wind gives the shade a touch of chill.

This is the edge of winter. Life has gone from deep luxuriance to colorful decay. It has gone from colorful decay to serene brown and yellow. Its prospect is one of intensive rigors; its present is one of pleasant recollection and pleasant anticipation.

Instead of the song of the wood thrush there is the song of the chickadee. The nuthatch has the place which the tanager had. The woodthrush was timid; the chickadee is bold. June is evasive, December is courageous.

Hut happiness is perfumed by the odors of early potted narcissus now in bloom in a south window which the sun on the still declining arc keeps warm. The December mornings have their song in the woods, Orion strides the sky and Sirius commands the heavens. The December moon is at full, illusion is robust, and there is appetite for pig sausage and cakes.

LINES TO A CAFETERIA, OR GLOM-SHOT.

(After Byron.)

The Aisles of Grease! the Aisles of Grease!
Where feeders trip it to the trough
And grab their chance to glom a piece
Of fodder for the mid-day scoff
(And scoff, I'd have you savvy, is
The scientific term for chow),
O, Aisles of Greece, you do some biz;
Kid Byron ought to see you now.

At noon we hook our shining tray
And shake a light fantastic toe,
To give your ensilage a play,
To win, to place, likewise to show,
On either side the victuals lie,
We spear them with a practiced hand,
The shy, seductive Cheese on Rye,
The blushing Egg, the blithe Ham-And.

The Pot-Roast with the Spuds en bloc,
The Oysters on the Demi-Hull,
The Porcine Wrist, the Kindred Hock,
The Caviar Emptor (get me, cull?),
The salad à la K. of C.
(Potato salad?) Thatta boy!
The Movie (custard) Pie, ah, me,
The Aisles of Grease are full of joy.

The Aisles of Grease! the Aisles of Grease!
I've walked among your trodden ways,
And found a gastronomic peace
That beggars pleonastic phrase;
Redundant rhymes and verbose verse
Your beamish beauties may not tell.
As Chaucer says, "You ain't so worse";
As Swinburne says, "You sure are swell."

STANDARD 8

For 1917—The First "8" with a Magneto

When Words Fail

At our command are as many adjectives as dictionaries hold. We could employ a glowing lot in describing the Standard "Eight"—and her qualities.

But we'd rather you'd drive a Standard. Then use your own adjectives. You can see her any day. But—put her on trial.

Give her a real whirl.

Any reasonably good demonstrator can take you out in the tonneau of any reasonably good car and make it perform. Most men now know that.

We invite YOU to sit in the driver's seat. Get your own hand on the wheel. Put your own foot on the pedal. Test her out. Note how responsive she really is. Slip along in traffic. See if you need juggle with gears. Slide out into the country. Run up the speedometer. Take your own breath away.

When we try to describe her we learn the limitations of words. Our advertising men can coin as many pretty phrases as the next—make as many claims. But that sort of thing is overdone.

We prefer to leave it to the car—and you.

"Our Country! In her intercourse with foreign nations may she always be in the right; but our country, right or wrong."
—Stephen Decatur.

BRYAN.

Mr. Bryan, we suspect, is the most powerful single individual in the United States. J. P. Morgan, Billy Sunday, and Theodore Roosevelt might be thought of as challenging his preëminence, but we doubt that they are to be considered as serious rivals.

Morgan can break eggs for a million people and carry off the omelet, leaving them the shells, but he could not make a Chautauqua address. Whatever power he has will die with him. Bryan's will live twenty years after he is dead. He will have directed the thoughts of men and women and their children. It will take at least twenty years to eliminate Bryan. Twenty days may eliminate Morgan.

Exasperated American patriots will be encountering the Bryan sirup of life at least twenty years after this amiable man has been gathered to his fathers. Billy Sunday operates violently on a restricted area. He stands a community on its head. Boston now offers the spectacle of the Brahmins on theirs. The bean not being the natural resting place of the human race, there is a gradual resumption of the normal business of standing on the feet, but while Mr. Sunday is effective he is very effective.

He has no such influence as Bryan. He is no such power. People cannot always be running to a fire, as Charles Eliot Norton (or was it he?) said of reading Carlyle. Bryan does not turn out the fire department. He uses a sausage stuffer, fills it full of sirup, and fills the people so full of sweetness that they are ready to burst.

The business of beating folks over the head with a good solid club is Roosevelt's. The more the sound indicates solid bone or protected vacuity the more enraged the colonel becomes and the stouter his raps.

People will stand on their heads for a while, but they never like to be pounded on them. Therefore Bryan with his sirup squirt is more deadly than Roosevelt with his club.

It is no accident that now while Col. Roosevelt considers himself in the position of the mate of the New Bedford whaler whose skipper wanted silence, and damn little of that, Col. Bryan is the cock of the walk in Washington.

He is talking, as always, without thinking. He typifies the impulse to talk without thinking. We have nothing but admiration for this amiable man; but the damage he does is enormous. He has permeated the west. His mood is the mood of the west. He is more responsible for President Wilson now than he was four years ago. He is the most powerful living American, and our only wish is that he had been a German or a Jap, or even a Canadian or a Mexican.

Twenty years after his last word has been uttered the effect of what he has said will have to be combated by Americans who wish their country well.

"O, THAT GRAND AND GLORIOUS FEELING."

There are a variety of means for getting thrills out of life—of feeling expansive and cheerful. One often resorted to is the consumption of a cocktail or two. Buying a new hat, when it is not too frequently indulged in, brings a certain though fleeting pleasure.

But what we started to say was that becoming a Good Fellow is more satisfactory than two cocktails. The process is more than comparable to the purchase of a new hat. A lot of people have tried it and now they will take no substitute.

Being a Good Fellow means spending a little time and a little money. It is not getting something for nothing. But it is getting a great deal for a very little. And it is not charity, for the Good Fellow gets his money's worth. It is interesting in the first place to meet a few people who did not get in on Bethlehem Steel, but it is more than interesting to see such people and their dependents slough off apathy and despair and become at least tolerably if temporarily happy.

Being a Good Fellow is the best way of getting that "grand and glorious feeling" that Cartoonist Briggs so often depicts.

THE GUARDSMAN SAYS—

It is taken for granted among those who did not go to the border with the militia that the hardships the guardsmen suffered are in large degree responsible for their refusal to take the new federal oath. The idea is that three or four months of salt pork and cactus and Texas dust cured them of their romantic ideas of soldiering.

From the testimony of the guardsmen themselves, such is not the case at all. They do not pretend, of course, that they liked the salt pork and the cactus or that the dust did not irritate them. But their reasons for refusing to obligate themselves further under the national guard system have little connection with the fear of meeting these things again. They say they would all do it again if there were apparent and immediate national necessity.

What irritated the guardsman at the border more than the alkali dust was the apparent futility of trying to be a soldier under the national guard system.

If there was one lesson more obvious than the rest, it was that a good soldier means nothing much individually. If a man is a good soldier he is a member of a good organization, for it is only the organization that counts. And for the guardsman on the border there was always the depressing conviction, one shared by the officers, too, that organizations born of political appointment and a clubby night life in armories were not worth anything at all. It was in no way more hopeful than the task of making a silk purse of a sow's ear.

That, of course, would explain why some of the men most intelligent on the border are those most eager to get out of the national guard now that they are home. They do not care to waste their time fussing about an armory once a week.

This is, at any rate, the case the national guardsman makes for himself, and it is worthy of consideration. His clear determination not to go ahead with the national guard proves that something was wrong. And he says it was not the hardship.

THE VITAL SPIRIT OF A STATE.

Under the giant hammer of supreme necessity England is being remade. Government has been concentrated within a mailed fist. Military conscription has been adopted. Civil conscription is now to follow. Every man in England will soon be a soldier of the empire. He may not be in the trenches, but, if the government wills it, he will be at some appointed task, under orders, doing his bit in the great work of defense.

It would be a stubborn mind which could cling to the notion that England will ever be the England of Victoria again, the England of individualistic liberty and free private initiative. England is being profoundly remodeled not merely for war but for the war after the war. She is being born again into a new self, more highly unified and organized than could have been dreamed of by the men of 1830.

This is a more significant fact for us than the tremendous phenomenon of German organized power, for England was as we are in philosophy, in organization, if not in temper and habit.

In the United States we are not yet under the hammer. But when the war is over, and before, the pressure of the great engines of national will which are being made in Europe and Asia will bear down upon us. There is with us very little comprehension of what this will mean. Vague humanitarianism and utopianism, unreasoned optimism, self-indulgence, and self-will are potent. We are going to cheat facts or abolish them by shutting our eyes to them while we enjoy our own peculiar immunity from the logic of world life. Mr. Capper of Kansas, Mr. Ford of Michigan, Mr. Bryan of Nebraska, Mr. Wilson, and Mr. Daniels, and Dr. Jordan are going to remake life for us and for the human race.

While every man is brought to the colors for war and peace in England, France, Germany, Japan, we are to be a debating society of willful minorities. How long? A few months ago a few hundred thousand citizens frightened congress into passing a law it did not understand to produce consequences it had not even tried to forecast. We are told now that this minority must not be restricted in its power to do this at will. The transportation of the nation upon which depends the economic and financial life of all its people is to lie in the hollow of this minority's hand.

This is more than a special issue between a body of wage earners and their employers. It is more than an issue between labor and capital. It is an issue between the individual and the republic. It is an issue of efficient democracy. In its full significance it is an issue of the life or death of the American nation in a world of disciplined citizenship and the highest form of unity yet evolved by nations.

The end of democracy is faction. The essence of democracy is voluntary subordination to the common weal and will. We are entering an epoch in which this breed of strong citizenship and high fealty has been born of blood and tears. Other people embrace it in their agony, winning a noble strength in peril and sorrow, a clear vision in midnight darkness. Are we so weak and foolish that we hope to go on in complaisant peace and full fed prosperity in a world of tonic struggle among nations which have wrought out of pain and sacrifice, out of honest thought and passionate effort, a triumphant organization of collective power?

Capital and labor must learn this basic lesson of successful democracy, of enduring liberty. In England there has been laid down of late by a political group this definition of the essential nature of citizenship: "The quickening principle of a state is a sense of devotion, as adequate recognition somewhere in the mind of its subjects that their own interests are subordinate to those of the state. The bond which unites them and constitutes them collectively as a state is, to use the words of Lincoln, in the nature of a dedication. Its validity, like that of the marriage tie, is at root not contractual but sacramental. Its foundation is not self-interest, but rather sane sense of obligation, however conceived, which is strong enough to overmaster self-interest."

We have many varieties of devotion in the United States and dedications to many movements, causes, ideals. We have enough and to spare of the vital egotistic interests, the unyielding self-seeking of human nature.

We have need of a stronger devotion to the nation, a deeper dedication to the entity it is, a quickening of the spirit which alone can make a great state, a great people.

Editorial of the Day

THE SUPERSTITION OF DESCENT.

[From the Minneapolis Journal.]

The Manchester Guardian regards Winston Churchill as a military genius who intuitively seizes the military solution. It is the remark of the editorial writer that not for nothing is Mr. Churchill descended from the first Duke of Marlborough, which draws our attention.

Mr. Churchill is much more nearly descended from the late Mr. Jerome of New York, who was as famous for his caustic wit as for the fetchingness of his pretty daughters. We surmise that Winston is considerably more a Jerome than he is a Churchill in his mental and moral makeup. If he seizes the military situation better than his English rivals, it is due, we trow, to the American directness and faculty for hitting the mark and not to the reappearance in him of the genius that won Blenheim and Ramillies.

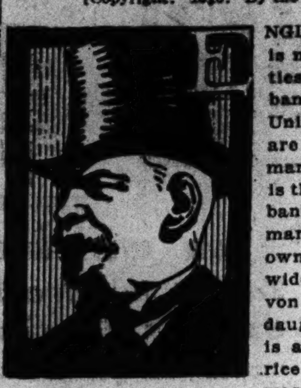
The superstition of birth, to tell the truth, sits on the chest of all Europe, and keeps able men down and stupid ones on top. Joffre, the cooper's son, knocked it out of the great Moltke's nephew. Robertson, the ranker, orders descendants of William the Conqueror around these days. In Russia, it is said, many of the high commanders are of humble birth.

We Americans know what's what in this matter. We have had our great men, and have them now. The descendants of Alexander Hamilton haven't been statesmen. The son of Abraham Lincoln dislikes public life. Julian Hawthorne has written a lot containing not a glint of his sire's divine fire. The last of the Goethes died an ordinary person. The subsequent Dukes of Wellington have all been stupidly fat. The great Mackensen doesn't even belong to the Prussian military caste. We haven't read in the Russian reports of the exploits of a Suwaroff or a Skobeleff.

In history it did happen that Alexander the Great was the son of Philip of Macedon, who, however, was statesman rather than captain. It is true that Hannibal was son of Hamilcar, whose genius did save Carthage in the first Punic war. But Cromwell and Napoleon, like our Washington and Grant, were not born of genius and did not produce genius. Genius, as matter of fact, is apt to have a dolt for a father and a mutt for a son.

LA MARQUISE DE FONTENOY

[Copyright: 1916: By the Brentwood Co.]



ENGLAND'S government is meeting with difficulties in dealing with the banking houses in the United Kingdom which are identified with Germany. A case in point is the important London banking firm of Horstman & Co., the present owners of which are the widow of Baron Adolf von Deichmann and her daughter. The baroness is a sister of Sir Maurice de Bunsen, who was British ambassador at Vienna at the outbreak of the war, and both of them belong to a family which owes the origin of its fortune to the Astors.

Two of Baroness Deichmann's daughters are married to German officers fighting at the front, one of them being Col. Count Karl von Bismarck-Osten of the First dragoon regiment of the Prussian guards, and who is now deputy governor of that portion of Russian Poland occupied by the Germans.

The late Baron Deichmann was a native of Cologne. Establishing himself in London, he acquired possession of the banking house of Horstman & Co., was created a Prussian baron by Emperor Frederick, and immediately afterwards secured naturalization as a citizen of Great Britain, retaining, however, his rank in Germany as a Prussian commerzienrath (royal councilor of commerce) and his estates in Prussia, including the castle of Bendeleben, near Sondershausen, and the picturesque Mehlesmer-Aue, on the Rhine near Bonn.

He was an extraordinary old man, almost daft on the subject of horses, and who, a member of the Coaching club and of the Four-in-Hand club, drove with the utmost skill one of the most perfect four-in-hand teams in London.

So crazy was he on the subject of horses that he spent considerable money in the construction of a tunnel from his London mansion in Wilton street to his wonderful stables, half a block away. The entrance to this passage was from his dining room, and after rising from table he would often take his guests through the tunnel to visit his stables.

He entertained a most pronounced prejudice against Americans, which he made no effort to conceal, and to which, being an irascible old fellow, he often gave expression.

There was a reason for this. One summer he was suddenly called from his castle in Germany to London on urgent business. As he did not expect to be more than twenty-four hours in town, he decided to go to a hotel, and did not warn the butler of his house in Wilton street that he was coming. Having an hour or two to spare in the evening, he naturally visited his stables, and then, entering the tunnel, made his way to the dining room of his house in Wilton street.

There he found a large party of utter strangers seated at dinner, who seemed disposed to resent his intrusion as an interloper, and who threatened to call the police. It was the baron who, however, called the police, and the explanations led to the discovery that his butler, who had been for a number of years in his employ, had leased the house, furnished, with the contents of the cellar, for the summer to an American couple of wealth, who were entertaining a party of their compatriots. After that the baron would have no more men servants in the house, and the entire service there was done by women domestics.

The favor which Baron Deichmann enjoyed on the part of Emperor Frederick, and even with Queen Victoria, was due to the fact that he had married the most beautiful of the Von Bunsen girls. Like her brother, Sir Maurice de Bunsen, Baroness Deichmann was born in London, of the marriage between Ernest von Bunsen and a Miss Elizabeth Gurney, a daughter of the famous old Norfolkshire house of that name.

The first Bunsen, Christian Charles by name, and the grandfather of Sir Maurice, was a young student of humble birth at the University of Bonn, in the most straitened circumstances, when by a piece of great good luck he was selected to serve as private tutor and as traveling companion to young William B. Astor, son of that John Jacob Astor who laid the foundation of the great wealth of his family.

The couple wandered all over Europe together, visited Goethe, Schopenhauer, and Von Niebuhr, and when young Astor returned to New York Bunsen was provided for in a financial sense and in the most generous fashion for the remainder of his days and was able afterwards to marry in Rome an English girl, a Miss Waddington.

At Rome, Christian Bunsen became the friend of the scholarly Prussian envoy, Von Niebuhr, who secured his appointment as secretary of his legation, and, acquiring the personal friendship of the than heir apparent to the Prussian crown, during a visit of the latter to the Eternal city, he was on the accession of that prince to the throne, as King Frederick William IV., promoted to the post of minister plenipotentiary in London and ennobled.

Ireland's new lord chief justice, the Rt. Hon. James Campbell, who has been elevated to that position in consequence of the resignation of Lord Chief Justice Cherry, has for many years been the Unionist member of parliament for Dublin university, and is the legal light concerning whose appointment by ex-Premier Asquith to the lord chancellorship of Ireland in 1915 there was so much objection in Liberal and Nationalist circles that the nomination had to be rescinded.

The objections to his becoming lord high chancellor of Ireland were due to the fact that as such he would have enjoyed the right of making nominations to all the judicial and magisterial offices in the Emerald isle. That these powers should be confided to a man who had been so identified as Sir Edward Carson's principal lieutenant, in opposition to everything in the nature of that Irish home rule to which both crown and parliament are committed, appeared intolerable. So he was promised that in return for his disappointment in the matter of the Irish chancellorship he should have the lord chief justiceship of Ireland as soon as a vacancy occurred.

James Campbell, in spite of his Scottish name, is an Irishman through and through, having been born in County Dublin as the son of William Mussen Campbell of Prospect house, Terrenure.

How to Keep Well. By Dr. W. A. Evans.

Questions pertinent to hygiene, sanitation, and prevention of disease, if matters of general interest, will be answered in this column. Where space will not permit or the subject is not suitable, letters will be personally answered, subject to proper limitations and where a stamped, addressed envelope is inclosed. Dr. Evans will not make diagnoses or prescribe for individual diseases. Requests for such service cannot be answered.

Dr. Evans' advice on "How to Keep Well" appears daily on the editorial page of "The Daily Tribune."

WINNING TUBERCULOSIS WAR.

THERE are some people who have the right to be down in the mouth, but not so those who are attempting to control tuberculosis. The fight against that disease is being won. Ten years ago consumption was the leading cause of death. Lecturers told of the thousands it slew, of how far it led all other diseases as a cause of death, and of how it slew more than all the preventable diseases combined. Much of that is true today, but not so much of it as was true ten years ago.

The United States census office is responsible for the statement that the known death rate from consumption has decreased 25 per cent. On top of that is the nearly total disappearance of those deaths from consumption which were entered on the records as deaths from slow fever, malaria, or were otherwise covered up.

Consumption is no longer the leading cause of death. In Chicago even pneumonia has moved ahead of it. The gradual repression of the disease is making so much headway that some communities are considering plans to completely suppress it. Framingham, Mass., starts its fight to rid itself of consumption the first of next year. Dr. Armstrong is to have charge of the campaign and the Metropolitan Life Insurance company is to furnish a part of the necessary funds.

At the fall election eight counties in Illinois voted to build county sanataria. Dubuque, Ia., decided to have a sanitarium. A wave of sentiment for sanataria and community nurses seemed to sweep over the country. But few counties in New York are without county sanitaria. It requires about three years for a sanitarium to show its influence on the tuberculosis death rate. It is safe to predict that the 1919 death rate from consumption will be 25 per cent less than that of 1915.

No cure for consumption has been found. People are freer from the disease because they come nearer to living right than they did ten years ago and not because some scientist has saved them in spite of themselves. All new houses are equipped with sleeping porches. It is hard to rent a house which has no facilities for sleeping out.

Spitting is not so reckless as it was ten years ago. In some sections one can walk a block on a busy street without seeing any sputum on the pavement, and a spit covered floor rarely is seen. It will be noticed that when people sneeze or cough they hold something in front of their faces. It was not always thus. Verily, the people have changed some of their customs and habits!

The consumption campaigners are not downhearted as they enter on this year's Christmas Seal campaign. They know much has been accomplished, but much remains to be accomplished and the proceeds from the Christmas Seals is the sole support of the campaign against consumption. They plan this year to sell twice as many stamps as they sold last year. If they succeed they can hire twice as many visiting nurses to help care for consumptives in their homes. The Wisconsin people can send their lecturer to twice as many towns and probably every county in New York state will get a county sanitarium.

The Christmas seals are managed jointly by the American Red Cross and the National Tuberculosis society. The stamps are designed, printed, and wholesaled by the American Red Cross. For this they get 12½ per cent of the proceeds. The state tuberculosis societies job the seals and run the state campaign. They get 10 per cent of the proceeds. This provides the state society with all the funds that it has for its work. The local society and their friends retail the stamps. All the receipts not going to the Red Cross or to the state society goes to the local society.

They spend it in providing for a visiting nurse, in distributing charts and leaflets, giving lectures, and in caring for consumptives. The public does its part by buying the stamps at a penny each and pasting them on letters and packages.

In order to stimulate the sale of seals the national association awards prizes to the cities selling the largest number of stamps per capita. That the competition may be more even the cities are divided into groups according to population. In addition to the competition between cities, which this year will be on the same basis as in previous years, the national association has arranged for competitions between towns and villages and between states. A pennant will be given to the winner in each of the following classes:

Class 1—Villages or counties with populations of 300 to 600.

Class 2—Villages or counties of 600 to 1,200.

Class 3—Towns or counties of 1,200 to 2,000.

Class 4—Towns or counties of 2,000 to $8,000.

Class 5—Cities or counties of 8,000 to 25,000.

Class 6—Cities or counties of 25,000 to 50,000.

Class 7—Cities or counties of 50,000 to 150,000.

Class 8—Cities or counties of 150,000 to 400,000.

Class 9—Cities or counties of 400,000 to 1,000,000.

Class 10—Cities or counties above 1,000,000.

In addition to these pennants a pennant will be given to the three states in which the highest number of stamps per capita is sold, according to the following classification:

Class A—States with populations under 1,250,000.

In addition to the above pennants the national association will give a certificate of honor to each local agent in every district where the sale of seals reaches five per capita. Five seals per capita is the standard established for this. In other words, five is bogey for 1916. Whenever a district gets bogey every agent in the district gets a certificate of honor.

As a part of the campaign against consumption, and, incidentally, of the seal campaign, an order of Modern Health Crusaders is being formed. Children between 5 and 18 years of age are eligible for crusaders. Any child who agrees to try to live up to the crusaders' health rules and undertakings and who sells or buys at least ten seals is enrolled as a health crusader and given an official certificate card.

The crusader who has sold or bought at least twenty-five seals is entitled to wear a red cross crusader's button. This button is a celluloid pin and on it is the red cross seal in red and green. The crusader of this rank has the right to the title "squire."

The next higher orders are known as the knights of the Modern Health Crusaders. A crusader who has sold or bought 100 seals is known as a "knight," and has the right to wear a silver shield pin on which is emblazoned the double red cross in red enamel.

The highest rank is that of "knight bannaret." Any crusader who has sold or bought 500 seals is entitled to wear the badge of this rank, a gold plated shield pin, on which the double red cross is enameled.

The children belonging to the crusaders and living in a given locality can be organized into a health league under a league master. The officers of a local league are a marshal, a captain, and a herald. The plan is that after the seal campaign has ended the leagues shall carry on other health campaigns. Examples of such are fly campaigns, clean-up campaigns, anti-spitting campaigns, tooth brush drills. The local leagues may join to form state legions, and the different state legions may in time form a national legion.

The tuberculosis work never has had the support of large donors. It always has been maintained in the main by small contributors. The widow's mite buys a single stamp and gives a fraction of a cent to each of three groups of workers, local nurses, state educational campaigns and national organizing effort. The wealthy man who buys 10,000 stamps contributes $100 to be divided in the same way. Thus it happens that many million persons each December contribute as the spirit moves them to carry on the fight against this disease. This plan has its weaknesses. But as a compensation it has strong points. Its strongest point is that it bands together a large number of persons in the consumption crusade.

Since there is no specific cure for consumption the persons who interest themselves against consumption interest themselves in favor of all those things which make against the disease. By that token they favor higher wages in relation to the cost of living, better housing, better ventilation, more fresh air, no spitting, and care for consumptives.

PRINTED FOR THE GOOD IT SHOULD DO.

A. G. L. writes: "Plans are complete for a house I am to build in the spring. The problem of heating the place with proper regard for humidity is exceedingly difficult.

"The people who have heating plants for sale stare at one in blank amazement and without comprehension when the question is put to them. I have traveled this town over trying to find a manufacturer whose heating system properly humidifies the air, but have not succeeded.

"I am aware that you have hammered heating people considerably in the past regarding this point. I remember some time ago a note in bold type at the head of your column stating the number of letters received seeking this information and your asking the manufacturers to get busy.

"Apparently more hammering is necessary, especially at this season, and the importance of the subject prompts me to suggest that you once more write a redhot article about the necessity for proper moisture in the heated air of our homes and offices.

"Aside from other people, I for one shall be grateful to you, and should your reply appear I personally shall see to it most of our heating companies get a copy of it."

CHILD ASTHMA VICTIM.

E. W. L. writes: "I have a daughter 3 years old next March. She has a cough and cold most of the time now and did last winter. Each time she has a day or so of sleepiness, and no remedy helps till after that. Her breathing then is asthmatic. There is much asthma on my side of the family. Doctors say her tonsils are enlarged.

"[1] Do you think an operation advisable? [2] Would it be apt to prevent a tendency toward asthma? [3] Would it be dangerous now in cool weather? [4] Would I need to keep her indoors more then? BURNED FINGERS.

I. M. writes: "I burned the tips of several fingers by picking up a hot pan. I use my fingers constantly and I could not afford to have them out of commission for two weeks or more. I covered the burns with a wet soda paste. When the blisters had swelled about as much as they could I sterilized a fine needle with heat and made a slanting hole into the blisters. The water oozed out. I repeated this each night, as long as it was necessary. The small puncture closed promptly and the blisters were never infected. I then began to file off the thick layers of dead skin with sandpaper and stone. In a week the old skin had been worn away. The burns were never sore and never suppurated."

NOT DANGEROUS.

E. D. writes: "Would an operation for tumor in which the entire right breast has been removed make child bearing dangerous, the first child, and the mother 40 years of age, the operation occurring several years ago and being perfectly successful and with no after effects?"

REPLY.

No.

MATERIAL CAUSE OF DELAY.

Chicago, Dec. 5.—[To the Friend of the People.]—When will the electric light service on Sixty-third street west of Crawford avenue be finished for use? The poles have been up for two months. R. T.

The lamps for Sixty-third street have been ordered of the Commonwealth Edison company for some time. The company reports that the installation of these lamps is being delayed because of its inability to secure material for the same. We will keep this street in mind and every reasonable effort will be made to expedite this work.

PAVING AN ALLEY.

Chicago, Dec. 5.—[To the Friend of the People.]—When is the alley between Marshfield avenue and Paulina street, running from Augusta to Emily street, going to be paved? I. B. C.

An estimate has been ordered for paving the alley between Marshfield avenue, Paulina street, Augusta street, and Emily street. The engineering department will draw up an estimate during the ensuing winter, a public hearing will be held and the work will probably be done in the summer of 1917.

FEEDING AND RESTING CATTLE.

Farmer City, Ind., Nov. 25.—[To the Legal Friend of the People.]—I shipped a car of cattle in southern Illinois at 3:50 p. m. on a Friday. The cattle were supposed to be unloaded, fed, and watered at 7 a. m. Sunday; $5 was charged for same, but seals bearing acknowledged serial letter and number were intact upon arrival at destination at 11:30 p. m. Sunday. Is the railroad liable for failure to unload in thirty-six hours? Would the seals being unbroken have any effect? A. H. B.

PRESERVE THE OIL LANDS.

Chicago, Dec. 7.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—Every patriotic citizen should make it his immediate business to inform himself upon the oil lands bill now pending in congress, and then write or wire his congressman and senator about the matter. The bill will be brought up for consideration about Dec. 11, so immediate action is necessary. The facts in regard to the matter are these:

At the last session of congress a bill was passed by the house which would legalize the claims of private individuals and corporations to the naval oil reserve lands set aside in 1909 and 1910 for the use of the navy. This bill, or a substitute, said to be backed by powerful oil interests, is about to be taken up in the senate.

Assistant Secretary of the Navy Roosevelt has said that the preservation of this fuel oil reserve is essential to the very life and future of the navy; and that while the supply within our boundaries is steadily diminishing, its consumption by the navy is rapidly increasing and ten years hence may reach 10,000,000 barrels a year. He points out that the government has the right to and must set aside reserve oil lands and prevent absolutely the taking of oil from those lands for private purposes.

It is impossible for an oil burning ship to burn coal. It would be impossible to build or operate the recently authorized battle cruisers, scouts, and destroyers if we had to rely on coal for fuel.

There can be no doubt that the naval oil lands should be reserved at any cost, and that if private individuals have valid claims on these lands they should be compensated for them, but that under no circumstances should any of the oil be taken for private use.

THE PLEDGE TO THE FLAG.

Chicago, Dec. 7.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—I wonder how many men and women have heard the pledge to the flag. I wonder how many schoolboys and girls today, when the stars and stripes are run to the top of the staff, can give the proper salute and repeat these beautiful lines: "I pledge allegiance to our flag, and the country for which it stands, one nation indivisable, with liberty and justice for all."

Every school in Chicago, yes, every school in the United States, should require of its pupils on every Flag day, and on every holiday, when the flag is raised, to stand at attention and give the pledge. Every newspaper of this city and every city of the country should print this pledge at the top of its editorial page, until every one of our 100,000,000 people at the sight of our glorious flag will instinctively come to attention and repeat it under their breath.

A new conception of our country then would occupy our minds, a new respect for the flag and [illegible] and a new patriotism [illegible]. Is this not a worthy movement to be launched? HARRY B. GARRETT.

THE MIGHTY BORROWER

by Edward Goldbeck

REALLY and truly, I am so excited that I would begin this article with the classical American exhortation, "Say, listen!" if I did not know how hard it is to combine these two activities. What a blessing that I am allowed to pour out all the adventures of my soul into the bosom of the sympathetic reader! This possibility of relieving myself enables me to bear the adversity of fate with an unshakable courage. But enough of preambles! Let me communicate to you a few letters which will speak for themselves and you will exclaim with Hamlet:

"There are more things in heaven and earth, Horatio,
Than are dreamt of in your philosophy!"

* *

To the City National Bank,
Evanston, Ill.

Dear Sirs: You will greatly oblige me by allowing me a loan of $1,000 for ninety days. I will give you a note for this amount, and when it is due I will have it extended for another ninety days and so on, until I shall be able to take care of it. Trusting that you will be glad to profit of the splendid opportunity I am extending to you, I remain, very truly yours, EDWARD GOLDBECK.

I did not expect an unstinted acknowledgment of my magnanimity, for I know how stolid and hard headed the average banker is, but I certainly was not prepared for the amount of ingratitude shown in the letter which I am transcribing as follows:

Mr. Edward Goldbeck,
111 Ridge avenue, Evanston, Ill.

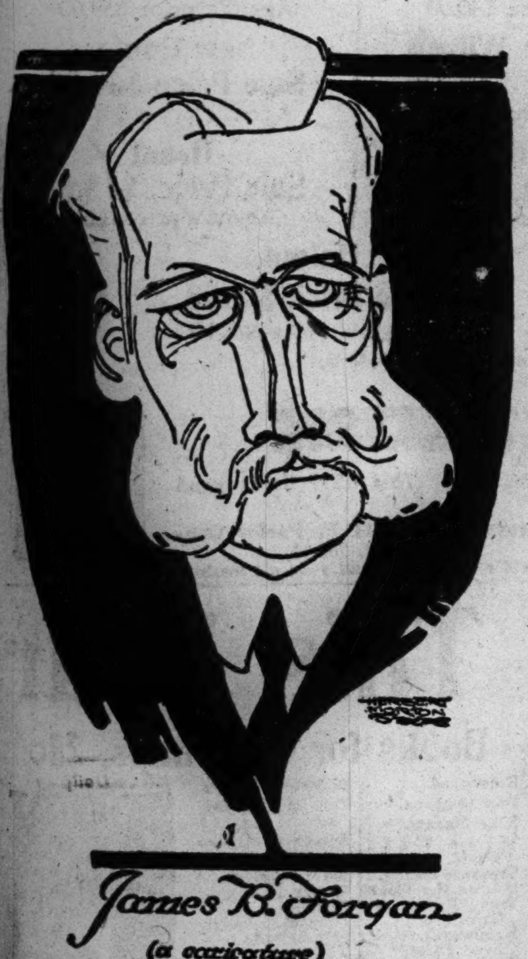
Dear Sir: We are very sorry to inform you that we cannot do any business on the basis you are suggesting in your favor of Nov. 30. It would be against the rules and dangerous to the interests of our clients if we would make any loan without sufficient collateral. Yours very truly, etc.

* *

CAN you beat that? I do not overvalue my fellow creatures, but this abysmal standpatism filled me with the darkest fears for the future of humanity.

I felt that I was in duty bound to enlighten these benighted brains, and I sat down to write another letter, this time of a purely educational and uplifting character. Here is what I wrote to the poor people:

Dear Sirs: I received your letter of Dec. 1 and must confess that I would like to know the board of trustees which appointed you to your responsible position. Be it said with all the politeness which I owe to myself that you are the most stupid and retrograde bank managers I ever saw. Neither have you got the literary education which is so desirable—nay, indispensable in your line of business—nor do you follow the events of the time with the unflagging attention which every intelligent citizen and straphanger is wont to bestow on them. Under these circumstances I consider it my duty to illuminate the dusk of obsolete prejudices in which you are fluttering blind and batlike with the light I may have acquired from ancient and modern lumina.



James B. Forgan
(a caricature)

Did you ever read Charles Lamb? Did you never read how he praised Ralph Bigod, Esq., setting forth in London streets, "like some Alexander, upon his great enterprise, borrowing and to borrow"? Don't you remember his touching complaint about his being "fallen into the society of lenders and little men"? Gentle but prophetic Elia foresaw the period of "the mighty borrower," and into this period we entered on the memorable day of Nov. 3, 1916, when H. P. Davison of J. P. Morgan & Co. was a guest at the Chicago club and addressed a dozen of our most prominent financial augurs who do not even wink at each other when they meet in the presence of the uninitiated. A memorable day, dear sirs! because on that day there were laid down the guiding principles of a new financial policy. Teddy gave us the new nationalism, Woodrow the new freedom, Emma Goldman the new morality, and H. P. Davison the new banking.

The idea of the new banking which Mr. Davison plagiarized from poor Charles Lamb is this, that the borrower should dictate the conditions. Up to now it has been quite the other way, and you are still infected with the immoral ideas of a world which—thank the Lord!—is doomed irrevocably. Mr. Davison wants us to lend England some money—O, a mere trifle, a billion would do beautifully—and he suggests short term British exchequer notes, thirty to ninety day notes, to be precise.

As British ministers do not tire of stating that they will fight until Germany is crushed and as there is very little chance that Germany should be crushed in ninety days, these notes will have to be renewed when they are due, and this will go on until the war is over. Should the allies win payment may come forth; should they be worsted there is nothing that might not happen. Before the war we considered a great many things "impossible" which have come true in these last two years, and especially so in the domain of finances. If in July, 1914, you would have asked a financial expert whether such a war as we have seen could last for two years he would have doubted your mental soundness.

So the possibilities of revolution and bankruptcy must not be eliminated in our dealings with any of the belligerent countries. But what does that matter? The new banker answers with angelic mildness: "I have full confidence in the financial capacity of the allies and particularly of England, and I want to take the risk. According to all the old standards of sound banking a loan under these conditions would be pure insanity, but we live in a humanitarian era and we really cannot afford to neglect such a wonderful opportunity of proving it." I hope that you will understand now what a mistake it was to answer my letter the way you did. I wanted to do you a good turn and relieve you from the plethoric condition from which you are suffering now.

Of course, I could have offered you some perfectly good security in stocks and bonds, but I preferred to keep it for myself. In this respect, too, I am following the example set by the allies. They are not willing to sell any more securities. They have sold those securities which are not important for their after-war plans, but they retain those that are, especially South American railroads.

More than $2,000,000,000 of British money is invested in South American railroad stocks. Among the securities to be taken over by the government for the purpose of securing American loans these railroad stocks are not included. (Preference stocks and bonds which do not give any controlling influence are included, of course.) For England does not want to pledge or to sell them. She wants to keep them. They are the stocks which are essential for the commercial control of South America.

England is bidding for such a control. She wants to oust the German competitor with the help of American money. She is pretty careful not to let in American competitors. She does her best in insurance, shipping, etc., to balk American trade and she is not going to part with the securities above mentioned. She cannot get American goods by paying for them in gold, for she does not want to export gold any longer. She cannot pay for them by selling or pledging the securities she still holds, for she does not want to part with them. The supply of such stocks as she is willing to sell or to pledge or to mortgage is limited. Her demand for American goods on a credit basis is unlimited. So she is trying to purchase American goods on a credit basis. As she has not got the securities she would be willing to mortgage for such a purchase, she has started an agitation for an unsecured loan.

Mr. Davison's admirable speech reached its humanitarian climax when he stated in a voice shaking with noble emotion that "he was wondering how we in this country would feel if the tables were reversed." Mr. J. B. Forgan felt the tears trickling down his cheeks, Mr. Charles G. Dawes blew his nose with energy, Mr. A. Reynolds' mouth showed a nervous twitch, Mr. F. B. Hulbert looked forlorn, Mr. L. A. Goddard stared into an abyss, Mr. R. J. Dunham nodded gravely, Mr. F. H. Ranson's face was all saintly inspiration, Mr. S. Insull felt his pulse accelerating, Mr. J. A. Lynch seemed to etherealize while listening to the gospel, Mr. W. A. Tilden muttered incoherent words, Mr. J. E. Otis manfully contained an outburst of enthusiasm, and they all saw a halo slowly spreading around Mr. Davison's head, this wonderful receptacle and birthplace of a world saving truth.

From now on the mighty borrower has only to pronounce the monumental words, "How would you feel if the tables were reversed?" and he will be able to touch even the deepest hidden sources. The harassing problem of the distribution of wealth is solved; everybody can have just as much as he wants by making the appeal which Mr. Davison put into words of Lincolnian simplicity.

The millennium has come, and you, dear sirs, have not even been aware of its appearance. If my feeble words have succeeded in making you understand the beauty of the new doctrine, I am richly rewarded. Yours very truly, etc.

P. S.—About the thousand dolars, I hope to hear from you at your earliest convenience.

* *

EVERY self-respecting public man must sooner or later discover a "danger" which threatens the nation. Mr. Davison has discovered the danger of too much gold. The American citizen is another King Midas: he starves because everything he touches turns into gold. We are too rich, we are "plethoric." We resemble the man who has "too much blood" and to whom our ancestors' medicinal science prescribed a blood letting. This is Mr. Davison's remedy: he recommends the bleeding of a billion dollar loan. The physician of today thinks that the remedy is worse than the sickness; he tries to improve the quality of the blood and to regulate its circulation.

I have faith enough in the average American to be convinced that hyper-clever arguments will fail to get him in.

It is said that the great gold reserves in the banks are responsible for the huge rise in prices. If that were true there is a simple way out of it. Why not export gold? Spanish exchange and Argentine exchange would permit such an export at a profit. It is not done because England does not permit it. If the rise of prices is due to the accumulation of gold England is responsible for it by not permitting the export of gold to those neutral countries. Moreover, if we are really frightened at future gold receipts, we can decline cash payment and ask to be paid in stocks. Not in those only which the English are willing to sell but in those we are willing to buy.

If America really wants a share in the South American trade our bankers have an unequaled opportunity of getting cheaply the control of South American railroads. They have got the whip hand at present, and if they really put America first they ought to make use of it. They ought to insist on being paid in first class South American railroad stocks. Such a transaction would do more in fostering American trade in South America than all the talk about trade conquest. American bankers who refuse to work in that direction are practically doing business for England.

IT is not likely, however, that such a transaction would put any stop to the rise of prices as long as the American wheat crop is only 585,000,000 bushels, whilst it was 1,011,505,000 bushels in 1915. There is a shortage, and as long as the allies continue purchasing 15,000,000 to 25,000,000 bushels per month of such short supply prices must rise, whatever the form of payment may be. Whether the demand for wheat is increased by a hundred million bushels paid for in gold or in securities or by credit, the demand remains the same and so does the supply. The price will be raised in the same way in all three cases to the detriment of the American consumer.

But if the American consumers of wheat, coal, structural steel, etc., be damaged in the interest of the allies they ought to be compensated by the terms of payment. They ought not to be asked to lend without security the money with which the high cost of living is to be enhanced. The allies have got the securities, they do not want to give them up. If they prefer to keep them, let them do it. They will see quickly enough that they cannot feed their armies with Argentine Great Western stock. We have the goods, the allies need them. We can insist on the terms of payment. They must buy or make peace. If America does not want them to make peace she can make them pay at least the terms which are in our interest.

The situation as it is is absurd. We are starving our population to feed the allies, and we furnish the money to continue this ridiculous and criminal policy. Let us find out how much we need ourselves and the surplus may be exported, if there is any surplus. An embargo on foodstuff might have been interpreted as an unneutral measure, but nobody can blame us for refusing to cut off our own nose. We are all sick and tired of this sort of prosperity.

TABLOID BOOK REVIEW

by Fanny Butcher

Last week's best sellers in a leading Chicago book store were:

WAR.

"My Home in the Field of Honor" (Doran), by Frances Wilson Huard.

FICTION.

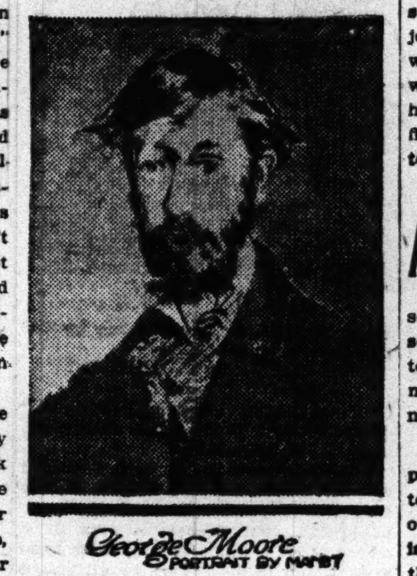
"Mr. Britling Sees It Through" (Macmillan), by H. G. Wells.
"Enoch Crane" (Scribner's), by F. Berkeley Smith.
"Mary 'Gusta" (Appleton), by Joseph C. Lincoln.
"The World For Sale" (Harper's), by Sir Gilbert Parker.
"The Rising Tide" (Harper's), by Margaret Deland.
"The Romance of a Christmas Card" (Houghton-Mifflin), by Kate Douglas Wiggin.

NONFICTION.

"A Hoosier Holiday" (John Lane), by Theodore Dreiser.

WITH "The Brook Kerith" (Macmillan), the most talked for and against book of the season, though still unread on our library tables (well, isn't it on yours?), Susan L. Mitchell's monograph on "George Moore" in "The Irishmen of Today" series (Dodd-Mead) is the most remunerative investment I know of for those who want to spit George Moore on the sabre of their wits, for there are enough sharp edged bon mots about him in the small volume to arm an after dinner conversational fencer against attack for many evenings. It is a sparkling, keen, clever, sarcastic, brilliant Irish piece of writing that would be worth reading if it were a monograph on the Latin Ablative instead of on the most fascinating and the (self-proclaimed) naughtiest of Irish novelists. It makes me long for space in which to quote and in which to chuckle over the quotations.

With a phrase Miss Mitchell gives form to the nebulous feelings one has always had about him. "Mr. Moore has never put on his clothes since the day when as a little boy in Stephen's Green he took them all off and ran naked to the scandal of his nurse." "This bad boy of English literature who does his own birching so persistently and publicly." "Mr. Moore has a moral courage that he has developed to the point where it becomes immorality." Her quoting of the famous Dublin woman who said "Some men kiss and tell, Mr. Moore tells but doesn't kiss." "Mr. Moore has never got beyond babyhood in his character and few women can have known him without that desire to slap him that is the normal woman's attitude toward an aggravating baby."



George Moore
PORTRAIT BY MANET

Those are only a few of the phrases whose deftness are rivaled by the longer paragraphs. Get the book and read it. You will want to have Susan Mitchell meet death before her time if you are a George Moore-ite, but she's safely intrenched behind her Irish wit, and she'll win the struggle against you.

It was Miss Mitchell's suggestion that the Manet portrait of George Moore "is like nothing so much as the human symbol of a high explosive shell"—that made me search it out to reprint. Do you think she's wrong about it?

From a London correspondent comes this news about G. B. S.:

"George Bernard Shaw is now adding to his other eccentricities, or taking away from them, by great recruiting activity. His longest haired admirers receive no mercy at his hands, and I have seen a very personal postcard from him which reads: 'If you can't get real soldiering to set you up, at least you might be of fifth rate value to the country with your brains.' Irishmen are spared least of all, and 10 Adelphi terrace, wonderful to relate, has become a rendezvous for uniforms! The smartest looking visitant yet seen there is Flight Commander Robert Loraine (formerly of U. S. A.), who once played the hero of Shaw's "Man and Superman." Loraine, who has been flying for months at the front, says that, as a consequence, he now has only one lung, but declares that it is really quite as serviceable as two, and much less trouble!"

In "Human Animals" (Stokes) Frank Hamel has collected many stories of the classic wer-wolf type, folk lore of animals with human forms or wierd human significances. There is one most entertaining folk tale of a tiger man in India who was always incanted back to human form by a friend. When the friend died the tiger man taught his wife the trick. When he came bounding home a few days later, however, from a glorious antelope hunt he frightened her literally out of her wits. The more he gamboled about her to show her who he was the more hysterical she got. Finally, saying to himself "This is the most irritating woman I ever saw," he fell upon her in a passion and killed her, remembering only too late that he would have to remain a tiger the rest of his days. I think that's a highly moral tale.

A writer in the Manchester (England) Guardian says that Joseph Conrad has discovered another element. "His intimate friends used to declare that it was almost impossible to persuade Conrad out of his seclusion, but I hear that he also is, and has been for some time, 'doing his bit.' He has an official appointment of some responsibility which he is discharging with such zest that it is said he has been making flights in aeroplanes. That the sea writer who preferred to remain in the days of the clippers and who when he referred occasionally to steamers did so in a manner which showed he could never think of them as he did of the old hookers of 'youth' should now be flying in war planes is one of the miracles of this new era."

The first Imagist poem, according to Amy Lowell, who speaks with conviction when she talks of the Imagists, is this short stanza which was published in 1898 in a little plaquette called "For Christmas MDCCCCVLLL," by the Poet's club, which was founded in London by T. E. Hulme:

AUTUMN (it's called).

A touch of cold in the Autumn night.
I walked abroad,
And saw the ruddy moon lean over a hedge,
Like a red faced farmer:
I did not stop to talk, but nodded;
And round about were the wistful stars
With white faces like town children.

And the shortage of paper situation is a real one, especially where the finer papers for plates are concerned.

For the last six weeks, since the public library has been allowing borrowers to take five books on each card, there hasn't been a copy of "David Copperfield," "The Scarlet Letter," nor "The Pilgrims' Progress" on the shelves, and the library owns at least a hundred copies of each of them.

If you're looking for a book for the youngsters don't miss "Good-Night Stories" (McClurg), by Clara Ingram Judson. Mrs. Judson doesn't write on theory alone. She has two adorable little girls who speak their minds about the stories she writes, and if she desn't make them real children's tales they will have none of them. These good-night stories were all approved by them.

The British Prisoners of War Book Scheme, which is now the officially recognized agency in England for sending out educational books to British prisoners of war, will welcome books on almost any educational subject, so great has been the demand lately from the camps in enemy and neutral countries. They ask for a list of the books to accompany each offer, which should be addressed to A. T. Davies, board of education, Whitehall, London, S. W. The aim of this war charity is to send out free to any British prisoner any books on any subject and in any language which he needs for serious study. The results have been amazing, it is said. Of course, it is a long way to send books, but perhaps some of the volumes in your attic library would be happy to risk the journey.

"The Dune Country" (John Lane) is warranted to make happy any of you who have in your hearts that benediction which only the wind swirled sand hills, the scraggy brush, and the swish and swash of the lake can pronounce to men and women. It isn't glittering with half dried ink, but it recommends itself anew for the holiday season. The author, Earl Reed, has illustrated it with reproductions of his own etchings, and some of them are rarely beautiful.

Witter Bynner will talk this afternoon at 4:30 at the Little theater under the auspices of Poetry, a magazine of verse. These Sunday afternoons are sort of confessionals at which the public has the unorthodox privilege of "sitting in." Next Sunday Mary Aldis, who is one of Chicago's own, will talk.

STRAWS

by Robert Herrick

THE English state of mind is always an interesting psychological problem, even to the American of English descent. To the non-Anglo-Saxon American, as to the European, the English state of mind is a maddening, a repulsive phenomenon. Recently two well known English novelists have depicted this English state of mind with admirable clarity. Of the greater of these two, Mr. Wells in his last story, I have nothing to say. "Mr. Britling Sees It Through" is a too profound, too moving self-revelation for areless or hasty comment. But for the other "war novel," Miss May Sinclair's "The Belfry," there need be no such scruple. In the first place, it is only incidentally and journalistically a war story: the novelist seizes upon the world catastrophe as she might have seized upon a shipwreck or an earthquake to bring about the final shuffle of her tale. Even to the English fancy her picture of those first days of the struggle in Belgium must be merely grotesque.

NOR is it as a fine piece of literature that "The Belfry" arrests me: it is only of mediocre quality in the tradition of Henry James, one of those competent, carefully worked little pieces of the English social soil which come forth with the punctuality of the seasons. It is, rather, for what Miss Sinclair did not intend, for its unconscious emphasis, that I find the story noticeable. It is a straw showing by its drift, like so many other straws, the movement of the English current.

The theme is the love and the fate of two young English persons, one the lively daughter of a minor canon of Canterbury cathedral—hence belonging somewhere near the outer fringe of British purple—and a struggling journalist, successful novelist, and playwright, who is born in the outer darkness of the English servile class, a "bounder"—i. e.: one who misplaces his aspirates, cracks his knuckles, jerks his thumbs, and in other minor ways offends against the manners of the purple. The "adorable Jimmy," genius and money getter enough to please any American, we are carefully informed, has all the graces and refinements of the spirit: it is only in manners and in habits that he is fatally deficient. (Nor is he very outrageous in manners and habits: he neither spits nor swallows his knife.)

Nevertheless, the tragedy of Miss Sinclair's 350 pages—and it is plainly a very real tragedy to the novelist—is the struggle that the patrician daughter of the canon endures, after marrying "Jimmy" in a burst of defiance, with her adoring husband's unpleasant "bounder" habits. This tragedy rises to the crisis of an almost elopement, induced by a series of social lapses committed in the exuberance of Jimmy's great commercial success at the game of novel and play making. She loves him desperately, she admires his genius, his sweetness of character, his tender chivalry to her, but she cannot endure his taste in house furnishing, in motors, his table manners, etc. It is the tragedy of caste!

"Jimmy" redeems himself and wins back the loyalty of his wife, thanks to the fortuitous accident of the great war, where the cockney author performs prodigies of inhuman valor in rescuing Belgian wounded, snatching them from the mouth of cannon and out of bombarded town halls—one of his prizes being, fortunately for his domestic bliss, a haughty brother-in-law, Reggie, fine flower of the upper class breed. Incidentally, in saving Reggie he loses his offending right hand, the one that cracks its knuckles and summons butlers by a jerk of the thumb! This is the symbol of reconciliation with his wife's caste.

The melodrama of the Belgian part is merely silly and hysterical—hte imagining of a schoolgirl. One can pass it lightly these excited days, forgiving "Jimmy's" valorous efforts and even his symbolically lost hand. What Miss Sinclair apparently does not see, what the usual English mind cannot see is the dreary pettiness of the whole thing. In a sense it is not so petty as it looks to an American, for the caste habit of mind ingrained in the English is more than any other one thing the cause of that incompetency, that dry rot which Germany revealed by her challenge to the world.

The emphasis upon little things, upon social distinctions, the differences between the "bounder" and "our" kind, the lamentable results of the mésalliance—that has taken altogether too much space in English thought. The crux of English caste, the final test, is treatment of the unfortunate h.

With your aitches properly placed you may become a candidate for all good social things; without your aitches properly placed you are for good and all a "bounder." The accident of speaking one of the many dialects of an Anglo-Saxon inheritance, the one prevailing around London, is made the touchstone of social position. It is, of course, deeper than this, but hardly less defensible. A nation where the caste spirit is so deeply intrenched, as naïvely depicted in a novel like Miss Sinclair's "The Belfry," is likely to get hard knocks in our modern world. England is getting hers now.

IT is said the English officers were at first inclined to regard with contempt their Canadian fellow officers because the latter fraternized with their men, did not consider the private soldier as being of a lower order. It is related that an English officer, observing a French officer dining at the same table with his piou pious, deplored such "lack of discipline." It is commonly known the difficulty England has had in officering her new armies because of her superior class, from which officers are taken, was so largely wiped out in the retreat from Mons.

Probably England is beginning to learn this lesson, like so many others, a little late—is beginning to realize that for war and for all real activities a man should not be judged and placed by his use of the aspirate or his table manners. It is another of those necessary lessons which Germany is slowly pounding into the unwilling English mind. A more real, a more democratic England after the war—or no more British empire.

In that England to be, now in the making, a clever novelist, even a clever woman novelist, will not set the tragedy of life in the differences of breeding between the lovely daughter of a minor canon and the ambitious and successful—but unaspirated—hero from the outer darkness of "bounder" land.

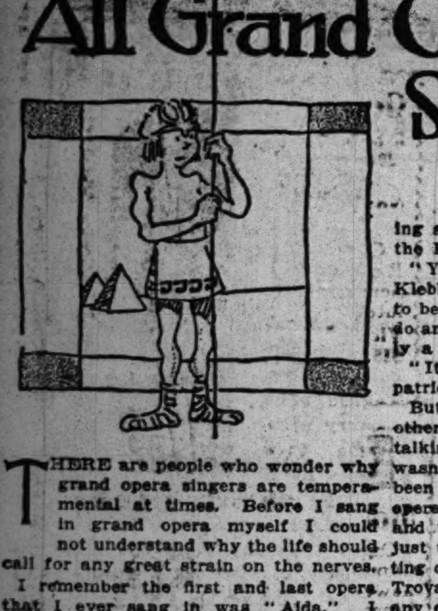
All Grand Opera Singer's Retire Sometime Or Other

Says ONEY FRED SWEET



THERE are people who wonder why grand opera singers are temperamental at times. Before I sang in grand opera myself I could not understand why the life should call for any great strain on the nerves.

I remember the first and last opera that I ever sang in was "Aida." I ought to remember the event because it occurred but a short time ago. And the work is hard. There are so many jealousies; there is so much anxiety. The foreign languages are difficult to learn, and then besides merely having voice one must be able to interpret a rôle intelligently and have accompanying dramatic ability.

I remember the afternoon when I was dressing for my part in "Aida." I didn't have what you would really call a dressing room. The place where I changed my clothes was in a region underneath the Auditorium stage and the dungeon was filled with scenery and properties of a dozen different productions. Mr. Klebba came over to where I sat buckling on my sandals.

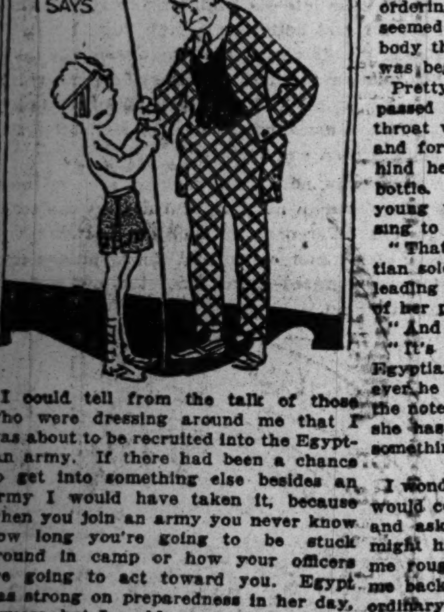
"You were told to come down here, weren't you?" said Mr. Klebba.

"I took the man upstairs to mean that," I answered.

"Yes. I heard him," said Mr. Klebba. "I heard him say, 'Vada ki sotto il polchoscenico, non e posto per ki qui.'"

"I caught the drift of what he meant," I says. "I knew he wanted me to get out of the way."

Mr. Klebba went over to the box of sandals to get me a smaller pair than the ones I had selected.



I could tell from the talk of those who were dressing around me that I was about to be recruited into the Egyptian army. If there had been a chance to get into something else besides an army I would have taken it, because when you join an army you never know how long you're going to be stuck around in camp or how your officers are going to act toward you. Egypt was strong on preparedness in her day, I guess, but I could see she hadn't been very much on equipment. The sandals were pretty thin for campaign purposes, and even after I had gotten myself fully dressed there wasn't anything to speak of to keep my legs warm.

"So you're interested in opera," remarked Mr. Klebba when he came back like an accommodating shoe clerk and handed me a pair of sandals that were more nearly my size.

"Why shouldn't I be," I answered. "I've heard what Caruso gets for singing a single night. What is the pay in the Egyptian army?"

"You don't get any pay," said Mr. Klebba. "You are lucky to get a chance to be in this Egyptian army. You don't do any singing, you know. You're merely a 'supe.'"

"It seems to me that Egypt puts patriotism to a tremendous test," I says.

But Mr. Klebba had drifted on. The other Egyptian soldiers about me were talking in a language which, while it wasn't Egyptian, might as well have been Egyptian. They were taking about operas and singers matter of fact like, and with perfect ease. And they had just the right accents. They were getting off such names as "Pagliacci," "Il Trovatore," "Die Walkure," without any effort whatsoever. It doesn't take lonog to get into the grand opera atmosphere. In no time at all they have you doing it, too. I hadn't been around the place half an hour before I was explaining to somebody else how Farrar was fitted for "Koenigskinder," but that she didn't have quite the tone for "Lucia." Nobody can catch me on any of that stuff any more.

Wholly lacking in military training, our army was ordered to the front along about the second act. We ran into as much tense excitement as though a big battle was pending.

I shall never forget the half dozen orchestra players who stood in the wings waiting to furnish a bit of music at a critical moment. Their leader had worked himself up to a high pitch. I was afraid he was going to snap to pieces. He kept raising his hand and gesturing while the violinists kept getting ready. Yet it seemed each time that the proper moment had not yet arrived. And then finally the proper moment did arrive, and the leader came down with his hands, his eyes flashing, and his small dark mustache bristling.

I could see how the land lay. If the violinists didn't happen to come in with their music at just the proper minute it wouldn't sound right out in front, and everybody would criticise and want their $3 back. It seemed as if there were so many people behind the scenes ordering everybody else about, and it seemed as if I got in the way of everybody that had any ordering powers. I was beginning to get nervous myself.

Pretty soon a dark looking young lady passed me who was covering up her throat with a shawl and walking back and forth good and worried. Just behind her was a maid with a thermos bottle. Suddenly the dark looking young woman paused and started to sing to herself.

"That's Raisa," explained an Egyptian soldier beside me. "She takes the leading rôle, and she's rehearsing some of her part."

"And the thermos bottle?" I asked.

"It's got coffee in it," continued the Egyptian corporal or sergeant or whatever he was. "You see, when she sings the notes coming out dry her throat and she has to keep her throat oiled with something."

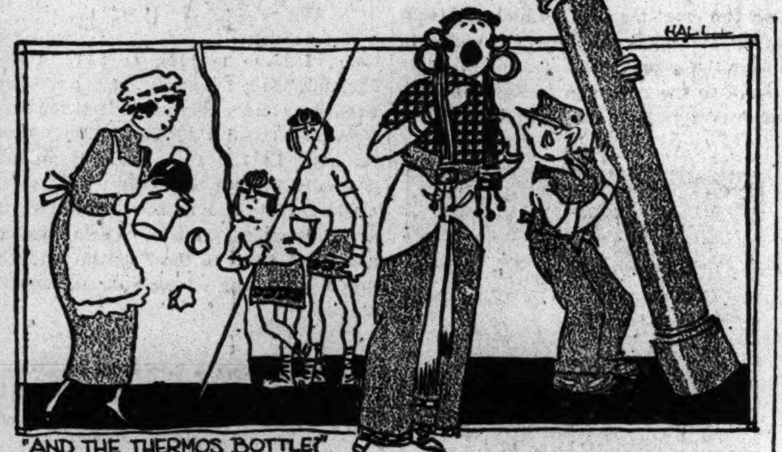
I wondered how much a thermos bottle would cost me. I was going to go over and ask Raisa for any other tips she might have, but I felt somebody clutch me roughly by the shoulders and pull me back. It was Mr. Klebba, wearing ordinary citizen's clothing in the midst of our fancy colored uniforms. Mr. Klebba seemed to be the general of the Egyptian army and his discipline tactics seemed to be mostly of a rough grabbing by the shoulder sort.

Finally the Egyptian army got word from some source to move. I wondered how long the hike was going to be. We were without rations and even without canteens of water, but presently we started forward and I discovered that we were in a glorious procession that marched right out on to the stage and down by the footlights, where the orchestra was blaring through brass and crashing with cymbals. In fact, we walked right down past the prompter's box.

The audience could see only the box and couldn't see the prompter waving his hands at all, but I peeked in and saw the prompter. In fact, with a little effort I could have stepped on his fingers. I could see that we were in some kind of a palace with the king on his throne and a big crowd standing about and then we marched to the back of the stage and stood on guard.

It so happened that a big soldier stood right next to me while we waited on guard. He had on a spangled armor costume and he wore a helmet and carried a long pole with an animal's head on the end of it. I carried a pole that was as long as the one he carried, but mine only had a spear on the end of it. We hadn't been given any practice in using the spears at all. Somehow my spear got entangled with the big soldier's animal headed pole and right while everybody was singing and everything this big soldier told me to get my spear out of the way.

"Get that old pole of yours out of the way," I says, "and be careful not to step on my toes again."



"AND THE THERMOS BOTTLE?" I ASKED.

All this time the procession was still pouring into the castle, and at the end of it there was a girl gave a barefooted dance. I was close enough so that I could tell she really didn't have a thing on her feet. There wasn't a minute she wasn't in danger of running a slivver into her heels or soles that were all dusty before she got through.

Then the king on his throne started to sing a song. Of course what he sang was in Italian, but that didn't spoil it for me, because being in the basement during the first act had caused me to miss the run of the plot. You've got to get used to grand opera to appreciate it. With the tinted lights pouring down on us strong and the orchestra playing down in front of us and the audience stretching up beyond the balconies clear to the top of the house—well, you've got to sing in grand opera yourself to know how it feels.

For my part I was glad the opera was in Italian. I knew that when it came time for me to get a chance to sing a good many in the audience wouldn't know whether I had the right words or not. I knew I would get a chance to sing eventually. I would surprise Mr. Klebba. This one matinee I would sing for nothing, to show what I could do. Mr. Klebba had told me himself that it was those with the greatest voices who often have the hardest time to succeed. It was so with Caruso, he told me, and with Ruffo.

Finally my moment came. The chorus broke forth, and I broke forth with it. Cautiously I sang at first, waiting to get the swing of the tune. It was the tune that was the hardest because I knew it was not necessary that the words be understood, anyhow. And these gradually as the chorus swelled in volume I became more bold. Of course, just as we cannot see ourselves as others see us, so we cannot hear ourselves as others hear us. But I found that all fright and nervousness was leaving me. I became thrilled as I hummed through the lighter strains and gave my voice full vent during the crashing periods.

There was one thing I had to look out for. I knew that it was necessary that I keep a check on my voice in order to be sure and cease when the chorus had ceased, but even though the Egyptian soldiers on all sides of me, who were just standing still, according to orders, and not singing at all, nudged me and kicked me in my exposed shins, I found myself enabled to stick clear to the last high note and until the great plush curtains, with a swish that was like the flutter of a great bird's wings, descended from the sides of the stage and rolled together.

Watching Raisa as she came and went, in taking her bows, I was a bit slow in catching up with the Egyptian army as it was piloted off the stage and back toward the basement by Mr. Klebba. In fact, my attention was still diverted when Mr. Klebba grabbed me by the shoulders as I passed him.

"Was that you?" he asked.

"Me, what?" I says.

"Butting in on that singing out there," persisted Mr. Klebba, and he seemed very much interested.

I didn't answer right away. I wanted time to think. If Mr. Klebba desired to locate that voice in order to shower upon its owner proper rewards, if it meant $2,000 a night and royalties from phonograph records, then by all means I should answer, "It was I sir."

But if on the other hand——

How the whole future of our lives may hinge sometimes on the choice of a single word! But I couldn't go on thinking the thing over forever. Mr. Klebba was too impatient. He was all together too impatient. I didn't like the expression on his face very well.

"You don't need to think it was me," I says with sudden decision. "Honest it wasn't."

"Yes, it was," insisted Mr. Klebba, "and don't you dare come around here again."

And from Mr. Klebba's tone of voice I could see I had not only been dishonorably discharged from the Egyptian army but mustered out of grand opera as well.

That woman on the stand is the wife. Isn't she sad? She's the kind of woman who wears a 50 cent combination and wonders what her husband can see in Annette Kellerman.

The wife's farewell: John, I've been with you in spirit for ten years. By the way, did you put that pint bottle in the grip? Now, remember, dear, if that woman upstairs hears burglars again let her hear!

The shopgirl's confession: What! Me, dearie? That fellow that had charge of the elevators? No, dearie, I give him the go-by a long time ago. He was closer than the next second. Honest, dearie, he wouldn't buy a calendar for fear he'd die before the year was up. You bet I give him the go-over.

"Yes, and he left me quite a bit of real estate."

"Let me see the deeds. [Reading]: Six lots, 160 feet east of the city limits of St. Louis. That's great!"

"What's the matter?"

"Get me a diving suit and I'll look over your property. [Resumes reading.] Four lots six miles south of Suffolk, Va."

"Now what's wrong?"

"Why, unless times have changed since the war that is a swamp. What you need is a submarine."

Frank Bush:

When I got home about 5 g. m. my wife says to me: "How dare you come home to me half intoxicated," and I went right out and got the other half. I came back and said, "Now, dearie, I will go out and get you something nice for breakfast," but she said she didn't think I needed another drink and so I didn't go.

I met with an accident as I came in the house. I ran into the whatnot in the hall and upset it and broke a lot of I know not what. My wife began to cry and then I began to cry and we fell on each other's necks, at least I fell on my neck, and I told her I was the worst man in the world. She said, "O, no, you are the best man in the world," and we argued it for awhile and then I let her have her way and gave her all my money to show her I was generous and she took it to show me she believed me.

My wife and I bill and coo all the time. That is, she cooes and I get the bills. I got one this morning for a bonnet—they must be making them of radium now. I said to her: "What made you buy a $28 bonnet?" She said: "To wear on Sundays." I told her a $28 hat ought to wear forever. Why, I could go into the hat business for that much money.

I hear Rockefeller is sick again. That man is the most generally abused man in the United States. But he can stand it. The more they abuse him the more they have to pay for it. All he has to do is to put up the price of oil.

Rockefeller is a philanthropist, they say. That is, he does people good. There is no doubt about that, he does them the best he knows how, and what he don't know is not worth knowing.

AUTOMOBILES Conducted by SHEPPARD BUTLER MOTORCYCLES

Questions and Answers

By High Speed

Owing to the large volume of inquiries for automobile routes and the relatively small amount of space in which to answer them, readers wishing immediate replies are advised to inclose a 2 cent stamp with inquiries so they may be answered by mail. Only routes and answers to questions of general interest will be published.

If T. R., whose letter regarding the shipment of automobiles over a portion of the distance to Florida, was published in your column of Sunday, Nov. 19, will send me his address we can perhaps make an arrangement to ship three cars to Chattanooga together. A party of us, in two cars, expects to tour from Chattanooga to southern Florida and we would be pleased to get in touch with others who are contemplating the same trip.

NORTH SIDER, Chicago.

If any of our readers are interested in the above proposition they may reach North Sider by addressing him in care of High Speed, "The Tribune."

I have just returned from a trip to Urbana and Champaign and thought your readers might be interested in knowing something of the condition of the route. The route down through Indiana is the best way to go in wet weather, and your readers should be advised to go through Crown Point instead of going south from Dyer. The route through Illinois measures 165 miles and is the best in dry weather, but one would take chances in going that way now. I go over the roads almost every week or so, driving new cars to Chicago. There is a dirt road twenty-five miles long between Danville and Urbana, and it is good when dry. From the Chicago "loop" to Urbana, via Indiana, it is 180 miles, but the tourist will be repaid for traveling the extra distance.

W. O. WILSON, Urbana, Ill.

I have followed your writings with great interest, and have always found your touring advice good. Now I am wondering if you would be able to inform me as to the distance from Raleigh, N. C., to Emporia, Va., and also as to the principal towns along the route. What touring book would you recommend for those driving through the south?

A. J. E., Raleigh, N. C.

The distance from Raleigh to Emporia is 117.9 miles. The first sixty-nine miles consists of good sand clay; then comes twenty-two miles of only fair sand clay, followed by eight miles of fair to poor sand road. The balance is good sand clay. The route is over a much used connection between central North Carolina points and the mouth of the Chesapeake. Go through Wake Forest, Youngsville, Franklinton, Kittrell, Henderson, Warrenton, Macon, Littleton, Thelma, and Roanoke Rapids to Emporia. For southern touring we would recommend Vol. 6, Automobile Blue Book.

Will you please inform me through your "questions and answers" column as to the merits of cleaning out an automobile engine by passing a quantity of kerosene oil through the air intake of the carburetor? Does this operation help to rid the cylinders of carbon, or is it likely to bring about bad results? What is the effect brought about when water is used in the same way?

M. E. SHANNON, Chicago.

In cases where lubricating oil has worked past the piston rings and fouled the spark plugs, mechanics sometimes run kerosene through the air intake of the carburetor to cut the oil from the cylinder walls. Kerosene may be used to remove carbon from the cylinders and the best way to proceed is to pour about a tablespoonful of the oil through the petcocks and allow it to remain over night. In the morning the motor should be raced for a few minutes, after which much of the carbon will have been disposed of. Water also brings fair results when poured slowly through the air intake, but care should be used not to inject enough to choke the motor. It is generally conceded by experts that the most effective method of removing carbon is to have it burned out. This may be done quickly and cheaply at any of the service stations now scattered throughout the city.

Motor Notes.

Refined mechanical characteristics, better finish, and improved equipment, without radical changes, appear in the new "series 18" Studebakers for 1917. Studebaker announcements have always been milestones in the progress of automobile affairs. This year price increases of $130 on the six touring car and $55 on the four indicate the trend that many manufacturers are following as the cost of materials continues to rise.

"Local automobile fanciers have shown unusual interest in the Westcott four passenger touring roadster since its announcement," says A. W. Rowe of Rowe, Young & Cooley, 3937 Washington boulevard. "There has been an ever increasing demand for a family roadster, although lack of comfort has been a serious drawback to a good many cars of this type up to this time. It is evident that the Westcott engineers gave this important feature careful consideration in bringng out a four passenger car, and as a result this roadster has become exceedingly popular."

McVICKER'S.

Mahoney and Auburn:

"I once loved a young girl, but, alas, she wasn't made for me."

"Then you didn't marry her?"

"Yes, I did. That's why I know."

"Say, I wonder how old this hash is, any way?"

"Couldn't tell you, old man, I've only been here a week myself."

"Do you see anything ridiculous in my wig?"

"Yes, your head."

"I bought a hat for my wife and I had to run home all the way."

"What for?"

"I was afraid the style would change before I got there."

"What is love?"

"I know what the poet says of love."

"What does he say?"

"'Two souls with but a single thought, two hearts that beat as one.'"

"That isn't it at all."

"What is love, then?"

"Love is a tickling sensation of the heart that cannot be scratched."

How Actresses Remove Hai From the Underarms

You have wondered why actresses can wear sleeveless frocks or bodices of a diaphanous weave. You can, too, if you use

El Rado

—a sanitary lotion that will remove hair in a few moments by saturating absorbent cotton and applying it to the hair. No color, absolutely harmless.

Does Your Corset Rest Your Back?

—Third Floor—Center—

How often have you sought relief from backache by bracing your back against your spread fingers—just as the young woman shown at the right is doing—that welcome relief is possible throughout the day if you wear a Nemo Back-Resting Corset that is properly fitted—for it is so constructed that there is an air cushion between those spread finger bands and the corset skirt. How would your daughter at school like to straighten up and lean back against that air cushion as the day advances and she droops? Why not choose one for her Xmas gift, possibly style No. 338, at $3. She will straighten up, walk and sit erect, and gain flesh. Try it, at............ $3

Nemo Back Resting Corset, style No. 350, for the tall slender woman with a weak back, medium high bust. Think what a relief an air cushion is to a tired, aching body. It will be just as comfortable to the tired, aching muscles in the small of your back—and the spread finger bands will support the back. Try one and see how your backache will disappear and you will gain flesh too, sizes 20 to 30, at $3.50

Stories For Children

The Magnificent Adventure

The MAGNIFICENT ADVENTURE
EMERSON HOUGH

By EMERSON HOUGH

Author of "The Mississippi Bubble," "The Lady and the Pirate," "The Purchase Price," etc.

Illustrated. $1.35

In order to frustrate a conspiracy which Aaron Burr has entered into, Thomas Jefferson sends Captain Merriwether Lewis on an expedition of exploration through the unknown western region for the purpose of establishing a complete claim to it. Burr uses his daughter to play upon Lewis' affections, and the adventures of the expedition make up a story of great interest.

From the Housetops

From the Housetops
George Barr McCutcheon

By GEORGE BARR McCUTCHEON

Author of "Graustark," "The Hollow of Her Hand," "Brewster's Millions," etc.

Illustrated. $1.40

The book will inspire the reader to a discussion of a number of important questions of modern life. A novel of New York, the modern Bagdad of wealth, luxury, ambition and reckless, restless passion. The story is built about this startling question: Has society the right to take the final step in alleviating hopeless human suffering?

Slaves of Freedom

SLAVES OF FREEDOM
BY CONINGSBY DAWSON

By CONINGSBY DAWSON

Author of "The Garden Without Walls," "The Raft," etc.

$1.40

The slaves of freedom are the people who can but won't marry—the entirely "moral" people, both men and women, who think that they can get more out of life by remaining single. The setting is New York and London, with an episode in France; the hero, a young Englishman; the heroine, a typical "Helen of Fifth Avenue."

The Heart of Rachael

THE HEART OF RACHAEL
BY KATHLEEN NORRIS

By KATHLEEN NORRIS

$1.35

A beautiful girl possessed of potential strength of character marries and faces some of the hardest problems that a woman is called upon to solve. All the elements of romance and of tragedy are in the situation, and it is the final wresting of victory from a cumulation of errors and entanglements that shows the growth in strength and beauty of Rachael's soul.

Dabney Todd

DABNEY TODD
F.N.WESTCOTT

A Blood Relation to "David Harum" and "Hopsey Burke."

By F. N. WESTCOTT

$1.35

Like his brother, who wrote "David Harum," the author of this book lived in the "lake country" of New York state, and the faithful characterizations, quaint aphorisms and wealth of sympathy put into the mouth of Dabney Todd portray with accuracy the sayings and doings of communities that are sufficient unto themselves.

The Trufflers

THE TRUFFLERS
SAMUEL MERWIN

By SAMUEL MERWIN

Illustrated. $1.35

A novel of the New York Latin Quarter, the bachelor girls and bachelor men who seek only the "truffles," the delicacies and pleasures, in the sober game of life, and yet must find that life is a discipline after all. A drama of the conflict of new ideas against old, freedom against restraint, and beauty against duty.

Mary-'Gusta

MARY-GUSTA
JOSEPH C. LINCOLN

By JOSEPH C. LINCOLN

Author of "Thankful's Inheritance," "The Rise of Roscoe Paine," "The Postmaster," etc.

Illustrated. $1.35

A little girl who mothers her two Cape Cod guardians, in spite of their attempts to bring her up. When Mary-'Gusta is left an orphan, two old sea captains assume charge of her, and the story of their efforts to care for her, and her absolute control of the situation, is told in a genial, whimsical fashion.

Marion

By the author of "ME"

$1.35

This is the story of a girl who goes far—Montreal, Boston, New York, "Bohemia," clinging to her ideals as artist, model, friend of men, wife of one. The story is amusing, tragic, thrilling, yet realistic, and holds the reader's interest to the end. Every woman will wonder what she would do in Marion's place.

The Lion's Share

BY ARNOLD BENNETT
THE LION'S SHARE

By ARNOLD BENNETT

Author of "Old Wives' Tale," "Buried Alive," "Clayhanger," etc.

$1.50

Audrey Moze had an "appetite for life." She wanted the "lion's share," and she got it—in the shape of a successful violinist husband, after a series of startling experiences with suffragists, detectives, Parisian artists, musical agents and other delightful fry. A deft mixing of amusing situations and quaint characters, and a good story.

Eat and Grow Thin

EAT AND GROW THIN
THE MAHDAH MENUS
VANCE THOMPSON

By VANCE THOMPSON

Author of "Drink and Be Sober," etc.

$1.00

The Mahdah Menus, showing what the Fat Man may eat—and grow thin. Most of your friends tell you what not to eat, but this book shows how you can, little by little, shed twenty to twenty-five pounds in three months without starving or sacrificing table joys. Half menus, quarter general regimen and quarter unadulterated Vance Thompson humor.

Mr. Britling Sees It Through

MR·BRITLING SEES IT THROUGH

Author of "The Research Magnificent," "The Wife of Sir Isaac Harman," "Bealby," etc.

$1.50

The Border Legion

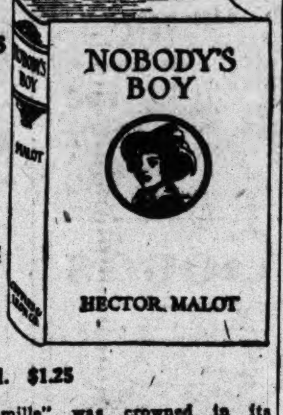
The BORDER LEGION
Zane Grey

By ZANE GREY

Author of "Light of the Western Stars," "Desert Gold," "The Rainbow Trail," etc.

Illustrated. $1.35

Nobody's Boy (Sans Famille)



By HECTOR MALOT

Translated by Florence Crewe-Jones.

Illustrated. $1.25

"Sans Famille" was crowned in its early popularity as a literary classic by L'Academie Francaise. The homeless boy's experience is a human document that grips the interest of young and old, and is justly known as one of the supreme heart-interest stories of the world—an ennobling example of boy character.

The Rising Tide

THE RISING TIDE
A Novel by Margaret Deland

By MARGARET DELAND

Author of "Old Chester Tales," "Dr. Lavendar's People," "The Iron Woman," etc.

$1.35

Frederica Payton hated the old conventions, her mother's tidy-surrounded existence and the boredom of a merely fashionable life. Perhaps she did take an impish delight in shocking the easily shockable. But no matter what "Freddy" did, her circle could never forget her, she was "as stimulating as a cocktail," as one of her friends declared.

Rainbow's End

RAINBOW'S END
REX BEACH

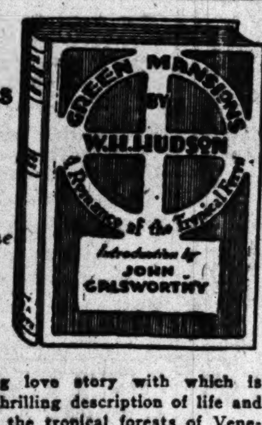
By REX BEACH

Author of "Heart of the Sunset," "The Net," "The Spoilers," etc.

Illustrated. $1.35

A romance of the Cuban War of Independence. All the flavor of Cuba, its struggles against the Spaniards, the cruelty and bravery of the contest, a lost treasure, Southern beauty and love, fighting and filibustering and an Irish-American hero who was not the kind of man to leave any of it untasted.

Green Mansions



GREEN MANSIONS
BY W.H.HUDSON
A Romance of the Tropical Forest
Introduction by JOHN GALSWORTHY

By W. H. HUDSON

Author of "Tales of the Pampas," "Birds and Man," etc.

$1.50

A charming love story with which is combined a thrilling description of life and adventure in the tropical forests of Venezuela. A story exceptionally rich in fascinating interest, even to the inveterate novel reader. The love story it contains has as much lyric nobility as any that history and imagined romance has given us.

The Wall Street Girl

THE WALL STREET GIRL

By FREDERICK ORIN BARTLETT

Illustrated. $1.35

Tish

TISH
By Mary Roberts Rinehart

By MARY ROBERTS RINEHART

Author of "K," "Street of the Seven Stars," "When a Man Marries," etc.

Nan of Music Mountain

NAN OF MUSIC MOUNTAIN
FRANK H. SPEARMAN
CHARLES SCRIBNER'S SONS

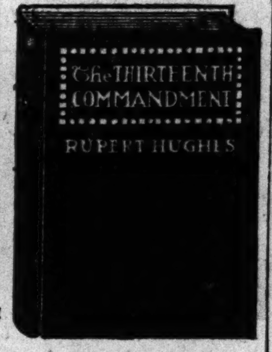
By FRANK H. SPEARMAN

Author of "Whispering Smith," "Robert Kimberly," "Merrilie Dawes," etc.

Illustrated. $1.35

Nan is a member of an outlaw family—a band whose daring exploits of lawlessness have held all the valley in subjection and terror for years. Henry de Spain is given a position in order that he may subdue the Morgans. The intensely exciting events that follow, interwoven with his growing love for Nan, make a romance of interest.

The Thirteenth Commandment



By RUPERT HUGHES

Author of "What Will People Say," "Empty Pockets," Clipped Wings," etc.

Illustrated. $1.40

The eternal conflict between finance and romance is the subject of this new novel. An absorbing story of a beautiful, lovable, modern girl, who, having discovered how often the checkbook's groan drowns the love-song, made up her mind to give up love or make money herself.

Contraband

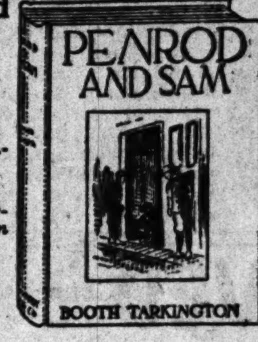
"CONTRABAND" by Randall Parrish

By RANDALL PARRISH

Author of "Beyond the Frontier," "The Red Mist," "My Lady of the South," etc.

Illustrated. $1.35

Penrod and Sam



By BOOTH TARKINGTON

Author of "The Gentleman From Indiana," "The Turmoil," "Penrod," etc.

Illustrated. $1.35

Penrod is the same young irrepressible—he has not changed a hair. The reader becomes acquainted with a remarkable cat, "Part panther or something." There is a severe outbreak of cavalry in the Schofield neighborhood, an outbreak which rivals the great war. At times Penrod's heart is embittered with critical disapproval of the Creator's methods—but why go on?

The Romance of a Christmas Card

The ROMANCE of a CHRISTMAS CARD
KATE DOUGLAS WIGGIN

By KATE DOUGLAS WIGGIN

Author of Mother Carey's Chickens," "Birds Christmas Carol," Rebecca of Sunnybrook Farm."

Illustrated. $1.00

The story of two young men who went forth from their village, one to prosper, one to fall upon evil ways. Two Christmas cards written by the minister's wife brought them back to the village, one to find peace and new courage in the scenes of his childhood, the other to take up a charming romance that his departure had broken off.

The Mark of the Beast

THE MARK OF THE BEAST

The World for Sale

The World for Sale
Gilbert Parker

By SIR GILBERT PARKER

Author of "The Right of Way," "Seats of the Mighty," "Judgment House," etc.

$1.35

A vivid story of the Canadian Northwest. In the midst of a northern world just emerging from a lawless frontier existence, is the heroine—southern and of the world's oldest race—a gypsy. When the builder held her in his arms after saving her life he knew that he would be willing to sell the world for her.

Lady Connie

LADY CONNIE
Mrs. HUMPHRY WARD

By MRS. HUMPHRY WARD

Author of "Eleanor," "Eltham House," "Delia Blanchflower," etc.

Illustrated. $1.50

Consumed with jealousy because Lady Connie, the girl he loves, has danced all evening with Otto, a young Polish musician, Douglass Falloden subjects his rival to a hazing, with disastrous results to the musician's career. Around these three the author has woven a novel dealing with the passions, longings and bigness of the human heart.

Cappy Ricks

CAPPY RICKS
OR THE SUBJUGATION OF MATT PEASLEY
PETER B. KYNE

By PETER B. KYNE

Author of "The Long Chance."

Illustrated. $1.35

The style of this book is crisp and racy, its humor persuasive, and its characters alive and human. We read with absorbed interest. It is not a sea story. It is about men who make the sea pay, of the big navigation companies, of the fortunes that are made and lost in charters. A book that will appeal to men.

The Wonderful Year

THE WONDERFUL YEAR
William J. Locke

By WILLIAM J. LOCKE

Author of "Jaffery," "The Beloved Vagabond," "The Fortunate Youth," etc.

$1.40

A likable young Englishman, a whimsical Parisian philosopher, a dashing American girl, and a brave little daughter of France combine to make "The Wonderful Year" an engaging period. It is a book that is full of the joy of youth, the thrill of adventure, and the spell of romance.

The Little Hunchback Zia

THE LITTLE HUNCHBACK ZIA
FRANCES HODGSON BURNETT

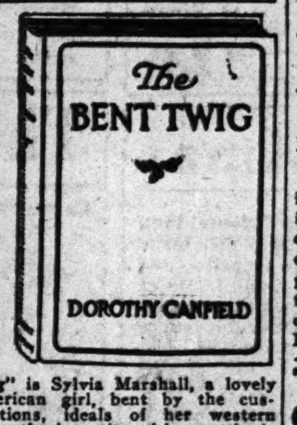
By FRANCES HODGSON BURNETT

Author of "The Lost Prince," "T. Tembarom," "The Secret Garden," etc.

Illustrated. 75c

An exquisitely written story of the birth of the Christ-child and the restoration of the little hunchback Zia to his birthright. Zia is an orphan living with an old woman who makes him beg. How he is driven forth an outcast, how he falls in with Joseph and Mary and later with the Christ-child, and what happens is told with a very sympathetic pen.

The Bent Twig



By DOROTHY CANFIELD

Author of "The Squirrel Cage," "Hillsboro People," etc.

$1.35

The "Twig" is Sylvia Marshall, a lovely typical American girl, bent by the customs, traditions, ideals of her western home, and by the integrity of her mother's character. The story is of the influence on Sylvia of her mother's personality, of her girlhood environment and of her personal beauty and charm.

When a Man's a Man

WHEN A MAN'S A MAN
HAROLD BELL WRIGHT

By HAROLD BELL WRIGHT

Author of "Barbara Worth," "Shepherd of the Hills," Eyes of the World."

Illustrated. $1.35

Book Section on Main Floor.

Probably the most generally convenient bookstore in the city, near to all principal Surface and "L" car lines, also very handy for the business man, because of its location near the big office buildings and wholesale district.

Just David

Just David
By Eleanor H. Porter

By ELEANOR H. PORTER

Author of "Pollyanna," "Miss Billy," "The Story of Marco," etc.

Illustrated. $1.25

How David brought true happiness to the matter-of-fact farmer folk among whom his father's death had thrown him, how he helped along a beautiful love affair, how he made his great sacrifice and received his great reward, are all told in a way that really makes you feel as though the story was part of your own life.

The Career of Katherine Bush

The CAREER of KATHERINE BUSH
ELINOR GLYN

By ELINOR GLYN

Author of "The Reason Why," "Halcyone," "The Man and the Moment," etc.

Illustrated. $1.30

An attractive stenographer in London is dissatisfied with her middle-class life and carefully works out a plan for a career. She proceeds coolly and deliberately, watches, studies, absorbs, and then climbs step by step through the different social grades of England by sheer force of her self-reliance, brain and strong character.

The Daredevil

The Daredevil

By MARIA THOMPSON DAVIESS

Author of "The Melting of Molly," "Over Paradise Ridge," etc.

$1.35

Her father had called her "Daredevil" [illegible] her tresses clipped, the apparel of a young man secured—and Roberta, the [illegible] becomes Robert Carruthers, a gay, [illegible] hearted masquerader. And then romance, intrigue, plots of enemies, dancing under the Southern moon, rides in the mountains, and in the end love that comes in the guise of friendship.

Georgina of the Rainbows

GEORGINA OF THE RAINBOWS
ANNIE FELLOWS JOHNSTON

By ANNIE FELLOWS JOHNSTON

Author of "The Little Colonel," "The Desert of Waiting," "Two Little Knights of Kentucky," etc.

$1.25

The strangest chapters in life are enacted in the presence of unknowing childhood, and often it is given to some blessed child of hope, faith and cheer to hold together that which is good and [illegible] Georgina, peering through the prisms of life, sees the rainbows and all else that is lovable and worth while.

A REAL OPPORTUNITY. THE REQUIREMENTS ARE A LITTLE UNUSUAL, BUT SO IS THE JOB, AND THE MAN WHO CAN MEASURE UP TO IT WILL HAVE AN OPPORTUNITY FOR DEVELOPMENT LIMITED ONLY BY HIS OWN ABILITY. THE MAN WE ARE LOOKING FOR SHOULD BE A JUDGE OF HUMAN NATURE, ACQUIRED BY PERSONAL SALES EXPERIENCE. HE MUST ALSO HAVE HAD OFFICE EXPERIENCE, INCLUDING PREFERABLY SALES CORRESPONDENCE WORK. HE MUST NOT HAVE SO EXALTED AN OPINION OF HIMSELF BUT THAT HE WILL BE WILLING TO TAKE INSTRUCTIONS AND LEARN THE DETAILS BY ACTUAL DIGGING, WHICH MAY PREPARE HIM FOR THE MORE IMPORTANT DUTIES AHEAD. MUST POSSESS TACT AND THE FACULTY OF HANDLING MEN. HE WILL PROBABLY BE FROM 25 TO 35 YEARS OF AGE. TO RECEIVE CONSIDERATION YOUR APPLICATION MUST CONTAIN COMPLETE INFORMATION THAT WILL ENABLE US TO JUDGE YOUR ABILITY AND FITNESS FOR THE POSITION AND SALARY COMMENSURATE WITH ABILITY. ADDRESS P X 93, TRIBUNE.

A Young Man Wanted,

18 to 20 years old; must be clean cut, ambitious and willing to begin at the bottom in the advertising business; prefer typist who can operate Oliver machine; only written applications received; give age, extent of education, salary expected, and business experience in full. D. DE VELIN, Chicago Car Advertising Co., 105 S. La Salle-st.

ABILITY WANTED.

Wholesale house of national reputation has positions for young men between the ages of 17 and 20, affording an opportunity to learn a worth while business. Applicants should have complete high school education, good home environment, and be of American birth. They should be virile, energetic, cultured, and have the courage, capacity, and personality to do big things after we teach them how. We want boys who think, who have vision, imagination, originality. After their training periods we can use them at sales, accounting, or other departments of our business, here or in branch houses. We are big enough to give scope to all the ability that any one can produce for us. It costs a lot in time and money to develop a high caliber man; to go into this you must be willing to accept a very moderate salary for an extended period, sharing with us the investment in your future. Address T L 321, Tribune.

A REAL OPPORTUNITY.

THE REQUIREMENTS ARE A LITTLE UNUSUAL, BUT SO IS THE JOB, AND THE MAN WHO CAN MEASURE UP TO IT WILL HAVE AN OPPORTUNITY FOR DEVELOPMENT LIMITED ONLY BY HIS OWN ABILITY. THE MAN WE ARE LOOKING FOR SHOULD BE A JUDGE OF HUMAN NATURE, ACQUIRED BY PERSONAL SALES EXPERIENCE. HE MUST ALSO HAVE HAD OFFICE EXPERIENCE, INCLUDING PREFERABLY SALES CORRESPONDENCE WORK. HE MUST NOT HAVE SO EXALTED AN OPINION OF HIMSELF BUT THAT HE WILL BE WILLING TO TAKE INSTRUCTIONS AND LEARN THE DETAILS BY ACTUAL DIGGING, WHICH MAY PREPARE HIM FOR THE MORE IMPORTANT DUTIES AHEAD. MUST POSSESS TACT AND THE FACULTY OF HANDLING MEN. HE WILL PROBABLY BE FROM 25 TO 35 YEARS OF AGE. TO RECEIVE CONSIDERATION YOUR APPLICATION MUST CONTAIN COMPLETE INFORMATION THAT WILL ENABLE US TO JUDGE YOUR ABILITY AND FITNESS FOR THE POSITION AND SALARY COMMENSURATE WITH ABILITY. ADDRESS P X 75, TRIBUNE.

ADVERTISING—MAN—A REAL ADVERtising man to take charge of Advertising Department of one of fastest growing organizations in America. Must be a man of force and ideas, one who does not feel he is too big for details and one who will not permit himself to be buried by them. We publish several house organs, use general publicity, and get out great quantities of direct literature.

The man we want knows enough about printing and engraving to make attractive layouts—not necessary that he be a finished artist—specify his own type faces and be independent of printer for pleasing effects. Should be good copy writer and an organizer and systematizer. This is largely a creative position and, all things being equal, we will favor the man who has specialized in direct work and can submit best samples of his own creative ability. Show by your letter and samples you are the man we want. Answer quick, stating age, experience, reference, salary expected, send photograph, and say how quickly you can report for work. Samples will be returned if desired.

Address Sales Manager, P. O. Box 814, Indianapolis, Indiana.

ASSISTANT TO SALES MANAGER WANTed—Man who has been a salesman and who has never had the management of sales help will not do for this position. The man we seek must be one who has actually taken men from other walks of life and developed them as salesmen, and who understands fully the responsibilities attached to a position of this kind. We prefer a married man between 30 and 35 who would like to make a connection that is permanent and will later lead to sales managership of one of the principal branches. Our business is selling food products direct to the housewife. Satisfactory salary arrangement will be made with the right man who can furnish unquestionable references and a personal bond. YOUNG WOMEN SEEKING EMPLOYMENT.

OPERATORS WANTED.

Rapid growth of business necessitates employment of larger force of young women operators at telephone exchanges, thus offering opportunities of immediate employment with good chance of advancement.

Operators are paid at the rate of thirteen cents (13c) per hour for the first month (while learning the work), fourteen cents (14c) for the second and third months, fifteen cents (15c) for the fourth, fifth, and sixth months, and so on up to and including twenty-four cents (24c) per hour for those who remain operators; further, exceptional opportunity exists for those who show marked ability.

In addition to this luncheon is provided free of expense to students and operators.

The pleasant surroundings, ideal working conditions, attractive luncheon and rest rooms, make an operator's position highly desirable.

Young women over 16 yrs. of age apply at any of our offices, or at Room 1, 111 No. Franklin-st.

Last Excursion for Homeseekers

Tuesday, December 12th, 1916.

HERE IS SOMETHING to think about between now and Tuesday morning.

THIS IS THE LAST CHANCE to get a reduced excursion rate to look at land in Michigan in 1916. No excursion rate will be given after this until next March.

MORE IMPORTANT, however, is the fact that the price of the land will go up another notch in the spring of 1917, as it does every year. Therefore, if you buy your land now you will save money.

NOW THAT YULETIDE THOUGHTS turn to family ties, bear in mind that the best Xmas gift one could make for his family, as well as himself, is the purchase of a piece of land in our part of Michigan's Fruit and Clover Belt. With my contract is an insurance feature that costs nothing extra and is a protection to the wife and heirs. In case of death, after part is paid for, the land will be deeded to the purchaser's family without further payments.

WHEN YOU WAKE UP New Year's morning, and take an inventory, you will think a lot more of yourself if you know you have started the purchase of a piece of land that stands for your independence and that of your family in years to come.

THE EVER PRESENT uncertainty of employment and especially now when Europe is so unsettled, does not bother the farmers. A good piece of land never stops working for you. It is constantly rising in value and its products each year command a higher premium. There is every reason why a man who knows something about farming and is not getting ahead in the city should make the effort to acquire a farm. By my easy payment plan you can buy 40 acres, paying $25 to $50 down and $7 to $10 per month. Price of land is $15 to $25 per acre. Many a man has told me that he would never have had anything if he had not started buying a piece of land from me in this way. When you realize that one year's crop of potatoes on from 7 to 10 acres of land has frequently paid for the cost of an entire 40 acres the first season, you will see that it is well worth while and know why I have made so many sales during the year 1916.

AN ADVERTISEMENT is necessarily limited, but for descriptions of the lands, transportation, markets, and soils, water supply, climatic, educational, social, religious, and industrial conditions, we have compiled a large 72 page book with 115 illustrations. Send for this book or call for it and get a large map and at the same time see samples of 1916 crops on display in my office. Also see many stereopticon views, showing all the features of interest to one who is interested in purchasing land in the Swigart Tract of Manistee, Mason, Lake, and Wexford counties.

MY LAST EXCURSION for the year 1916 will be Tuesday, December 12th, over the P. M. R. R., leaving my Chicago offices at 11:20 a. m. There is no snow now and the conditions are favorable for examining land in our district nine seasons out of ten until Xmas. Round trip excursion rate $12.50, including railroad fare, meals, and lodging. You return to Chicago Friday, December 15th, at 7:00 a. m. Automobiles and guides free. Offices remain open Monday evening and Saturday afternoon.

TO MAKE MONEY, AN OPPORTUNITY MUST BE PROVIDED.

Here it is, and the proposition will bear the minutest investigation. A Health Resort, already making money, within an hour's steam ride of Milwaukee and three of Chicago, needs more capital to quadruple its earning capacity.

Nature has been very kind in selecting the spot for this delightful resort, the buildings, perched high, overlooking a charming lake three miles long and two miles wide, in a park of forty acres, surrounded by nature's most lavish display of trees, flowers, and plants. To man with capital and rare executive business ability there offers in this proposition big returns on his investment as well as extreme pride in being one of the two parties conducting so well equipped a resort for the care of the better class of invalids. Strictest investigation courted by either man or woman with ready capital. No brokers will receive any attention. Address F L 18, Tribune.

Hog market at Chicago yesterday opened 5@10c higher, advanced [illegible] higher than on Friday and reacted [illegible] in the session, closing with all the gain eliminated. Receipts were posted at [illegible],000 head early, but later were reduced to 23,000 head. Trade was active and only about 3,500 remained unsold at the finish. Best hogs sold at $10.15 and the bulk at $9.45@10.00. Pigs were in good demand and 10@15c higher, with the bulk of the choice shippers at $8.25@8.75.

Final prices made hogs mostly [illegible] higher than a week ago, with some of the lightweights showing a gain of 40@50c. Pigs were 40@50c higher for the week. The average price of the 295,000 hogs here this week was $9.75, the highest since the last week of October and compared with $9.55 last week. Total receipts this week were the largest reported since last January.

Hog purchases for the day: Armour & Co., 3,200; Swift & Co., 2,000; Wilson & Co., 1,000; Morris & Co., 2,500; Hammond, 1,300; Western Packing Co., 1,700; Boyd-Lunham, 800; Independent Packing Co., 1,600; Brennan Packing Co., 1,500; Roberts & Oake, 1,300; Miller & Hart, [illegible]; butchers, 1,500; shippers, 8,000; total, 26,800; left over, 3,500.

CATTLE.

Beef steer values at Chicago this week closed unchanged to 15@25c lower than a week ago, the loss being shown by intermediate grades of light and medium weight animals. Earlier in the week, prime beeves sold at $12.50, the highest open market price ever paid here for strictly market cattle. Some reached $12.60, but they were rejects from the fat stock show. Receipts for the week showed a substantial increase, and the trade was of brisk character, with the bulk of the fat steers selling at $8.00@11.[illegible] Cows and heifers closed 10@25c higher than a week ago, and veal calves declined [illegible] Stock and feeding steers finished the week at an advance of 25@35c.

SHEEP.

Highest prices ever known for the season were made by sheep and lambs at Chicago this week, the close being at net gains of 25@50c from last week's closing figures. The high values were made in the face of sharply increased receipts, which indicated the breadth of the demand. Lambs topped at $13.00, selling $3.50 a hundred pounds higher than a year ago. Sheep sold up to $9.[illegible] which compared with an extreme price of $6.75 a year ago. All offerings were well taken, and the market closed in a healthy condition, although it is expected the high prices will attract much more liberal marketings, which may result in reactions in values.
